PREFACE.

In undertaking the publication of the work herewith presented, the present writer was impelled thereto by a desire, which he had long cherished, to prepare, or cause to be prepared, a suitable memorial of his own ancestry in the Boardman line, and also by a wish to introduce such facts in connection with collateral and allied lines as would make the volume more complete in a genealogical sense, and more readable and instructive to those interested in family and local history. He had gathered a mass of material which would be valuable in making up a reliable record of his Boardman ancestry, including not only the vital statistics connected therewith, but also biographical sketches, letters, old account books, newspaper cuttings, and views, such as paintings, drawings, and photographs, which would be useful in illustrating such a work. In fact, he had compiled much of this material before he contemplated the publication of a genealogy; and though, as his interest increased, there were circumstances which greatly encouraged him thereto, his ill health and lack of experience in such matters forbade his attempting a task which had become formidable. He was therefore glad to find one so amply qualified to perform the work, and give to the public on a larger plan a suitable history of the family.

Miss Goldthwaite, in the meantime, had become interested on her own account in the collection of material regarding the Boardman family. The results of her researches, both in England and this country, were such that the writer gladly assumed the expense involved in her investigations and in the compilation and publication of this volume. Miss Goldthwaite has made a careful study of the original records for information concerning the earlier generations of the family, has collected with great labor, by correspondence and visits to different town registries, material relating to its various branches, and has compiled the entire volume. To her the acknowledgments of the writer are rendered and the thanks of the family are due.

No expense has been spared in the mechanical execution of the work, to which the publisher has given much time and attention, for it seemed to be a service worthy of being well done.

The Boardman Genealogy is respectfully submitted to the family and friends in the hope that it will be productive of good to some degree commensurate with the expense and labor involved in its preparation.

William F. J. Boardman.

HARTFORD, CONN., November 20, 1895.

INTRODUCTION

It is now nearly ten years since the work was begun which, far from my former intention, has ended in compiling this Genealogy. The circumstances which first led to the investigations whose results are here told, and the history of the work to the present time may be briefly given.

The account of Captain Israel Boardman, my great-grandfather, furnished by his descendants, and printed on page 261 of Hinman's "Genealogy of the Puritans," embodies the tradition in regard to him accepted by his family. It was supposed by them that he was their first Boardman ancestor in America, that he was born in England, and that they therefore had no relationship to other families of their name in this country. Becoming for the first time interested in genealogical study in the winter of 1883-4, I then began tracing, during intervals of leisure, my various lines of ancestry, but always omitted searching for my mother's Boardman line, feeling quite confident of already knowing it as far back as it extended on this side of the water. After about two years spent in collecting other records, it was suggested to me that the family tradition of Captain Israel's birth in England might be after all incorrect, and I was advised to see if something regarding him might not be found in the land records of Wethersfield, the original home of the Boardman family in early Connecticut. Such a search proved immediately successful, the records disclosing a deed of Israel Boardman of Stamford (unmistakably Captain Israel), in which he sold to his brother Elisha his right to the homestead in Wethersfield, thus proving him to have been a great-grandson of Samuel Boreman, the founder of the Wethersfield family.

Such a complete reversal of former beliefs, and the disclosure thus made of ancestry before entirely unsuspected,* had the effect of stimulating very greatly my interest in genealogical work, especially in this direction, and having found without difficulty a clear record of Boardman descent in this country, the old letter of Julian Boreman printed by Hinman, with its evidence as to the home of the family in England, next strongly attracted my attention. With the object of seeing for myself the partly obliterated name of the home which it contained, I introduced myself to Mr. W. F. J. Boardman, who allowed me to look at the original, and I afterwards spent some time in study of English maps, topographical dictionaries, and county histories, in the effort to find a clue leading to the discovery of this lost town. When later the time came to carry out a long-cherished plan of travel abroad, I embraced the opportunity afforded by a stay in England, by then attempting to solve the question in which I had now become deeply interested, with the result told in these pages.

* The mistaken tradition as to Captain Israel is partly to be accounted for by the fact that he lost his father when only five weeks old, and his mother at

The interest and value of the material there secured seemed to demand that it should be collected and preserved for the family by putting it in print, and that only was the first intention. The plan grew, however, first to that of including with the English records, an account of the emigrant ancestor during his life in New England, with perhaps a genealogy of two or three generations of his immediate descendants. It was next proposed to further extend the work by bringing down to the present time the lines of those who had been most interested in what had been so far accomplished. Such partial accounts of a family having always seemed to me most unsatisfactory, I determined to include all the descendants obtainable, or none, and with this end in view addressed written inquiries to a large number of Boardmans found the age of five years. He was brought up in Stamford, Conn., at a distance from all his Boardman relatives, and he himself died when his own children were too young to learn from him the little he knew of his family. As he had been a sea captain, sailing between New England and the old country, his children perhaps naturally inferred that he was born across the water. An exactly similar error has been found among the descendants of Captain Offin Boardman of Newburyport, who is well known to have been of the family of Thomas Boreman of Ipswich. One of these wrote in answer to inquiries, "Offin Boardman came from the West of England to Ipswich, Mass.; afterwards moved to Newburyport, etc. This Captain Offin, it may be noted, also died when his youngest son, ancestor of the writer of this letter, was an infant. Other instances of erroneous tradition of the same kind are numerous in letters received while compiling this genealogy.

in city directories from different parts of the United States. Out of 279 persons so addressed, 71 replied, 32 were not found, having changed their residence or died, and the remaining 176 sent no answer. The identity of some of these last was afterwards incidentally discovered through other correspondence; many of them, no doubt, are of the Ipswich or Cambridge family, but there must in any case be a more or less numerous remainder, whom some little interest and effort on their part would have enabled me to connect with the Wethersfield family. It has been found, however, that most of the representatives of missing families of Boardmans are not dwellers in cities and larger towns, but in smaller rural communities, where they are out of reach of such attempts to find them. These missing ones are, almost without exception, descendants of Boardmans of the fifth or later generations, who, in the general emigration from New England, which took place after the close of the Revolutionary War, removed first into some part of New York State, then later, farther on in the same State, or to the still more remote West, such emigrants seldom remaining permanently in the first or even second location chosen. Records of every kind were rare in the new settlements (in New York the law requiring registration of deeds was not passed till 1827), and little help is to be found in them; it is only after long waiting and persevering inquiry in many directions, that here and there from a distant part of the country members of some lost family will now and then come to light. Several such families remain to be traced, but the chances of their discovery are, with every change of residence, and every year's distance from the time of the family's first remove, fast diminishing through the death of those whose recollection or tradition might supply the information needed for their identification.

The account of the Ipswich family, descendants of Thomas Boreman, is here limited, as will be seen, to five generations in New England. A full genealogy of that family, for which there is excellent material, should be written. It is greatly to be desired that the full account here furnished of their ancestry in England may prove the incentive to some descendant to go on with the work thus begun, and complete its history to the present day. Many of this branch take an intelligent interest in this subject, and are able to furnish valuable records as to their own ancestry. I have tried by a somewhat wide correspondence to find one of Ipswich descent whose interest extended to the family as a whole, but so far in vain. Till such a future historian shall appear this book will be the nearest approach to a full history of the Ipswich branch, and by the use of the blank pages inserted for the records of particular lines, will form in the case of each a complete family history.

Owing to the gradual change which the name has undergone in America, from Boreman or Borman, through Bordman, to Boardman, I have been somewhat embarrassed in regard to the spelling to be adopted. The first ancestor could on no account be named Samuel Bordman or Boardman, neither could the original spelling be applied to a descendant of the present day. The plan at length decided upon has been, to give to the first two generations the name Boreman, to the third and fourth Bordman, and Boardman to the remainder. These spellings, while not always accurate as regards the form of the name used through life by each individual (the same person in many instances having employed each of the three at succeeding periods), are in the main correct, coinciding thus most nearly with the times when such forms were customary.

A plan now often employed in the arrangement of families in a genealogy, would in the present case have divided the descendants of Samuel Boreman into five groups, according to their descent from one or another of his five sons who left issue, each group to be treated as distinct from the rest. While this method has some considerations in its favor, I have not thought best to make use of it, feeling strongly the wish that all Samuel Boreman's descendants should appear, as they really are, of one family, not as a collection of tribes having him as their common head.

In order to relieve the barrenness which most readers would find in mere genealogical lists of names and dates, as well as for the purpose of preserving valuable family history, an effort was made in the case of each family to obtain a brief statement of interesting facts in the lives of individual members; the accounts here given are the result of such effort; that many equally worthy of special mention have not received it, is due to the fact that no one was found ready to furnish such information.

The method of numbering which has been adopted is the simplest possible, each individual having one number by which he may be traced backward or forward. When that number is fol-

In the summer of 1886, chiefly through the influence and exertions of Rev. Dr. Samuel W. Boardman, then of New Jersey, there was formed in Hartford a "Boardman Family Association." Mr. William Boardman of Hartford, since deceased, was chosen its president, and there were elected also several vice-presidents, a treasurer, secretary, executive committee, etc. Meetings of the Association were held for three successive summers. Owing to the fact that the Boardman family is now widely scattered, making it impossible for many who wished it to be present, as well as to other causes, these meetings were enjoyed by only a comparative few, and came to a close when the removal of Dr. Boardman to Tennessee prevented his presence at these gatherings.

My indebtedness to those by whose assistance I have profited in preparing the Genealogy has been for the most part acknowledged in making use of the information so obtained. To these and to all others who have in any way aided, I would here return my thanks, counting as not the least among the latter those members of the family who by their prompt replies to inquiries, their cordial expressions of interest, and their valuable help in gathering complete records of their own branches, have given needed encouragement and indispensable assistance to this work.

DISCOVERY OF THE HOME IN ENGLAND.

There is in existence, and in a fair state of preservation, a letter, now more than 250 years old, written to Samuel Boreman of Wethersfield, ancestor of the Connecticut Boardmans, by his mother in England some three or four years after he had left home — the only letter of hers that has come down to us. Samuel Boreman lived thirty years after receiving it, and from him it has been handed down through generation after generation of his descendants in Wethersfield, till it is now in the possession of one who is the eighth in succession in a direct line from the writer.* The letter is as follows:—

Good Sonne

In earlier days, when little attention was given to family history, this Letter, always carefully preserved, seems to have been valued chiefly as a relic, and as such was passed on from father to son, with no thought, except perhaps an extremely vague one, of the important evidence as to the family home which it contained. In the beginning, the situation of that home must have been well understood, and no light on that point was needed; but, as time passed, and new generations came on the stage, such knowledge gradually grew dim. England came to seem to the majority of those born here, not only a distant, but an almost unknown, country beyond the seas; there was little definite knowledge of its geography; those who made a journey thither felt that they were taking their lives in their hands, made their wills before their departure, and esteemed it rare good fortune if they returned in safety. Even at the present day, one need not be very old to be able to call to mind the time when the remains of some such feeling still existed; when one who had taken such a journey was a local celebrity, especially in places distant from the great towns; and as to knowledge of England's geography, how many are there now who could tell without recourse to a map the locations of the different English counties, or of very many of the important towns, aside from those of such well-known names as London, Liverpool, and a few others? It is not, therefore, surprising, that in those earlier times little or no speculation concerning the home from which the Letter came seems to have been indulged in; if curiosity as to its situation was ever by chance aroused, it appears never to have been sufficient to overcome the difficulties in the way of a search for it — difficulties greatly increased by the fading of the ink, which in time rendered the name of the town undecipherable.

In the year 1853 Mr. Hinman issued his "Catalogue of the First Puritan Settlers of the Colony of Connecticut," for which he was furnished by various members of the Boardman family in Hartford and Wethersfield with many valuable records, rendering the book, so far as that family is concerned, notwithstanding a few, probably unavoidable, mistakes, the fullest and most reliable account of the Connecticut Boardmans hitherto published. In that account Mr. Hinman printed the Letter, lent him for the purpose by Mr. William Boardman, its then owner; this was its first appearance in type. Mr. Hinman enumerated the facts there shown in regard to Samuel Boreman's family, remarking that "few of the numerous descendants of the first settlers of New England have preserved as much evidence of their family in England as is contained in this letter of the Boreman family, in this well-written (old red) letter of Julian Boreman, the mother of the Boremans in Connecticut." He adds, "The place where dated cannot be deciphered, but it is evidently written in England," and he prints the name of the town "Obrydon?".

About ten years later, Manly B. Boardman, then of New York city, became greatly interested in the history of the family. He was still young, and possessed a large fund of energy, combined with enthusiasm and thorough business habits, all which he brought to bear on the work which he then undertook, of preparing a Boardman genealogy. He obtained from various town clerks, at considerable expense, copies of a large number of town records relating to families of the name, and was indefatigable in making inquiries as to the descent of every Boardman of whom he could in any way hear. The records which he thus collected have been of great value in preparing the present Genealogy, containing, as they do, information given by many now long since dead, which it would be impossible at this day to replace. Not content with researches at home, Mr. Boardman set his heart on finding the place in England where the letter was written. This Letter he had never then seen, except as printed in Hinman, but he now took means to do so, and it was for a time entrusted to his keeping, during which, with the owner's permission, he made a facsimile copy of it. After then carefully studying lists of all towns and parishes in England, and selecting those whose termination corresponded to the final letters of the town of the Letter, he sent to each of them an inquiry for the records desired, accompanied by a facsimile. Fortunately the names of places ending in eydon or rydon, the only letters still decipherable, are not numerous in England, and except that the same name often occurs in different counties, the number of such would be small. Mr. Boardman's list seems to have included several Cleydons, Heydons, and Pleydons, a village called Clayhidon in Devonshire, and possibly some others.* In the various answers received, there was but one instance where the name Boreman was reported to be found, that from Clayhidon in Devonshire, where it existed with the spelling Bowerman,† but did not appear in the Parish Register until 1695. Mr. Boardman's attempt had so far, then, proved fruitless, and just about that time the breaking out of the Civil War crowding from his mind all minor interests, no further steps in prosecuting the search were taken, and almost an entire generation passed before anything more in that direction was attempted.

* The letter was printed a few years ago in the Genealogical Register, and the town given as "Drydon."

† This family was afterwards found among others in the records at Somerset House, London. It contained a Julian and a Christopher, though not mother and son, and for a while seemed to promise a solution of the question.

It was with very little hope of better success than Mr. Boardman's, that the writer, while spending a year or more in England in 1890 and 1891, undertook to continue the search. Facilities for genealogical inquiry had greatly increased since Mr. Boardman's attempt. The treasures of the Record Office, and the wills at Somerset House in London were now freely open, and the chances of a searcher on the ground over one who must trust only to written inquiries, were greatly in favor of the former. Still there was discouragement in the recollection that what seemed a thorough search had already failed, and in the thought of the many chances that the records desired might have shared the fate of many other parish records in having been long since destroyed or lost. It was determined, however, to make the attempt, and to leave no means untried which might by any possibility assist in following out the clue in hand—a clue which consisted, it will be remembered, in a town whose name ended in eydon or rydon, a mother, Julian Boreman, with a son Christopher and five daughters of unknown names, together with the fact that the father of the family, whose name also was unknown, died in 1639 or 1640. It has been suggested that the account of this further search for Samuel Boreman's home in England, and its final discovery, might be of greater interest, if given in extracts from private letters which were written home at the time. With the hope of showing thus more clearly the circumstances attending the search, and its successive failures and encouragements, portions of these letters* are here quoted, though originally written with no thought of publication. The first allusion to the subject is found in a letter written from Paris, where the winter before visiting England was spent.

PARIS, March 11, 1890.

We have so far been too busy with sight-seeing and other pursuits to allow of my devoting much time to genealogy, but within a few days I have been looking over my papers to make ready for the campaign in England. I shall try my best to look up the records there, but I am afraid to hope for any great results. I feel all in the dark about where I am to go, or what I shall try, but hope the way will open up as I go along. I think I shall first visit the Record Office in Fetter Lane, and then the Records of Wills at Somerset House—Wouldn't it be good news if I could find what I want! but I must not expect too much.

* These letters were written to William F. J. Boardman, publisher.

LONDON, Apr. 26, 1890.

I have been putting off writing, hoping I might have some information to send. I will not, however, wait any longer, but will tell you now how I have been occupying myself in the way of research since we came to London, hoping, I must confess not very strongly, that I shall have better news to give at some future time.

Since getting settled here a little more than four weeks ago, I have lost no time in studying records of one kind or another. I went almost immediately to the Public Record Office in Fetter Lane, where I spent from three to four hours a day for about three weeks. My work there consisted in looking through many volumes of printed indexes of historical and state papers, and making a note of every Boreman alluded to. Afterwards I searched the lists of names in the "Lay Subsidies," or Records of the Exchequer, for the county of Suffolk, and the region of Cleydon near Ipswich, in particular, both before and after the date of our letter, for you know that every one has insisted that if our town is Cleydon, it must be the one in Suffolk, not only because so many of the New England emigrants came from that county, but especially because Samuel Boreman's going to Ipswich in America would indicate that he went from the region of old Ipswich. These Lay Subsidy records are on parchment, are often very much faded, and the handwriting is in the same old style as that of the letter. It is a long and slow process to go through them, and I have so far found nothing of value there. In fact, I have found but one family of Boremans in all Suffolk, and that at a long distance from Ipswich.

We have found a good free library at the Guildhall, which contains many books of value for my work, such as published church records, county histories, etc. I have spent many afternoons reading there.

Last week I sent an application for permission to search among the wills at Somerset House. You are asked to tell the object of your search, and the length of time you wish to attend. I thought I would make sure of plenty of time, and said two weeks — I received in reply permission to search six months! I have now been at work there three days, and find it such slow getting on, that I am very glad to have what seems unlimited time before me. It is a very pleasant place to work, because there are only a few persons there, and they take such friendly interest in what I am doing. Mr. Smith, the gentleman at the head of that department, has been very kind, and expressed interest in seeing the letter (photograph) of which I had spoken. I shall make, you may be sure, as thorough a search as possible, and if I get any clue, I shall follow it up by going or writing to the place indicated. I omitted to say that one of the principal gentlemen at the Record Office, to whom I showed the photograph of the Letter, said he had no doubt the name was Cleydon.* They think the same at Somerset House; but you know there are several Claydons, and after all, the family may not have always lived there, and so may not be on record in any of them.

There is no use in filling up my letter by telling of the many Boremans I have found; it will be time enough for that, when it can be proved that any of them belong to us. In my determination to leave no possible means untried, I have even written to one of the three or four Boremans I found in the London Directory, asking if he knew any one of the name who had studied the family history, to whom he could direct me. I received no answer. How long we shall stay in town will depend partly on the way my work develops. I may want to follow up some clue, and for that purpose may go at any time to another part of the country. I find record searching very different here from what it is at home; for one thing I am dealing with more remote times, and reading the old writing is much slower work. I am thankful I have only to do with English at present; some of the records at the Record Office, in abbreviated Latin, and an extremely ancient style of handwriting, it would be very difficult for me to read without special study for the purpose. I cannot of course, as at home, help myself to the record books, but must write an order in regular form, and wait till what I want is brought to me, all of which takes time. At Somerset House, there are first, long calendars to look through for the names desired; these refer to volumes of Registered Wills, for which an order must be written, when they are brought, two at a time, by attendants, the number allowed for consultation being limited to eight in a day. The books of wills are entirely of parchment, and are closed with strong metal clasps; they are so big and heavy that it takes about all one's strength to lift one. When I spoke of this place as being a pleasant one to work in, I referred only to the people there. The room itself is in a sort of basement (though entirely above ground I believe), the windows opening into an outside area lighted from above, so that artificial light is needed if the day is not bright. It is called the Literary Search Room, and I was amused to hear one of the attendants speak of the ladies who came there as the "Literary Ladies." Somerset House is an immense edifice, built around a very large court. It is filled with government offices, and what seems to me a maze of labyrinthine passages. I feel it necessary to concentrate all my thoughts on the proper directions to take when going in and out, and have more than once been obliged to ask my way.

LONDON, May 11, 1890.

I am very happy to have at last what I think is good news to write. After a thorough study of the Boreman wills and administration accounts at Somerset House, I went back yesterday to the Record Office to look over the Lay Subsidy Rolls for some other parts of England where I had just discovered that Boremans resided. I had found notice of the Administration of the estate of a Bourman in Banbury, in Oxfordshire, near which I knew one of the English Claydons was situated. I therefore called for some rolls including Banbury Hundred, and there, in the list of those taxed in 1642, I found the following : —

Thomas Bowerman, Charlbury.

John Bourman, Cleydon.

John Bourman, Banbury.

I should judge that this Cleydon was about seven miles north of Banbury, and Charlbury about twenty miles in the opposite direction. I found also probate notices of other Boremans in the same region, but not all in the same county, for Banbury, though in Oxfordshire, is very near the boundary of Northamptonshire, and Warwickshire comes quite close to it on the other side, a fact which may cause extra trouble if I have to go to the Probate Records of three different counties instead of those of Oxfordshire alone. Here are two other Probate notices relating to Boremans in the near neighborhood of Banbury.

July, 1657, Administration granted to Anne Boarman on estate of her husband, Edward Boarman, late of Tysoe, County of Warwick, deceased.

May 5, 1657, was proved the will of "Thomas Borman the elder" of Culworth, Northamptonshire.

Notice that the year when John Bourman, above, is taxed in Claydon, is 1642, about two years too late for him to be Samuel's father, who died in 1640. Also, I must tell you that I looked through two similar lists, one for 1628, and the other for 1629, in which the name Boreman does not occur in any town in the Hundred; however, the lists seem much shorter in those two earlier years, that of Claydon containing not more than four or five names, while the list for 1642 in that town is three or four times as long, showing that the latter assessment took in a greater number of people, and that the same Boremans may have been living in Claydon earlier, but for some reason did not come within the number of those then taxed. But all this is speculation, and I must wait for what the parish records may tell me.

Of course my first impulse was to go immediately to Claydon and see what was there, but I finally have decided not to be in too great haste, and to content myself here, for a few days at least, while waiting for an answer to inquiries I have just sent there, asking what records they have, in what year they begin, etc. Meantime, I have much more that I can do here. If I can find the name of Samuel's father, I shall not be content till I have traced the ancestry of that father, for some generations at least, if the thing is possible. For this purpose the abstracts of Boreman wills I have collected at Somerset House may be of great service, for they have given me a pretty clear idea of the original homes of the Boremans from the year 1450 or thereabouts. I can get more light in this direction at the Record Office, and then, too, I have good hope of procuring admission to the Reading Room of the British Museum in the course of two or three days, having already obtained the necessary recommendations. Every one has told me how much is to be found there. I am thus getting all the time useful material to work on, and perhaps I may now, by finding a generation or two back of Samuel's father, be able to join his line directly to the place where it belongs. This, however, is hoping a good deal, and I must dwell at present only on what seem to be facts. I think it is pretty certain that I am on the right track, but what I may find to block up my path in the way of lost records, etc., is yet to be seen. Banbury is the place noted in nursery rhyme, and the cross (restored) is still to be seen there. Stratford, the birth-place of Shakespeare, is not far distant; so is the ancestral home of the Washingtons, and the Duke of Marlborough's place, Blenheim, to say nothing of Oxford, Warwick Castle, Kenilworth, etc., etc. I am glad our Claydon has not proved to be the one near Ipswich, for I never could find there was anything very interesting in that neighborhood.

REPLY OF THE CLAYDON VICAR.

CLAYDON VICARAGE,
BANBURY, May 15, 1890.

DEAR MADAM:

The name of Boreman is found very often in an old register book of this parish. These registers go back as far as 1569, and the first entry of the name of Boreman is as follows: "Jone Boreman, daughter to Willm Boreman and Annis his wyffe was baptized the XXth of Maie, Anno Dom̄ 1570." The next entry is, "Marie Boreman, daughter to Thomas and Alice Boreman his wyffe was baptized the 7th day of October Anno Dom̄ 1571." There would, therefore, appear to be two families living here of that name at the same time.

The names continue to appear for several years onward; the last time I have found it is: "1681, John Boreman and Oliver Stockley church wardens," etc.

The old registers have become very faded, and in many instances the entries are undecipherable.* It will be quite a labour of love to trace these through. I almost fear I should fail to trace them out correctly.

I find you have written a previous letter to the parish clerk in which you intimated you would like to search the registers yourself. I really think it would be more satisfactory to you that you should do so. If you could arrange to come here I would have the books at my house, and assist you in the search thro' them. If you could walk the three miles from the station, I would offer you refreshment. The nearest station is Cropredy on the Great Western Railway.

* If Mr. Palmer had served even a short apprenticeship at the Record Office and Somerset House, he would have been of a different opinion; as it proved, the records, considering their age, were in remarkable preservation, and there was not a word which a practiced eye would not have been able to read.

But I think you would hardly have time enough to search the register and return the same day. You could come to Banbury, and drive over from there by cab, and so manage.

If you will let me know if you will do this, and the day you may purpose to come, I will be at home to meet you.

If you are a descendant of the family you would probably like to see the old parish (little) church, and look upon the very same stones which your ancestors were accustomed to see.

The village is a very poor dilapidated place now, but the church is in very good order. I do not remember to have seen any of the name of Boreman on any of the tombstones, but many who once bore the name must be lying in the churchyard. I find in the old register book that some correspondence had taken place over a quarter of a century since on this matter, the facsimile of a letter written by a Mrs. Julian Boreman in 1641 being left in the book; also, another, an original, by a Mr. Manly B. Boardman, dated New York, 26 Oct. 1863, making similar enquiries respecting the name of Boreman.

On hearing from you I will do my best to assist you. There is no postal delivery here on Sundays.

Believe me,

Dear Madam,

To Miss Goldthwaite.

Geo. Wm. Palmer,
Vicar of Claydon, near Banbury, Oxfordshire.

LONDON, May 16, 1890.

I enclose the reply I received from Claydon, which tells its own story. I had thought I could get what records were immediately necessary, by writing, going there myself later when we start on our journey through the country after leaving London. I have necessary work yet to do here, in the British Museum, where I have now permission to read, and at Somerset House, where, as I have lately found, the early Oxfordshire wills are now deposited, and where I have an appointment to search them on Monday the 19th. As soon as possible after that I have decided I must go to Claydon, making a special trip for the purpose. I can go there again later, on our journey north, and if I find it worth while and the country pleasant, we may then settle for a week or two in that vicinity. I am very much surprised to find that Manly Boardman wrote there. If he had an answer, why is it not among his letters? If they replied, they must, at least, have told him the name was to be found there; either no notice was taken of his inquiries, or the answer was lost.

I will write again as soon as I have more to communicate. My great fear now is, that the record of Samuel and his immediate family may be among those Mr. Palmer speaks of as almost obliterated. I have a magnifying glass, and it will go hard with me if I do not see it, if it is to be seen.

I did not tell you by what a bare chance this Banbury clue was found. It was near the end of my work in the Search Room, when I had looked up almost all the Boreman references that seemed of any value. I had a reference to a book of administrations, which I had trouble in finding, the page being evidently wrong. As anything not to be found seems suddenly of great importance, and perhaps the very thing needed, I began to look the book through, page by page. It was while doing this, that I found the notice of John Boreman of Banbury, which, as I afterwards saw, was not in the index at all.

CROPREDY, Tuesday Evening, May 20, 1890.

I write in the station at Cropredy, while waiting for the train back to London. I have had a most interesting day which I will describe later. I am hurrying to send this if possible by the steamer of to-morrow, mailing it at Oxford as we go through. The records I here copy, which I have selected as being the most important, speak for themselves.

Samuel's baptism is not here, and we conclude that his father and mother went from Claydon after their marriage in 1604, returning there again before the birth of Christopher. Julian's death is not found here either; I must continue my search in two or three more places where they might have removed, say at Banbury, the nearest large town, or at Cropredy. Here are some of the records found to-day : —

Christopher Boreman & Julian Carter were married Nov. 19, 1604.

Julian Carter, daughter of Felix Carter and Margaret his wife bapt. 20 Dec. 1583.

Christopher Borman the sonne of Christopher Borman and Julyan his wyffe was baptized Nov. 26, 1620.

Ursula Borman, daughter of Christopher & Julyan Borman bapt. Dec. 18, 1624.

John Bet the sonne of John Bet and Mary his wyffe was baptized the 5th daye of May, 1627.

Christopher Bourman buried April 1, 1640.

What do you say to my having found in Claydon John Betts of Wethersfield, for I am sure it is he, and his mother, the widow Mary Betts, afterwards of Hartford, mother also of Samuel Boreman's wife! Moreover, I am almost positive I have track of Thomas Boreman of Ipswich, also. How could we hope for anything better? The Oxfordshire wills, which I saw yesterday at Somerset House, are a treasure. I found only by accident that they were there; I had thought I should have to take another journey from London to find them. The regularly recorded Oxfordshire wills contain few Boremans, but it appears that the region around Cropredy was, in regard to Probate matters, what is called a Peculiar,*

* Peculiar — "In the English canon law, a particular parish or church which has the probate of wills within itself, exempt from the jurisdiction of the ordinary or bishop's court." (Webster's Dictionary.) There are said to have been some hundreds of such Peculiars in England.

and these Cropredy wills are now on file in a small office above the regular Search Room at Somerset House. One of the gentlemen in that office has only recently prepared a manuscript index of them, and from that he has given me a list of those belonging to Boremans and others, whose names I specified. I have only to select and call for what I want, and the original, from two and a half to three centuries or more old, is before me, the legal fee of one shilling each to be afterwards paid.

Mr. Palmer says that that letter of Manly Boardman's was probably never answered. His predecessor, the Vicar at that time, had taken some notes on the subject, which are left in the Register. He perhaps gave up doing anything more about it because he could not find the baptism of Samuel. He is said to have been a somewhat eccentric man, and he came to Claydon only to perform service, residing elsewhere. He died not long after the time of receiving the letter.

The Church in Claydon is one of the oldest in this part of the country. Mr. Palmer, who is an exceptionally interesting and intelligent man, is well versed in architecture, and seemed to take pleasure in showing me around. I wish I could make you understand how very interesting it all was. I am sure it is worth a journey over the water for any one of our family who is interested, just to see it. The town from which the Wyllys family of Hartford came, Fenny Compton, is about three miles only from Claydon. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer are going to find lodgings for us in some place not far off, and we shall come again, and explore the neighborhood more thoroughly.

LONDON, May 23, 1890.

I hope you were able to make out what I wrote with pencil in great haste on my way back from Claydon, and mailed in the station at Oxford. I will now try to give a more particular account of my visit, as I promised. My good fortune in making discoveries really began the day before I went, when I got hold of the Oxfordshire wills at Somerset House, and found in the will of Elizabeth Boreman of Claydon, dated 1631, the signature of Christopher Boreman. That Christopher was Samuel's father! I have good hope of more information from the wills I shall see next Tuesday, one of which in particular, that of "Thomas Boreman, the elder," who died in 1580, may prove to be that of the ancestor of the whole family in Claydon. My impatience to get at the wills has to be curbed, for the room where they are is small, and besides accommodations for the three gentlemen regularly employed there, there is room for but one searcher, so I may be thankful for the privilege of taking my turn as often as once a week. In the intervals I can always occupy myself profitably at the British Museum. I found there to-day, in looking over an index of wills at Worcester, that of an R. Boreman of Shotton, near Stratford on Avon, 1538. That place is quite near to Claydon, and I think it may pay me to go to Worcester to look up the will. We can hardly hope to go back much earlier than that date.

I took an early start for Claydon, leaving the Paddington Station at 6.45 for Banbury, where I took a fly for the seven miles to Claydon. I might have stopped by a later train at Cropredy, a station four miles nearer, but I should then have had to walk to Claydon, and my day would have been very much shorter. Banbury is an interesting town with some very old houses, and I passed what is said to have been the original Cake Shop; the Cross is in another direction, and that I did not see. The day was rather cloudy, but not rainy, and there was a cool breeze blowing. The country was looking its best in its fresh green, and the hawthorn hedges dividing the fields were just beginning to be in full bloom. The region about Banbury is undulating, without marked features, and far from being what we should call picturesque; yet it has a quiet beauty of its own, which was very grateful after the rush and roar of London. I missed the high hills which generally shut in our New England horizons, but the loss was made good by the wider views, which took in sometimes quite distant villages; farther north, however, I found hills appearing. The roads are all excellent, and my fly, or rather hansom, spun over the ground at a good pace. If the driver had not been so far away, and over my head, I should have liked to question him about the country, and ask the names of the different villages near which we passed; but I was alone, and had to content myself with looking with all my eyes at every thing in sight, continually wondering if this or that village we were approaching could be Claydon. At last we turned off, almost at right angles from the main road, and I began to see on some rising ground in the distance a collection of houses, which, it seemed to me, must be the place to which we were bound. It was even farther off than I thought, and it took yet what appeared a long time to reach it. Descending to the lower ground, we lost sight of it for a while, and not till we were close upon it, did the village come again in view. As we neared it, we came to a gate across the road, which the driver had to get down to open — a little farther on was another gate, and then we drove up a short steep pitch between a high stone wall and a cottage, and immediately were in the village street. I had told the driver I wanted to go to the Vicar's, so he went on a short distance, till, coming in front of the church, we found on inquiry that we had passed the house I was in search of, which proved to be near the entrance of the village. Turning back, we stopped before a gate in a high wall; seeing no house, I thought there must be some mistake, but on opening the gate, I came upon a pretty green lawn, enclosed in ivy-covered walls, and planted around with laurel and other shrubs. Just at my right was the entrance of a house, and beyond, a range of windows opening on this sunny lawn. I saw afterwards that the house was on the street, but completely turned its back to it, the walls on that side having only here and there a window for necessary light. This, I need not say, was the Vicarage. Mr. Palmer and his wife gave me a very cordial welcome; he has had the living now twenty-five years, and has brought up his family of four children there, educating them himself, and living an almost isolated life. There is little society in the village, and not much in the immediate neighborhood. The living, which now belongs to the University of Oxford, is not a valuable one, and strict economy is necessary. It was surprising to me to see so well appearing and intelligent a man with no better position ; but so it is in England — every profession is crowded, and good men must take the best places they can get, or nothing. Mr. Palmer was formerly in the way of taking pupils into his family, but his health has of late years forbidden it. His children, except the two younger, are now away in business.

I lost no time in setting to work to copy the records, which had been brought over from the strong iron box in the church. They are by no means in so bad a condition as I had feared, especially the book containing the earliest entries, where the only Boremans are to be found — the later books seem to have suffered more in the lapse of time. It was of course a matter of intensest interest, as I copied on from year to year in the records, to come at last to the familiar names, Julian and Christopher, and to be thus assured of having really found the home long sought for, my satisfaction mingled at the end with disappointment at the absence of any mention of Samuel — but all that I have already told, or will leave you to imagine. It was certainly a most interesting experience.

After dinner Mr. Palmer took me out to see the church and the village. I wish I had the power to describe it so you could see it for yourself, but that is hopeless, so I can only tell some of the most striking things, hoping you may be able to visit the place yourself some day. The church, though really small, does not appear so, perhaps because it is so well proportioned to the size of the village. It is built of gray stone, as are all the houses there, except two or three modern brick structures ; the stones are all hewn and squared, and many of them are not larger than good-sized bricks. The roofs of the church and a few of the dwelling houses are slated, but most of the buildings are thatched with straw, and these are much the most picturesque. We entered the church through the church yard, which Mr. Palmer has had enlarged, and in some parts leveled off, for, in consequence of its having been used for interments so many hundred years, the ground had come to be considerably above the level of the church floor, and some of it is yet of that height. It is in this latter part, behind the church, that the older tombstones are found, none of which, Mr. Palmer thought, are earlier than 1700. The longest side of the church faces the south, where is the entrance through a small porch and an arched door way. The tower is a square one at the west end of the building, and is topped by a gable roof, which Mr. Palmer says is very unusual, there being but three old ones of the kind in England. The church is in excellent repair, having of course been restored, and in part rebuilt since the days of our ancestors, but the tower and the inside arches remain untouched. On the door is carved in quaint characters the date 1640, showing the exact age of that part. The inside of the building is exceedingly interesting, particularly the Norman arches which divide the main part of the church from a side aisle or chapel, which is supposed to have been, in the days before the Reformation, a Lady Chapel. Mr. Palmer was as enthusiastic in showing me about the old places, as if he himself had been one of our family, interested in them on his own account. He would say, "Now this, of course, has been put up since your ancestors' day, but that is old — their eyes must often have looked on these stones, and these arches — many times they brushed by them, or laid their hands upon them." He took me into the room under the tower, over the door of which is an immense oak beam, black with age. "They must often have seen that," he said, "and have many times come in here when boys to ring the bells." The roof of the church is of oak timbers, and the floor is of stone, with some tablets set in it on which are inscriptions, but all comparatively modern. The stones of the arches had been at one time plastered over, and the plaster stains had never been quite removed till Mr. Palmer, as he told me, himself scrubbed them down with soap and water, so careful has he been that the church should be kept in good order. It stands on slightly elevated ground in the exact center of the village, with the graveyard around it, as I have said, the whole surrounded by a low stone wall. About this lies the village street, from which branch off roads leading to adjoining towns. Around this central space, and for a short distance on the roads leading from it, stand the houses, many of which are laborers' cottages built together in a long block, with the door of the living room opening close upon the road. There are a number of houses that must have been fine in their day, standing farther from the street, and enclosed in yards or gardens. They are Elizabethan in style, with mullioned windows, and must have been standing, Mr. Palmer says, in the time of our ancestors. They have been altered more or less to suit the wants of changing tenants; doors and windows have been stoned up, and new ones cut through, but the old ones are always discernible, and easily recognized by their superiority in style. I saw only one cottage in a really ruinous condition, that is, with the walls fallen down.

As I had come into Claydon through two gates, so I had to go out of it by gates, though I left by another road. I wanted to try the walk to Cropredy, so Mr. and Mrs. Palmer went half way to show me the road, and then, a milk boy coming by with his cart (they send all the milk in that region by train to London), they secured me a ride with him the rest of the way to Cropredy. I found this a very interesting town, with a good church and the same beautiful old houses, but in better repair. Mr. Palmer told me that Claydon was once so prosperous, that it was called "Golden Claydon," but agricultural interests in England have long been greatly depressed, so that the village, being away from the railroad, and having no other resource than agriculture, is now going to decay.

Just out of the bounds of Claydon are the remains of an old Priory, which we passed in going to Cropredy. It is called Clattercote Priory, and it dates back to the time of King John (1199-1216): what is left of it now forms a part of a farm house; they say much of interest remains to be seen there.

I have found in the British Museum a very full and valuable History of Banbury; it was printed almost fifty years ago, so that I fear it would be hard to get a copy, but I shall try to do so. I am very much interested to find that Banbury and the region about it had a large number of Puritans. Several noted Puritan divines were connected with the town and neighborhood, and exerted a strong influence there. Moreover, the Puritan nobleman, Lord Saye and Sele, one of the founders of Saybrook, Conn., was identified very closely with Banbury. He is said by the historian to have been "the chosen leader in State and Religion of the entire population of the region around Banbury." You see what light all this information throws on Samuel Boreman, and the influences that led him to emigrate to New England.

I must consult other Parish Registers still, if I would get the record of Samuel's baptism. I have most hope of finding it in Banbury, and should try there first; if it is not there, I propose to advertise in the Banbury Guardian for information, offering a reward large enough to make it an object of search, a plan which Mr. Palmer approves.

LONDON, June 13, 1890.

I send enclosed a tabular Pedigree of the Boremans of Claydon, which I have been interested in making out, and which I think is in the main correct. The Parish Register alone would not have enabled me to make so full or so accurate a one, because that does not begin early enough: but here the wills come nobly to my help. I find them very fruitful in information, and have copied twelve, with inventories, all relating to the family, including three Carter and one Betts will. I have sent an advertisement to the Banbury Guardian, hoping for an answer which will save the time and expense of a personal search from town to town. We leave here soon for a tour of England, going first to stay for a week at a farm house in Farnborough, one mile from Claydon, and a mile and a half from the Railway Station at Fenny Compton. We hope to go about a good deal there, so as to become familiar with the country.

LONDON, June 19, 1890.

Your letter dated June 4, reached me June 16 — I knew you would be pleased with the discovery, but I was glad to hear you say so. I am now getting used to the idea of it, though I find it sometimes a little hard to realize that what we have been so long wanting to know, is at length satisfactorily settled. I send with this a transcript I have made of my notes, both for your information, and that it may be safe from the chances of travel.

Wherever Samuel's father and mother went to live after their marriage, it is plain to me that they came back to Claydon before the birth of Christopher in 1620, for the purpose of taking care of Julian's widowed mother, for you notice that her father, Felix Carter, died in 1619, and that his house and the residue of the mother's goods are left to Julian. I have now for my great object to find the birth-place of Samuel. So far I have failed to receive any answer to the advertisement sent to the Banbury Guardian. We are going into the region presently, and there I shall make every possible effort to discover what I want. I have my fears that I shall not find it, for no one can tell where the father and mother may have gone to live. If they do not appear in Banbury, or one or two of the other considerable towns in the vicinity, I shall be all at sea, especially as I find that in some instances the Claydon Boremans were as far from home as London.

I would like you to notice the Thomas Boreman, born 1601, in the Chart. It is he whom I suspect to have been the Ipswich settler. He had, as you will see, a brother Daniel, which was the name of a son of the Ipswich Thomas, and this Claydon Daniel is the only Daniel Boreman I have found anywhere on this side the water. This Thomas, you observe, is first cousin to Samuel on his mother's side, and second cousin on his father's side. His age also answers to what we suppose that of the Ipswich Thomas to have been.

The John Betts, born 1627 in Claydon, I take to be Sergeant John Betts of Wethersfield, who was so unfortunate in his marriage. I am especially interested in finding his age, which is considerably younger than I had supposed, and corresponds better with that of his wife, a point which has always puzzled me. It seems as if the father of this family must have died on the voyage, for I can hardly think the Widow Mary would have started alone for America, with a family of young children. The John Bett of King's Sutton, a place in the near neighborhood of Banbury, seems likely to have been the grandfather of Samuel Boreman's wife, and of Sergeant John Betts. I have found a number of John Betts in other parts of England, but only these in this vicinity.

I have obtained permission to search at Worcester, where I found mention of the will of R. Boreman of Stratford-on-Avon, 1538, which may prove of value. I had hoped that all my notes of Boreman wills at Somerset House would come in play in helping me to connect our family with the rest of the name, but those principally related to Boremans in the south of England, while our family has started up in an entirely new quarter, so those notes help me nothing. However, we are going back in Oxfordshire nearly as far as the London notes would take us, and one hundred years or more of clear and undoubted record ought perhaps to satisfy us.

FARNBOROUGH FIELDS, CLAYDON, BANBURY,
July 5, 1890.

We left London on Tuesday morning, had a delightful day in Oxford, and came on in the evening to Banbury, where we spent our first night. Early the next morning we went out to see the town. I made my way first to the Vicarage, and finding the Vicar was then engaged at morning prayers in the church close by, I went in there. Service was going on, with only the clerk, assisted by the sexton standing near the door, to make responses, so that I formed the only congregation. At the close, telling the sexton of my wish to speak with the Vicar, he took me where I should see him as he came out of the vestry, after changing his surplice. He received me very courteously, and I stated my case — that I wished to see the Records of Baptisms between 1604 and 1620, to find if the children of Christopher and Julian Boreman were among them. He evidently had not noticed my advertisement. We looked over the Register together, and soon came to this entry —

Anne Bowrman, dau. to Chrystopher Bowrman was bapt. the XV daye of Sept. 1605.

Then I knew I was on the right track. To make the story short, I found the whole family (including a Felix, who must have died young) except one of the five sisters mentioned in the Letter, who must have been born between Samuel and Christopher, where there is an interval of five years. There was also the record of the family of a John Bowrman of Neythrop (part of Banbury); who he was I cannot tell. There were, evidently, more of the Boremans than we thought, but the Christopher is unmistakable. Julian's name is not mentioned till we come to the baptism of Samuel, where, as if to satisfy our wish for a full record, the parents' names both appear:

Samuell Bormā son to Xpofer Bormā and Julian his wife was bapt y^e 20 day August, 1615.

I had really begun to fear, when I heard nothing from the advertisement, that I should have to leave England without knowing anything about Samuel's birth. I know you will be as thankful as I am that we have found it. You may imagine with what a light heart I left the vestry, and went to look about the streets of the old town, which had a very much greater interest now that I knew it to be the birth-place of our ancestor. It was Thursday, the market day, so the streets were fuller than usual, and we had the advantage of seeing the market in the old Market Place. I inquired for the History of Banbury, of which I spoke ; the book is out of print, and what copies are to be found are held at high prices. One bookseller there buys every one that is for sale. I succeeded in obtaining a very good copy. It is a thick octavo volume with a good number of illustrations, and contains the results of much research ; it is especially valuable to us, for it deals not only with Banbury, but the whole surrounding region.

FARNBOROUGH, NEAR CLAYDON, BANBURY,
July 10, 1890.

We have now spent about a week in this neighborhood, nearly every day of which has been taken up with some excursion, either by conveyance or on foot, and a most interesting week it has been. We have, in the first place, seen more thoroughly Claydon itself, to which we have taken almost daily walks. I spoke in a former letter of the gates, generally two at some distance apart, through which one must pass in entering Claydon from any direction. They give the village an air of great seclusion, and were a mystery to me at first. The explanation is, however, very simple. After leaving the main highways, all the roads thither, though so well built and substantial that one does not think of them in that light, are really only lanes through the fields, and not being fenced on either side, gates are necessary at the entrance of each field to prevent the straying of cattle.

The village, perhaps more properly called a hamlet, is very small ; it probably never contained much more than three hundred souls. The houses stand near together, with just room enough around them for a small garden and necessary outbuildings. The farm land is entirely outside, and mostly somewhat lower, for Claydon is built on slightly elevated ground. Small streams which take their rise about it, form part of the head waters of the river Cherwell, which flows from here directly south past Banbury, and empties at Oxford into the Thames. Parallel to its course the whole distance is the Oxford Canal, which leaves the county at Claydon, and passes the village a short distance to the east. As I think I have said before, some of the houses in the village must once have been quite beautiful. The Vicar took me into some of them, and we were allowed to explore the rooms, going even into the chambers, and climbing higher still, till we were close under the straw thatch. Mr. Palmer called my attention to the solid timbers, floors, and staircases, all of oak. Some of the rooms are quite large, and must have been handsome, judging from traces of decoration still visible; the mullioned windows, deep-seated on account of the thickness of the stone walls, add a feature always attractive. Mr. Palmer maintains that one of the larger of these houses must have been the home of Julian Boreman, inherited from her father, Felix Carter, on account of its being the only one in the village with traces of an orchard having been once connected with it.* In this orchard directly back of the house, the most striking feature to-day is a fine spreading English Walnut tree, which is now loaded with fruit. This house is now leased to the farmer with whom we are lodging, who uses it as a boarding place for his men. It was his housekeeper who showed us about the place. I had been puzzled by the names of some of the household articles in the old inventories, which I could not find in a dictionary of ancient terms, so it occurred to me to inquire of this woman what they meant, and she was able to explain them in several instances.

On my former visit I only caught a glimpse of Clattercote Priory in the distance, but the other day we visited it. It is on the lower ground just outside the bounds of Claydon. A farm house, also of stone, has been built in with the remains of the Priory, and the whole is kept in good repair, so that it is now a handsome dwelling, having no appearance of a ruin. The ancient chapel can be easily recognized by the remains of its once handsome gothic window, and the traces of arches within. Under the house we saw the old cellars, of fine arched brick work, still in perfect preservation. This Priory was in existence in 1209, during the reign of King John ; it was dedicated to St. Leonard. After the dissolution of religious houses in 1538 by Henry VIII, the property passed through various hands, being at one time settled on Christ Church College, Oxford. The estate, which for some generations has been in the Cartwright family, contains about 330 acres, and is now let for a farm, the occupants of which are some of the richer members of the Claydon congregation. Part of the old moat around the Priory is visible, and Mr. Palmer pointed out some large old trees, the remains of a double belt still clearly traceable, which the monks planted on the borders of their land. At some distance from the house is a large pond, where, according to tradition, the monks were accustomed to bathe, and nearer by was their burying place, where several human skeletons have been found.

We walked through the fields one day to Fenny Compton, the next town to Claydon, from which the Wyllys family, on whose grounds in Hartford stood our Charter Oak, emigrated to Connecticut. As we came out from the field path, we saw a very attractive looking house, at which we stopped to make some inquiries. Learning of our interest in the neighborhood, its occupant invited us in, and we were shown about the place. There was a nice lawn, over which a tame magpie was strutting, beautiful large old trees, a garden with flowers, etc. The stone house consisted of two parts, the older, thatched with straw, containing the commoner rooms, kitchen, dairy, etc. ; the other, more modern, was occupied by the drawing room, entrance hall, and other apartments, all showing at a glance that it was the home of people of cultivation and refinement. We learned that portions of the house were quite ancient, and we were shown part of a moat, still filled with water, which once surrounded it. It had, in fact, once been a "moated grange." The gentleman, its occupant, who, as I afterwards learned, belonged to a class called in England "gentlemen farmers," told us that he himself was born in Claydon, his father having been Curate there at that time. The young ladies of the family very kindly took us afterwards over to the old church, where was a brass containing an inscription to members of the Wyllys family. We learned that one of their descendants, Mr. Wyllys Betts, had not long before taken great interest in a visit to the town, and had had photographs taken of the church, and the old Manor House, some of which we hope to be able to procure in Leamington. This Manor House of the Wyllys family was taken down a short time ago, but we saw where it stood at the opposite end of the town from that where we entered. Fenny Compton is a village of more considerable size than Claydon, and contains a good number of the same Elizabethan houses I spoke of there, one or more of them in perfect preservation, so far as the outside walls are concerned.

An interesting excursion which we took afterwards, was that to Burton Dasset Church, standing in full sight of Fenny Compton, near the summit of a range of hills which from here sweep round to the southwest, having on their side, a few miles farther on, the famous battlefield of Edgehill. This lonely church, very ancient and interesting, and now admirably restored, stands on the hill side, with no house near it except the modern vicarage. The village which forms its parish is at a distance, at the foot of the other side of the range. To reach the church, we drove through Fenny Compton to the village of Burton Dasset, where, leaving our conveyance, we struck into a field path which climbed to the top of the hill, passing on its summit an immense windmill, and the Burton Dasset Beacon, both visible from that height to all the country far and near. A little farther on, down the hill, we came to the church. I wish I could do justice to a description of it, but must forbear, and only speak of the great impressiveness of its situation in that solitary place. Its early history is unknown, but it is supposed to have belonged to a village which once lay about it, but was with this exception utterly destroyed during some incursion of Danes or Northmen of which no record remains. The church tower has a fine peal of bells. There is a story of Cromwell's having climbed into it to witness from a distance the battle of Edgehill—a story evidently made up by his enemies, and sometime since exploded. Burton Dasset Beacon is a circular building with a conical roof, all of stone, in past times used in giving signals to places at a distance by blazing fires lighted on its roof. Other beacons on distant heights within sight communicated with it, and tidings were thus rapidly carried to remote points. This Beacon was thus used during the Civil War.

On a hill northwest of here stands, in full view from our window, a group of large trees, completely hiding from sight a village which they shade. It is called Wormleighton, and it was the scene of some important events in the Civil War, when it belonged, as it does still, to an Earl Spencer. It was occupied by a detachment of the king's army under Prince Rupert, the night before the battle of Edgehill, and later during the war, Jan. 17, 1645, its Manor House, erected by Sir John Spencer after he purchased Wormleighton in 1507, where he kept house on a grand scale with a family of sixty persons, was burnt. I suppose there is a carriage-road somewhere leading up to it, but we saw none, and reached the village by a foot-path up a rather steep declivity on one side, leaving it by a more gradual descent through fields with gates on another. I shall not soon forget the vision of beauty it seemed, as we emerged from the steep path upon its lovely street. There was nothing magnificent or stately, but the handsome old houses and church, all kept in perfect repair by their rich owner, with the great trees everywhere shading them, made a picture of quiet loveliness such as I have seldom seen.

I greatly regret not having allotted more time to our stay here, so that we shall now be obliged to omit visiting very many places of interest. We should have gone into Northamptonshire, to Sulgrave, only a few miles east, which was the home of Gen. Washington's family. The Manor House where his ancestors lived, is there, and over its door, the Washington Coat of Arms, from which our Stars and Stripes originated; also the Washington tomb in the church. I wanted to go to Broughton Castle, the home of Lord Saye and Sele, to Wroxton Abbey, and Compton Winyate, and to see some of the beautiful old churches for which this part of the country is famous, especially those of Kings Sutton, Bloxham, and Adderbury. Of course an excursion to Stratford-on-Avon, which is quite near here, has not been omitted, and we shall see on the journey north, Warwick Castle, and the ruins of Kenilworth,* both not far distant; but these last are visited by everyone; to me the less frequented places, especially those with the added interest of family association, like those about here, are the most enjoyable. I must not forget to mention that I went one day to Worcester to see the will, 1538, of R. Boreman of Shottery, Stratford-on-Avon, of which I spoke. It is a quaint old document, but shows no connection with the Claydon Boremans. Richard, for that was his name, mentions but one son, who was named Roger.

I find I have not spoken of our attendance at Claydon church last Sabbath, which was, you may be sure, an event of great interest. In a part of the church yard, as it has been enlarged, has been included a small building, formerly a cottage, but now altered to suit the needs of the Sunday School, which meets before service in the morning, and which, as we entered the yard, was just going in procession headed by the Vicar, to the church. The congregation was small, but so is the church, and therefore it did not appear scanty. The service is that of the Church of England in its simplest form, and we heard the Gospel in its purity and simplicity, preached with a plainness and earnestness, such as I could not but think would have delighted the heart of our Puritan forefather. The day happened to be the Sabbath of the monthly Communion, and we, though as descendants of New England Puritans well known to be "dissenters," were cordially invited by Mr. Palmer, with the liberal spirit that characterizes him, to join in its celebration. Our feelings on that occasion, and in that spot, can best be left to imagination. The singing, led by a small organ played by Mr. Palmer's son, and by a choir of young men and boys sitting on each side of the chancel, was congregational. I was of course interested in looking at the people, and noticed particularly these young persons in the choir, somewhat surprised to see in so retired a place, young men of such good and gentlemanlike appearance. Speaking of them afterwards to the Vicar, I said I supposed they were young men engaged in business in Banbury or other neighboring large towns during the week, coming home to Claydon to spend Sunday. My surprise was considerable to learn from him that they were, as he expressed it, "farm laborers," and it seemed to me a striking commentary on the crowded ranks of labor in England, where there was no better employment to be found for young men like these.

You must have received ere this the letter containing the account of the discovery of Samuel's birthplace, and the record of his baptism in Banbury. I am still strongly of the opinion that the Thomas, born in Claydon 1601, in the tabular pedigree I made out, was the Ipswich Thomas. Felix, the next older brother, was of London in 1630, and I found in a London church register the death of "Job Boorman, a prentice," in 1632, who corresponds exactly to another brother, Job, born 1613, mentioned in their mother's will of 1631 as in his apprenticeship. What more natural than that Thomas should also have gone up to London, (it is pretty certain he lived no longer in Claydon,) and have there fallen in with the Ipswich or other emigrants. I had some hope of finding the marriage of Thomas or Samuel in Banbury, but it is not there.

I have been much interested in reading about Banbury in connection with the Civil War. Julian and her son Christopher must have been alive at that time, but I have been able to find trace of them in no record. Perhaps some Boardman genealogist of the future, when facilities for research are even better than now, may get some light about them. Records, however, were scanty during those war times, so it is perhaps not strange that they do not appear. There is but one Boreman entry in the Claydon Register between 1640 and 1671, and if I am not mistaken, there is a total gap there for much of that time.

LATER DISCOVERIES.

The hope was expressed in the preceding pages that further light might in some way be hereafter thrown on the later history of Julian Boreman and her family. The information contained in the mother's letter of February, 1641-2, completely ended all our knowledge in regard to them. A Civil War, during which the usual records ceased to be made in the Parish Register, had almost immediately afterwards come with all its horrors close to their very doors. It would seem little short of miraculous if any of that family had passed safely through the perils by which they must have been surrounded in the times that followed. The only hope of their having survived, and of our again learning something in regard to them, seemed to lie in the chance that they had taken refuge in a safer place, remote from the immediate scene of war, from which there might at a future time come some knowledge of their fate. Strangely enough, new light has appeared from a quarter where it was least expected.

There had long ago come to the ears of those interested, a rumor in regard to an old letter that was found in a house in Wethersfield—a house once owned, it was said, by a Boardman. The finder was a gentleman who had bought the house, which had previously gone through still other hands since the Boardman occupancy. The new owner was struck by the antiquity of the letter, and had taken pains to have it framed as a curiosity, but it did not appear to whom it had belonged, the half of the sheet containing the address being gone. Rumor even had it that the name Borman occurred in the letter, but little attention had been given to the report, and no one especially interested in the Boardman family had ever seen it.

Not long after the discovery of the English home of the Boremans, a new interest began to be felt in what had been heard of this story, and Mr. W. F. J. Boardman of Hartford, in whose possession is the Boreman letter of 1642, undertook to look into the matter. The letter was by this time in another town, whither its finder had removed. A visit to the place and an examination of the relic proved of unexpected and extraordinary interest, for the letter was found to have been written by none other than an elder sister of Samuel Boreman, to whom it was undoubtedly addressed, as is shown by strong internal evidence. This letter, of which a photograph is given, is as follows : —

ou^r Coszon John Borman is in Good health Pray Lett me desier you to Lett us hear from you as Soone as you Cane/

The records discovered in England enable us to identify the John and Joseph Borman here mentioned as cousins of our ancestor Samuel, and the name of the writer, Elizabeth, is that of a sister nine years his senior. Other and corroborative evidence of the authorship and address of the letter in the following : —

First ; the fact that the letter was found in Wethersfield, allows us to assume that it was directed to some one there, who, from its date, must have been one of the early settlers. Aside from the knowledge obtained from English records, the mention of the name Borman twice, as that of two relatives, would point to Samuel Boreman as the one addressed.

Second ; Samuel Boreman corresponded with the person addressed in having a widowed mother, brothers and sisters in England ; the date also was within his lifetime (he died 1673), and also within the time to which his mother might have lived, she being then 77 years old.

Third ; the place where the letter was found also connects it with the Boreman family, for Mr. Elisha Boardman, for many years Postmaster at Wethersfield, and a great grandson of Daniel, one of the sons of Samuel Boreman, for a long time owned and occupied the house* where it was discovered.

We have here then a second Letter, which, after having even more wonderfully than the first escaped the accidents of time, lifts for a moment the veil that had for more than nineteen years hidden the family from view, and allows us once more a glimpse of their condition, at the same time bringing into clearer light another of their number, known before only by her name and baptism. It is a most fortunate acquisition to the family records, and one which can hardly be too highly valued.

In reading this letter one cannot but mark the spirit of affection which it breathes — this is indeed its most striking characteristic. Everything now known of the family shows them to have been closely attached to each other, and their affection took in, not only the immediate home circle, but other kindred. The family of which Joseph and John, and Thomas and Daniel were members, seems to have been especially dear to Samuel, as his sister shows by taking pains to give him news of the two still living in England. Their double relationship to him through both father and mother, must have made them seem more like brothers than cousins, and they had besides the few years superiority in point of age, of so much account in childhood, which had doubtless early made Samuel look up to them as examples to be admired and followed, thus adding a sentiment of respect to his love for them. That their names were perpetuated among his children and grandchildren, is one of the best evidences of his regard.†

* This house is the one recently taken down to make room for the new Wethersfield High School, which now stands on its site.

† In this family of Samuel's cousins was a Samuel, born Feb. 1603-4, the first instance of the name in the Claydon family. He evidently died young, and it is not improbable that when, in 1615, our ancestor Samuel was born, Julian, his mother, gave him his name in memory of this child of her sister.

The impression received of Elizabeth, the writer, is a favorable one. She shows herself here, not only the affectionate wife, daughter, and sister, but the faithful correspondent of her brother. This is, by her own account, the third letter she has written to him within little more than two years*—not a great record in these days, but somewhat remarkable in hers, when writing was a rare accomplishment for women in any station in life. She was evidently accustomed to the use of the pen, for her handwriting is good, the letter is well composed, and the spelling excellent for that time, all which argues a fair amount of education. Her home was not above half a mile distant from the route taken by the King and his attendant Nobles in their progress through the City, from the Tower to the Palace at Whitehall. We may picture Elizabeth, on that historic morning ten days before, hurrying with her friends through the old streets to take their stand where a good view of the procession might be obtained, and imagine their enthusiasm over the "Glorryus shew," whose chief meaning to them, as to all England, was that peace had come at last. We would gladly know something of Elizabeth's later history—what were her experiences in the Plague that visited London four years later, when 90,000 died in one year, and in the great fire of the year after, when 13,200 houses in the city were burned. If she survived, she no doubt wrote other letters to her brother, for he lived twelve years after this date.

While we cannot but wish that she had told us more particulars of her family, she has at least answered the question we should perhaps most wish to ask, and we now know that after the lapse of nearly twenty years since we last heard from them, the mother, brothers† and sisters, notwithstanding all the hardships through which they must have passed, were still living, most of them we must suppose in

*Samuel's letter dated Aug. 29, 1658, could not have been received by his sister till some months later.

†The plural, brothers, used by Mrs. Middleton, includes with her own brother, Christopher, the brothers-in-law also.

Claydon. It is interesting also to find still other members of the Boreman family living in London, the cousin Joseph probably, as well as the writer of the letter, so that we may consider that there was from first to last a considerable representation of them in the great city, a mark of their enterprise when we remember its distance from Claydon.

We may here recapitulate the names of those of the family whom we now know to have lived in London.

Felix Boreman, born in Claydon 1598-9, said to be of London in the administration account of his father's estate in 1630. An account with him, preserved in the Records of the Mass. Bay Company, shows that in March, 1628-9, he was a Cutler, living in Fleete Lane, London.

Joseph Boreman, born in Claydon 1611, brother of Felix, considered to have lived in London or its vicinity from the mention of him in his cousin's letter, 1661, as having been several times at her house there.

Job Boreman, born in Claydon 1611, brother of the above two, an apprentice at the time of his mother's will, 1631, and supposed to be identical with "Job Boorman, a prentice," whose burial, Oct. 1, 1632, is in the records of St. Antholin, Budge Row, London.

Elizabeth (Boreman) Middleton, cousin of the three brothers before mentioned, and sister of Samuel Boreman of Wethersfield. She was born in Banbury 1609, and was of St. John Street, London, 1661.

That there may have been still others of the family living at one time or another in the city, will be shown later. There is little doubt that Samuel and Thomas Boreman, wherever their homes had been before their emigration, set sail for New England from London, where they had very likely passed some time previous with their relatives.

We now come to speak more particularly of the London home of Elizabeth Middleton, the writer of the letter, about which we are able to gather some items of information. As has been seen, the letter is dated, "from my house in St. John streett att y^e signe of y^e Pewter Platter." St. John Street is an important and well known London thoroughfare, beginning at the great Smithfield Market, close to the place where the Martyrs were burned in the reign of Queen Mary, and running north for a considerable distance till it finally becomes St. John's Road. It is in the district known as Clerkenwell, one of the many suburban villages which became years ago swallowed up in the growth of the city, and is the part now inhabited chiefly by watchmakers and jewelers. The old parish church of Clerkenwell, St. James, was long ago taken down, and its place supplied by the present church of that name, built within the bounds of the ancient churchyard, many of whose graves it covers, and numbers of whose old stones are set up against its walls. Near by is Clerkenwell Green, recalling by its name the time long past when it was in the midst of a village, but now only an open paved space, crowded with traffic, and surrounded by closely built houses. St. John's Street is one of the most ancient of the northern London streets, being mentioned in a charter of 1170, and first paved as early as in the reign of Richard II. From its situation it formed in early times one of the main entrances to London from the north, on which account it abounded in inns. It is said to have been a great resort of carriers, especially of those coming from Warwickshire and Nottinghamshire. Among the inns are found mentioned in Cassell's "Old and New London," the Windmill, the Golden Lion, the PEWTER PLATTER,* the Cross

* It is interesting to notice what opportunities of receiving news from her family Elizabeth Middleton must have had, situated as she was where it came in her way to often see these carriers from the northern counties as they came into London. There must have been now and again one who had stopped at her home in Claydon, or who was an acquaintance come from that very neighborhood. It is quite likely that Keys,* the Castle, etc. Many of these names are to be seen in St. John Street to-day upon houses of entertainment which presumably occupy the same places as in former times, but we look among them now in vain for the Pewter Platter; it continued, however, to be so known as late as the close of the last century.

Many historical associations are connected with St. John's Street and its neighborhood. Near by, on St. John's Lane, diverging from the street on the west side, is to be seen one of the most interesting and best preserved relics of ancient London — St. John's Gate, which was the entrance from the city to the Hospital of St. John, an extensive foundation of the Knight Templars in the Middle Ages. Above the gateway, which overarches the street, are rooms which have later associations with Dr. Johnson. The quarter about St. John's Gate was fashionable as a residence in the early half of the 17th century, and numbered among its inhabitants many noble and influential persons. Equally near, east of St. John's Street, stands the famous Charterhouse, some of whose present buildings date back to the time of Elizabeth, and were in their best estate about the time this letter was written. It was to the house of a printer in St. John's Street, that Guy Fawkes used to go stealthily in 1605, to meet his fellow conspirators in the Gunpowder Plot. When London was fortified during the Civil War in 1642-3, a battery and breastworks were erected at the south end of St. John's Street, which were in charge of Capt. John Eyre of Cromwell's regiment. On this street stood the once famous Hicks Hall, from which one of the milestone distances from London was computed. It was a stately house built in 1612 by Sir Baptist Hicks, a distinguished citizen of London, as a Sessions it was after meeting such a one, that she wrote to her brother that their family were "alive and in Good health, for very Latlye I heard from them."

House for Clerkenwell. The magistrates are said to have before met at some inn, frequently the Windmill, or the Castle, by Smithfield Bars; the noise of the carriers vexing the justices of those days, King James I authorized that these new quarters should be provided for them. Hicks Hall was the scene of some great historical trials. The twenty-nine regicides were tried here, and many of the conspirators in the so-called Popish Plot.

The early records of St. James, the parish church of Clerkenwell, have been printed; the name Middleton is to be found in them a number of times, but there is no one mentioned who can be identified with the husband of Elizabeth Boreman. The name was evidently an important one at one time in Clerkenwell, as it was given to a Middleton Street, and a Middleton Place there. In this register are seven entries of Boremans, only one of them, however, of a very early date. This is the baptism, April 8, 1614, of "Anne, daughter of Xpopher Boorman." We should hardly venture to appropriate any Christopher Boreman found in the city of London as one of our family, though that is a Christian name of frequent occurrence among them, if there were not some facts to give countenance to the claim. As has been seen, four of the Claydon Boremans, all of the same generation as our ancestor, Samuel, lived at one time or another in London. A Christopher Boreman of the previous generation, born in Claydon, 1573, and uncle of three of these four, evidently lived elsewhere, and it may be that this is he, settled in London, and that thus others of his family were led to follow. The fact that this Christopher was of Clerkenwell, the parish where Elizabeth Middleton is afterwards found living, adds color to this conjecture. In the parish records of St. Antholin, Budge Row, London, where is found the burial in 1632 of Job Boorman, a prentice, previously mentioned, occur two earlier Boreman records, relating to the family of a John Bourman (spelt also Boorman) who had Mary, bapt. Sept. 15, 1605, and John, Jan. 6, 1606-7.

From another and quite unusual source there has come more lately an additional memento of the writer of this letter, for the discovery of which, as well as for the information on the general subject with which it is connected, we are indebted to the kind interest taken in the matter by Mr. Oliver C. Goldthwaite of London, who is a connoisseur in the department to which it belongs.

At a period during the latter half of the 17th century the tavern-keepers and shop-keepers throughout England were much embarrassed by a lack of small coin, and began to supply its place by issuing, each for himself, what were called Tradesmen's Tokens. These appeared in great numbers, and were allowed for many years to pass as money, until a proclamation of Charles II in 1672, forbidding their use, put a stop to their issue. To obtain as large a number as possible of specimens of these different Tokens, is at the present day an object of interest to collectors of coins in England. The British Museum contains a collection of more than 5,000 varieties of them, the Bodleian Library at Oxford about 1,200, and there are also private collections which nearly equal the public ones. The coining of such Tokens was often performed by the issuers themselves, they having a press and dies of their own. They were made of some composition of lead or tin, and the workmanship was, of course, of an inferior kind. Few of them can be discovered at the present day, but they turn up occasionally in hoards of old coins, one or two at a time, or are dredged out of the bed of the Thames, and are also found sometimes when old buildings are pulled down. As an illustration of the extent to which this interest of collectors has been carried, may be mentioned the beautiful and costly catalogues of such Tokens, elaborately and sumptuously printed and bound. One of these, which sells at the price of \$20 a copy, enumerates upwards of 10,000 different Tokens. Among these is to be found catalogued in the latest edition, one issued at "The Pewter Platter," which is described as follows: on one side is a representation of a plate in the center, surrounded by the name, "The Pewter Platter." On the other are the initials $\overset{M}{I\ E}$, around which are the words, St. John Streete. These initials stand of course for J. (or I) and Elizabeth Middleton. The Token is probably a rare one; a specimen, if it could be obtained, would prove a curious and interesting relic.

During a second stay in London in the spring of 1891, an important discovery was made at the Record Office, of the name of William Boreman of Banbury, 1525, who appears to have been a still earlier ancestor of the Claydon family, a subject discussed at greater length in succeeding pages.

A problem of great interest remained, which there seemed small hope of being able to solve. It was much desired to find some means of identifying Thomas Boreman of Ipswich with the Thomas, born 1601, in the Claydon family. It was during a visit paid to Salem after returning to America that I first saw in the Probate Office there the original will of Thomas of Ipswich, which was not recorded. In this appears an item, which had before escaped my attention, namely, the provision there made for the support of a brother Daniel. Knowing well from its records the family of the Thomas born in Claydon, this was immediately conclusive proof of the identity of the two — the only link needed in the chain of evidence — for the mother of the Claydon Thomas made just such provision in her will for a son Daniel. The discovery is a most gratifying and important one, for thus the large family of descendants of Thomas Boreman of Ipswich are able to share with those of Samuel Boreman of Wethersfield the full and clearly established knowledge of their English ancestry.

BANBURY AND CLAYDON.

Before proceeding with the history of the Boreman family in England as it appears in records thus discovered, it is desirable to obtain some knowledge of the region where they lived, its physical features, its history, the character of its people, and the various influences prevailing there, before and during their time, all which may justly be considered to have helped in great measure to make these ancestors what they were. In dealing with this subject we cannot do better than to avail ourselves of the store of valuable information bearing on these points, which we are most fortunate to find collected in the excellent History of Banbury and its Neighborhood,* before alluded to. Banbury, we must remember, was the original home of the Boremans of Claydon, if, as can hardly be doubted, William of Banbury, 1525, was their progenitor; in that town, also, Christopher and Julian, Samuel Boreman's father and mother, made their home for many years, most of their children having been baptized in its beautiful old church. Claydon was very near to Banbury, and the people of the village must have gone every week to its celebrated market, as they continue to do to this day. Claydon may, therefore, for our present purpose, be considered not only as closely connected with Banbury, but as almost a part of it.*

The Hundred of Banbury, including Claydon, is situated in the heart of England, in the northern extremity of Oxfordshire, where it is bordered close on either hand by the counties of Northamptonshire and Warwickshire. It is a region to-day extremely easy of access, lying as it does along the track of the Great Western R. R., one of the main thoroughfares from Liverpool to Oxford and London. Banbury town is described by Beesley, as lying in a deep valley of the table land which constitutes the northern portion of the county. It is on the western bank of the Cherwell which here divides Oxfordshire from Northamptonshire — a river which Camden, writing before the Civil War, described as “seeing nothing for many miles after it has left Banbury, but well cultivated fields and most delightful meadows.” “A more thoroughly English landscape,” says Beesley, “or a spot more rich in arable and pasture land, thickly overspread with trees, watered by many streams and ornamented at short

* No one who has passed any considerable time in rural England can fail to be aware of the intimate connection of the Market Town, as it is found throughout the country, with the region about it. Permission to hold a Fair on a certain specified day of the week was in earliest times given to various towns in their charter granted by the sovereign; it was a privilege always much prized, and very many of these Markets or Fairs are still kept up. Since the advent of railroads, access to them is so easy, the fares thither on that day of the week being always reduced, that the occasion is taken advantage of, not only by persons who have something to sell, but by people from the whole neighborhood, who take this opportunity to do their shopping and other business. To some of these Fairs, at a certain season of the year, servants who are out of employment repair, and farmers and others in need of help go there at that time to hire them.

In the Puritan times of our ancestors, it was on market day that lectures were given at Banbury by one or other of the celebrated preachers of the neighborhood, showing that they were not delivered for the townspeople alone, but for all those who were present in the place on that day, and it is on record that on such occasions people came in crowds from all the country round.

intervals with village spires and towers, can perhaps hardly be found elsewhere."

The region about Banbury bears traces of its importance in very remote times, even before the period when written history begins. When the Romans invaded England, 55 years before Christ, and began their rule there which lasted not far from four centuries, the country had, for ages previous, been in the possession of the native Britons, that wild and warlike race over whose superstitious minds their priests, the Druids, wielded such terrible power. Though rude and ferocious, they were not without a certain kind of civilization, as is evidenced by traces yet remaining, many of which are to be found in the vicinity of Banbury. A number of their camps of the earliest antiquity, situated on the summits of hills, so that signals could be made from one to another, with the remains of their entrenchments, are yet visible. Leading through the country in various directions are their ancient trackways,* along whose course at intervals are numerous mounds, constructed either as burial places, or for the purpose of being able to explore the country from their top, and showing signals or beacon fires. Traces of British settlements have also been discovered in this neighborhood, where the blackness of the soil shows that towns were destroyed by fire, and where many remains, such as ashes, bones, and pottery, have been discovered. One of the most interesting remains of the British period to be seen in Central England, is the Druidical Temple at Rollrich, on the top of a hill eleven miles southwest of Banbury. It consists of large stones set in a circle more than 100 feet in diameter, with which were connected other groups of stones seen in the immediate vicinity.

Of the Roman period there are also here many traces. The most important of these is a Roman Amphitheater in a field adjoining Banbury, that is calculated to have been able to accommodate more than 2,000 persons. Numerous ancient coins, portions of tessellated pavement, urns, and many other remains have been dug up in various places in the neighborhood, showing that here were once Roman towns, villas, baths, and temples.

* Beesley says, "Along these ancient trackways, about Rollrich and Tadmarton, and other roads connected with them, drovers could, until lately, travel more than 100 miles without passing through a toll bar."

After the abandonment of England by the Romans, came the period of the Saxon invasion, during which, in the year 556, occurred the great battle of "Beranburi," between the Britons and the Saxons, located by historians at Banbury. After the Saxons came the Danes in 851, who destroyed many towns in this neighborhood; between them and the Saxons notable battles were fought at Hook Norton, and at Danesmoor, the latter in the near vicinity of Claydon.

After the Norman invasion (1066), as appears from Domesday Book, Banbury, as well as Cropredy, and many other places in the county, was held by the Bishops of Lincoln, in whose possession they continued till the first year of Edward VI (1547), when they were conveyed to the king by the Bishop of that day, he reserving control only over the affairs of the Church. It was a famous early Bishop of Lincoln, Alexander, called on account of his manner of living, "the Magnificent," who built in 1125 the Castle of Banbury, of which Beesley says: "There can be no question that the Castle, which was the frequent abode of the great Bishops of Lincoln, was a magnificent work of its day. That it was a formidable place of defense, we have the proofs arising from its importance during the Civil War, and the gallant stand which the Royalists made there, in the midst of a hostile country from 1642 to 1646." Such an obstacle to the success of the Parliament's forces had the Castle proved, that when it was at length surrendered to them in 1646, steps were almost immediately taken for its demolition, that it might not again become a stronghold of the enemy. Its materials were given to the inhabitants to repair the damage their houses had suffered by the war, and so effectually was this work of destruction performed, that at the present day there remain of it only the moat, and a fragment of the wall.

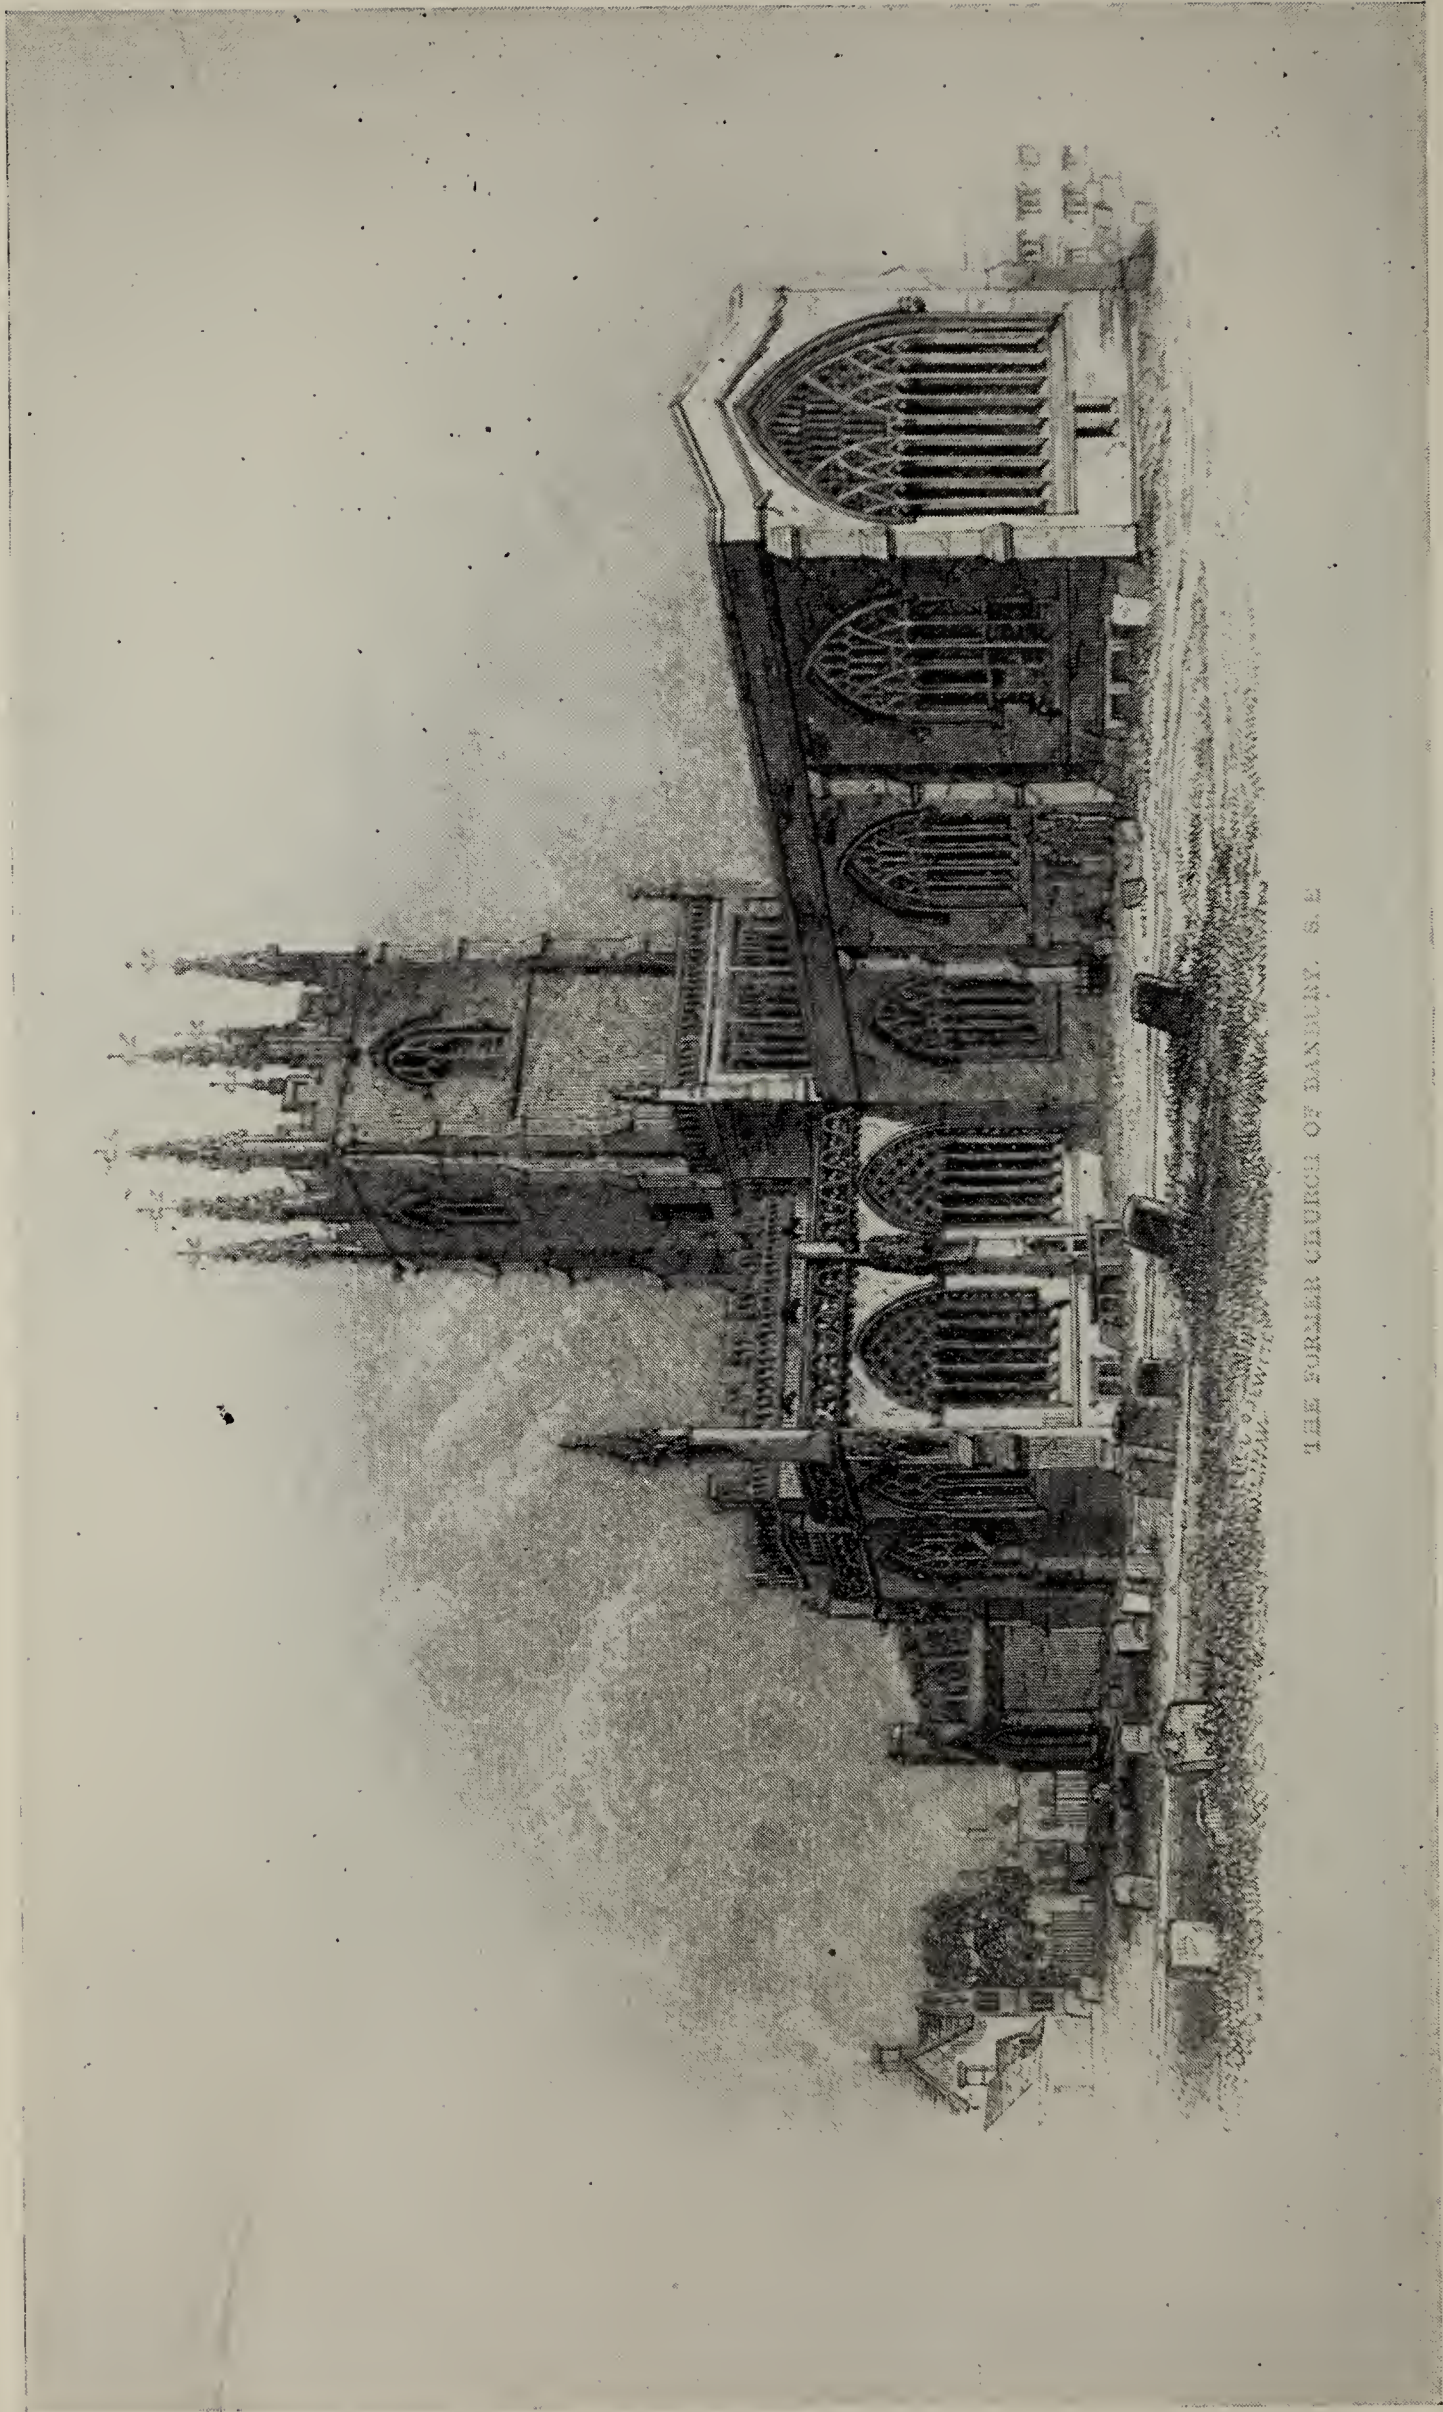

Best and most universally known of all things in Banbury, was the famous Banbury Cross. One of the earliest mentions of it is that made by Leland in his "Itinerary," begun in 1538, in which he says: "The fayrest street of the towne lyeth by west and east downe to the river of Charwell. In the west part of this street is a large area invironed by meetly good buildinges, havinge a goodly Crosse with many degrees (steps) about it. In this area is kept every Thursday a very celebrate Markett." There appear to have been several crosses in Banbury, but the situation of the principal one is thus clearly identified by Leland. No better account of this Cross can be given than that of Beesley, who thus speaks of it:

"We may safely say that this celebrated cross will never be consigned to oblivion while the English language exists, it having been made famous by the nursery rhymes which have been taught to every English child perhaps from Leland's days to the present.

' Ride a-cockhorse
To Banbury Cross,
To see a fine Lady
Ride on a white Horse.
Rings on her fingers,
Bells on her toes ;
She shall have music
Wherever she goes.'

These lines would lead us to believe that some piece of pageantry was periodically used at Banbury, similar to those of Coventry and some other places. It is not to be wondered at that the same Puritanical feeling at Banbury which led to the demolition of the images, &c., in the the Church, should have caused also the destruction of the 'goodly Crosse.' At a trial in 1632, respecting the breaking of a painted window at Salisbury, the attorney-general, Noy, stated that 'in the Queen's time many went abroad, of their own heads, to break down Crosses, Images, and Pictures of all sorts ; in the 44th of Elizabeth (1602), at Banbury they pulled down the Cross there.'"

One of the glories of Banbury was its former church, which is said to have been erected by the same Alexander, "the Magnificent," Bishop of Lincoln, who built the Castle, a tradition, which, according to Beesley, "is highly probable, judging from the extent and the pure Norman style of the original parts of the interior, which remained till near the close of the last century." Of this earlier church, and its shameful destruction, Beesley goes on to speak as follows :

"The old Church of Banbury (St. Mary) was, according to every account, a truly magnificent structure, 'worthy to have been a Cathedral,' and justly the pride of the town and country round. The descriptions which have come down to us, with the help of some drawings and engravings, and a few fragments which remain to bear witness to its former magnificence, show that it belonged chiefly to the best period of Gothic Architecture, and that it was as far superior to the churches of Bloxham, Adderbury, and King's Sutton, as these are to the generality of village churches. It was such a building as, if it were standing at the present day when Gothic Architecture is receiving the attention of nearly all persons of education and taste, would make Banbury as celebrated for its fine church as it was for its beautiful Cross. Never, perhaps, was a more wanton and barbarous act perpetrated than the destruction of the old church of Banbury, nor one more entirely without excuse. The Cross was destroyed by ignorant fanatics, who were, to say the least, honest and disinterested ; but for the destruction of the Church, there is no excuse ; those who ought to have known better, suffered themselves to be blinded by men who were guided only by their self interest ; and in 1790, under the notoriously false pretext that it was in a dilapidated state, this splendid structure was pulled down, or rather blown to atoms, for the 'dilapidated' walls could only be destroyed by means of gunpowder ! Mr. Grose, one of the most eminent antiquarians of the last century, who had seen this church in its glory, and was able to appreciate it, has left a short description : ' Banbury Church is a handsome stone edifice, having a lofty square tower, crowned with eight pinnacles, and containing six well tuned bells. This building has something elegant and picturesque in its construction, appearing more like a Cathedral than a common parochial church.' "

The whole length of the church from east to west was 212 feet, and it is described as having been the largest in Oxfordshire.

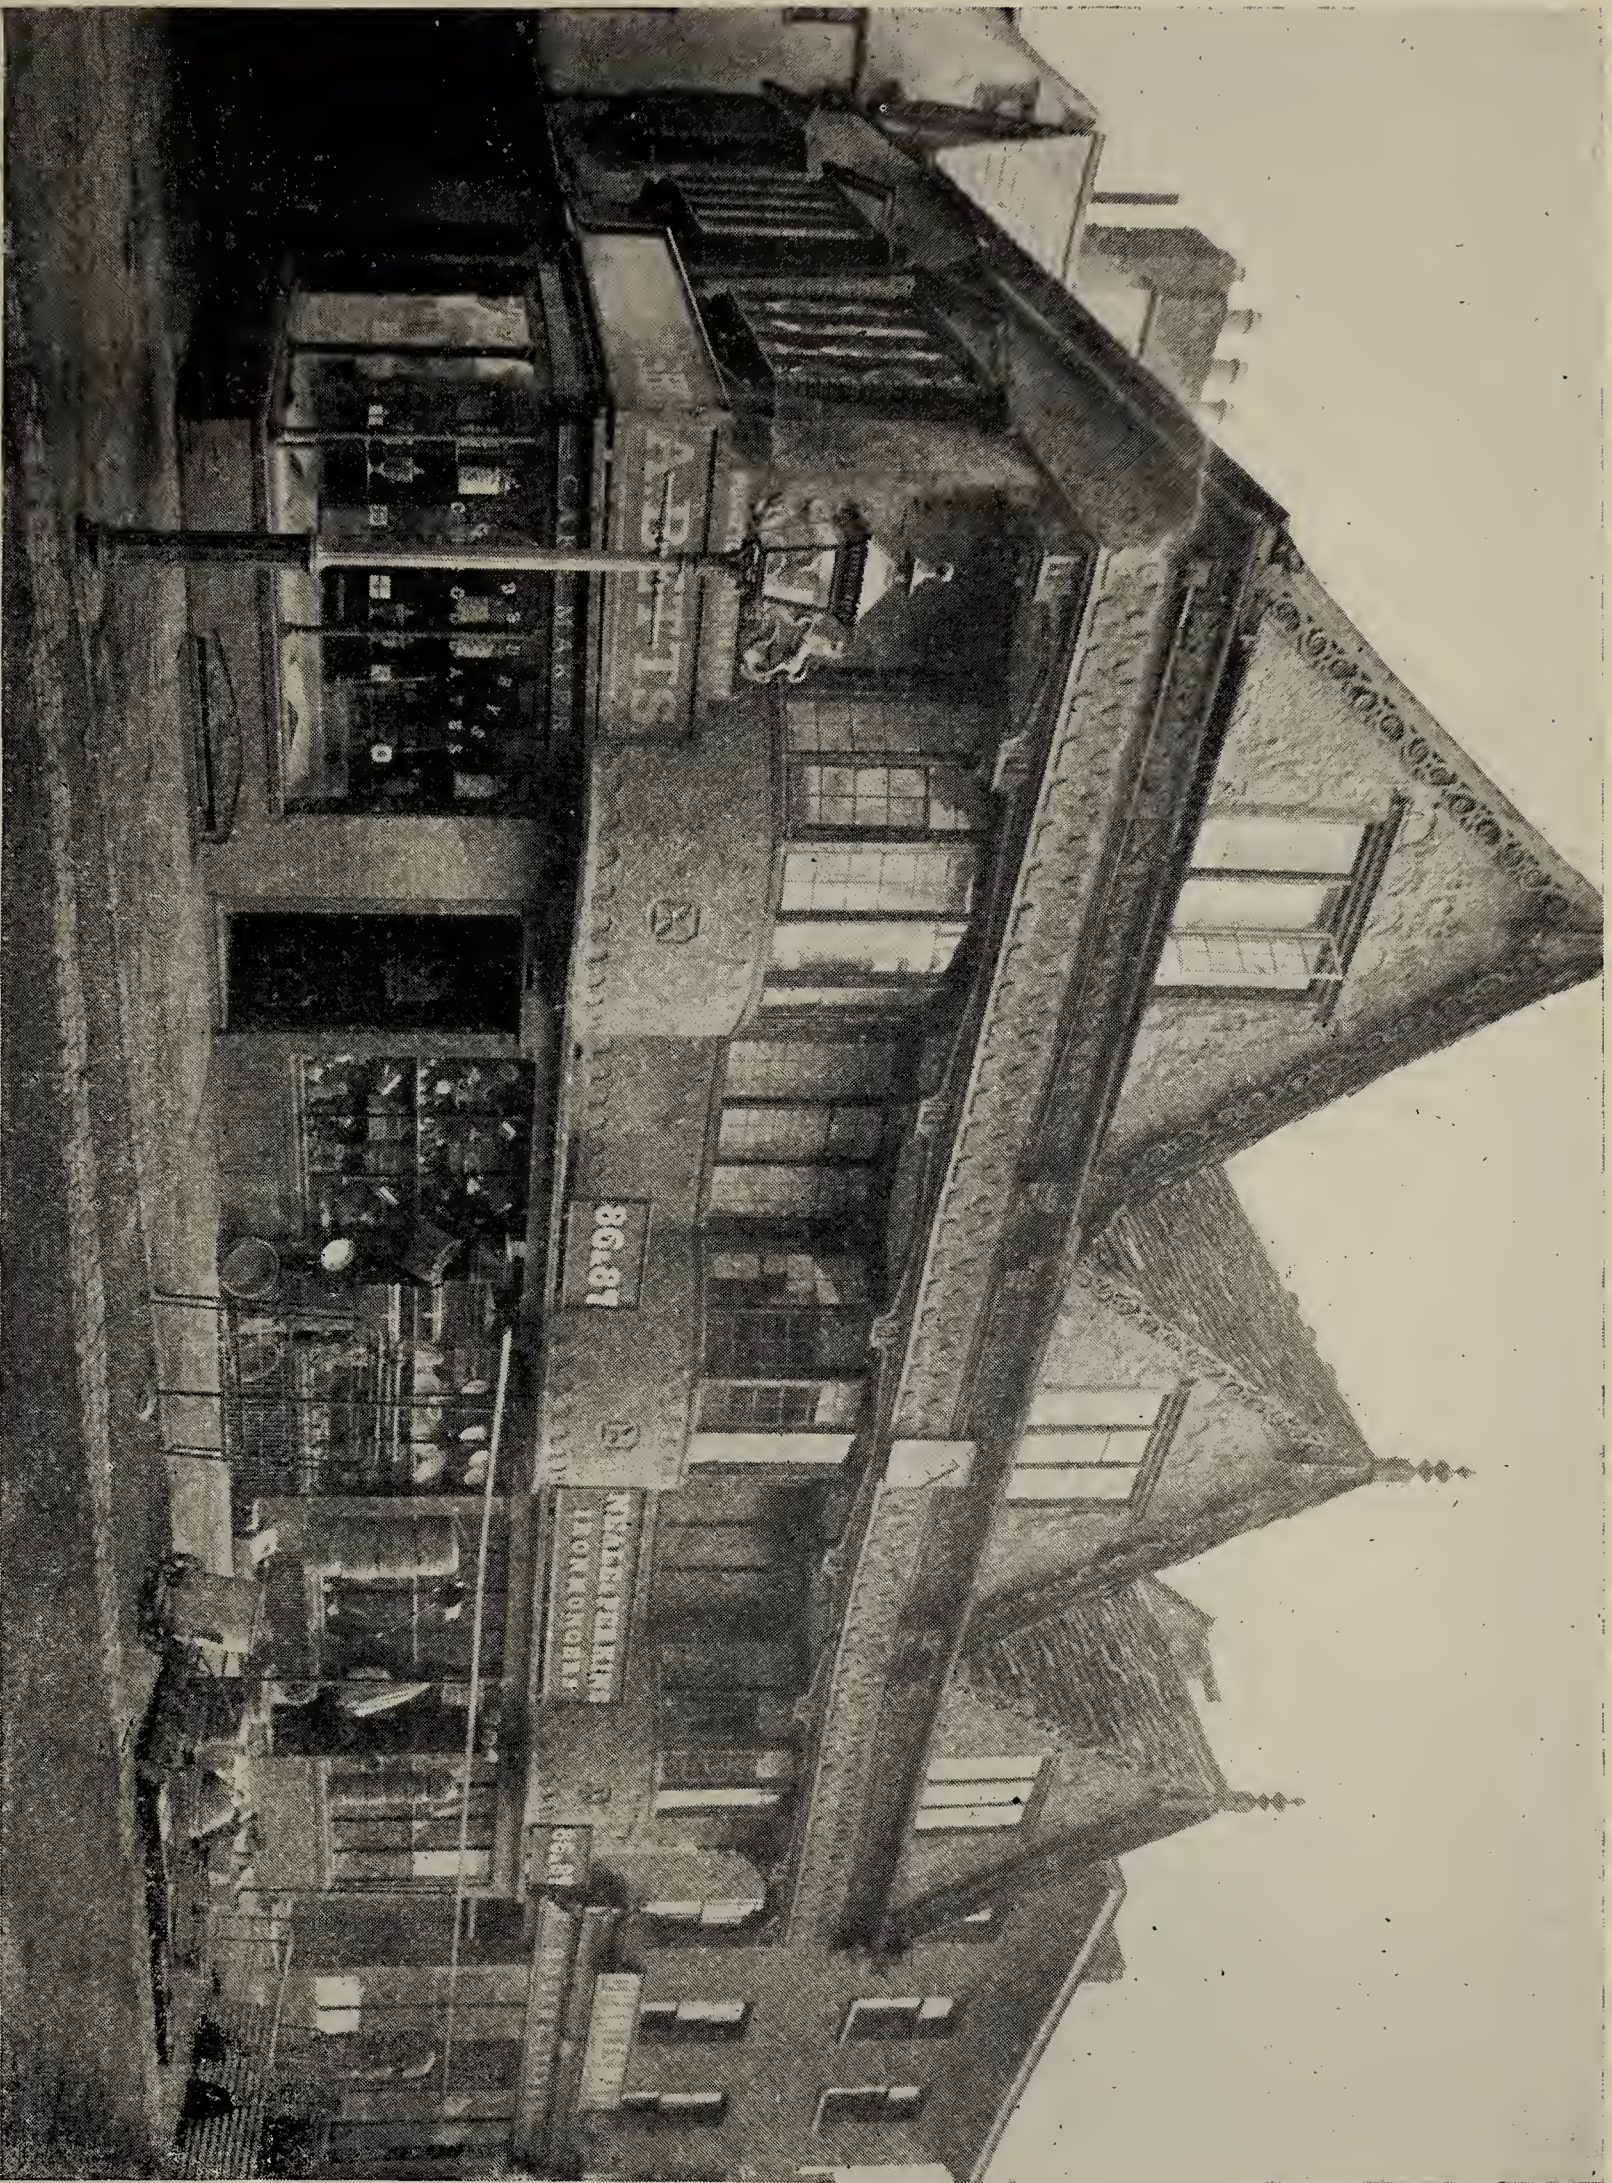

Allusion has been made to the three fine churches of Adderbury, Bloxham, and King's Sutton ; these are only the most beautiful of a neighborhood abounding in interesting churches, fifty-four of which, including a number of chapels, are enumerated and described in the History of Banbury, all of them within a radius of six miles from the town. In regard to these, a gentleman well versed in Gothic Architecture is quoted as saying: "It would be difficult to find another district which presents so many fine and interesting churches, abounding most in those very points which are most rare elsewhere. While in many districts the churches are all of the commoner, 15th century type, in this they are almost all of the rarer and more beautiful Decorated Style of the 14th."

Although Banbury has so unfortunately lost its most valuable monuments of antiquity, its Cross, its Castle, and its noble Church, which, if standing to-day, would render it a place of uncommon attractions, the town is still far from being without interest. Some of its old houses are good specimens of the Elizabethan style of building; with their pointed gables and richly ornamented fronts, they have an air of picturesqueness very much in contrast with the stiff modern brick dwellings. There are ancient fronts of inns, with their old gates bearing rude inscriptions, one of them dated as early as 1570. In one of these inns, the Reindeer, is a very fine room, the great window, the elaborately paneled wainscot, and the rich plaster ceiling of which, mark the house as having been a place of consequence.

Leaving now the town itself, with its architectural features and historical remains, we come to a subject of much greater interest and importance, namely, its people, whom we find to have possessed a decided character of their own, and one which may well claim our attention. It is a noteworthy and significant fact, especially in this connection, that the town of Banbury with the country adjoining was a prominent center of Puritanism. For this there were special reasons, founded, in the first place, on the peculiar character of the people just mentioned, and in the second, on the influence of the preachers who held livings in the town and in the neighboring villages.

With regard to the character of the people, Beesley says: "The people of Banbury, from the reign of Elizabeth to that of Charles II, had such reputation for being peculiarly zealous in matters relating to religion, as to excite the frequent and pointed remarks, not only of wits and humorous writers, but also of grave divines and historians." In illustration of this remark the author proceeds to give a large number of examples, taken from many different authorities, from among which the following are selected:—

"The worthy Fuller," among the proverbial expressions relating to Oxfordshire, mentions that of "Banbury Zeale, Cheese, and Cakes."

In 1614, Ben Jonson produced his celebrated comedy entitled Bartholomew Fair, among the Dramatis Personæ of which, the term "Banbury Man" seems to be intentionally given as an equivalent to Puritan.

Sir Walter Scott made his Presbyterian preacher in Woodstock (in Cromwell's time) remind his hearers of the superior zeal of the people of Banbury.

The chronicler Heath mentions Banbury as "that once famous place for zealotry."

Dr. Plot says, "It is plain the town was ever zealous in matters of religion."

It was a Banbury Puritan, of whom Richard Braithwaite, a humorous writer, in a poem composed about 1616, told the story that he hanged his cat on Monday for killing a mouse on Sunday, a subject often since used for the purpose of caricature.

Zeal continued till later times to be considered a characteristic of the town, for Addison in the Tattler in 1710 quotes and confirms Dr. Fuller's saying that Banbury was famous for Cakes* and Zeal.

John Wesley speaks in his Journal, October 1784, of the

*The fame of Banbury Cakes has continued to the present day; a shop, which is considered the original cake shop, is still in existence. "The cakes of the present time," says Beesley, "are probably pretty nearly the same as in the time of Ben Jonson. They are of an oval or diamond shape; the outside is formed of rich paste; the interior consists of fruit etc., resembling the contents of a mince pie."

religious feeling at Banbury. The old dissenting (Presbyterian) meeting-house in which he preached would not nearly contain the congregation who came to hear him, and Wesley says, "God uttered his voice, yea, and that a mighty voice; neither the sorrow nor the joy that was felt that night will quickly be forgotten." On the second day, notwithstanding the darkness and rain, the house was filled both above and below, and "never," he says, "did I see a people more prepared for the Lord."

Puritan principles began early to prevail in Banbury. In 1587-8, Sir Anthony Cope, its representative in Parliament, was imprisoned for a time in the Tower, for advocating certain changes in ecclesiastical matters, and in 1590, Thomas Brasbridge, then Vicar of Banbury, was deprived of his living on account of his Puritan views. It was in 1602 that the people of the town showed their zeal by destroying their "goodly Cross." Many eminent Puritan preachers officiated in the district about Banbury. The celebrated John Dod, one of the greatest and best of the early Puritans, was Rector of Hanwell, 1585-1605. He was succeeded there by Dr. Harris, afterwards President of Trinity College, Oxford, another celebrated Puritan preacher of the period. John Prime was the Puritan Vicar of Adderbury, where he was noted as a preacher from 1589 to 1596. Robert Cleaver was the Puritan Rector of Drayton, contemporary with Dod, and succeeded by Henry Scudder.

Of most interest, however, in this connection is William Whateley, Vicar of Banbury, for it was under his ministrations that Christopher and Julian Boreman lived, and it was no doubt by his hands that Samuel Boreman was baptized.

"This noted Puritan divine," says Beesley, "was born at Banbury in 1583, and was Vicar of the place during the greater part of the reign of James I and Charles I. As a preacher his fame became so great, that, as was said, 'some great wits would often slip out of Oxford on purpose to hear him.' He was educated at Christ College, Cambridge, and while there was the constant hearer of Dr. Chaderton, Perkins, and others who held Puritan opinions. After receiving his degree at Cambridge, being prevailed upon by friends who discerned his talents, to devote himself to the ministry, he entered Oxford. Soon after taking his degree there, he entered into holy orders, and was appointed lecturer at Banbury. When he had filled this situation five or six years, he was instituted to the Vicarage of Banbury, which he held nearly thirty years, until his death in 1639. His popularity in the town and throughout the adjacent country became extreme. For some time, alternately with other divines of similar Puritan sentiments, he preached a lecture at Stratford-on-Avon. He appears to have preached regularly at Banbury on Tuesdays. It is said of Dr. Harris, his contemporary at Hanwell, who was a constant preacher in his own church on Sundays, and on such festival days as did not interfere with the Lecture or Market at Banbury, that on Easter Mondays and Whitmondays especially, 'troops of Christians' came many miles from all quarters to hear him; on the morrow they were in like manner entertained at Banbury by Mr. Whateley. 'What a fair of souls,' says Durham, 'was then held at Hanwell and Banbury by those two brothers! How did religion flourish! How did professors thrive!' Whateley is recorded to have had 'a most able body and strong lunges'; tradition states that from his powers of voice and style of preaching, he was called, 'The Roaring Boy of Banbury.' In his life by Scudder it is said, 'According as his matter in hand and his auditory needed, he was both a terrible Boanerges, a sonne of thunder and also a Barnabas, a sonne of sweet consolation.' Harris of Hanwell used often to say that 'for all the requisites in a preacher, both for matter, methods, elocution, pronunciation, all, he seldom met with an abler man than his brother Whateley of Banbury.'"

"The learned Sir Edward Leigh remarks thus of Whateley: 'Of all the ministers I ever knew so experimentally, he was the most unblameable in his conversation. Oh, with what life and zeal would hee both preach and pray! and how strict and watchful was hee in his whole life.'"

“ Fuller says of him — ‘ He became minister in the town of his nativity ; and though generally people do not respect a prophet or preacher when a man, whom they knew as a child, yet he met there with deserved reverence to his person and profession. Sure I am that Banbury had a gracious, learned, and painful minister ; and this town need not be ashamed of, nor grieve at what scoffers say or write thereof ; only let them add knowledge to their zeal, and the more of zeal the better their condition.’ ”

“ Sir Edward Leigh, addressing the corporation and people of Banbury soon after Whateley’s death, says: ‘ Master Whateley was the most bountiful minister to the poore, I thinke in England of his means ; your consciences will witnesse that hee hath often pressed and urged this dutie upon you, and as hee was earnest in perswading his hearers to beneficence, so hee practised the same himself, entertaining some poore widdowes, or necessitous persons weekly, at the least, at his table, and giving the tenth of all his estate that way.’ ”

Whateley died triumphantly, May 10, 1639, at the age of 56. “ God took him away,” said Fuller, “ a little before the Civil War began, and before the sad desolation that fell on the town of Banbury in particular.”

“ The influence of the Puritan preachers and lecturers had its effect,” says Beesley, “ not only on the religious views and feelings of their hearers, but to them may be also attributed the sentiments of hostility to the government of Charles the First, which prevailed so generally in Banbury and the district around it, before and during the great civil conflicts which afterwards took place. It was in this immediate neighborhood that those secret consultations were carried on amongst the chiefs of the English malecontents, which led to open resistance to the Court, and when the Rebellion actually broke out in 1642, the town and castle of Banbury became, and until 1646, continued to be, involved in hot and furious conflict.” This Castle was held by one of the first agitators and leaders in the Rebellion, William,

BROUGHTON CASTLE NEAR BANBURY, HOME OF LORD SAYE AND SELE.

Viscount Saye and Sele, some notice of whom is here of especial interest, not only because he was the religious and political leader in the region where Samuel Boreman's early manhood was passed, but also on account of his connection with one of our New England settlements, as well as with the village of Claydon among others in Old England.

This influential nobleman, the son of Richard, Baron Saye and Sele, was born in 1582 at Broughton Castle, near Banbury. He was intimately associated, not only with the town, but with the whole Hundred of Banbury. In 1595, Queen Elizabeth leased to him and his two sisters, Ursula and Elizabeth, being yet minors, the Castle and the Hundred of Banbury, the amount of annual rent to be paid to them by the different villages being specified in the deed. Among them we find "Clayton, otherwise Claydon, 8^s;" and in 1652 we find Claydon again enumerated among the towns from which Lord Saye and Sele received rent. Beesley says of him: "Lord Saye was associated with Hampden in making in 1636 the celebrated stand against Ship Money. It was he who in connection with Lord Brooke, the leader of the population in the adjacent parts of Warwickshire, a few years before the Civil War, when the hopes of their party were low, meditated a settlement in New England. They founded in 1635 the town of Saybrook, Conn., and hither they intended to retreat if their efforts for justice and peace failed at home. It was at Broughton Castle, the seat of Lord Saye, two and three-quarter miles southwest of Banbury, and at Fawsley in Northamptonshire, thirteen miles northeast, that Hampden, Pym, St. John, Lord Saye and Lord Brooke, and later, in 1640, the Earls of Bedford, Warwick, Essex, Lord Holland, Nathaniel Fiennes, and the younger Vane, held their sittings, which were sometimes attended by other persons of great rank and property who were as deeply involved in the general plan of resistance." Lord Saye was looked upon as "the godfather of that party." He died at Broughton Castle in 1662, at the age of 80.

It is interesting to know that the family of Dr. Franklin was connected with Banbury. His uncle, John Franklin, was in trade there as a dyer ; to him the Doctor's father, Josiah Franklin, was apprenticed, and he continued to live in Banbury after his marriage, three of his older children being born there. It was from Banbury that he emigrated in 1682 to New England. Dr. Franklin's grandfather retired to Banbury in his old age, and died and was buried there. Dr. Franklin, in his Autobiography, mentions this fact, and speaks of having made a visit to his grave in 1758.

The County of Oxford is very irregular in shape ; its northern extremity is triangular, and like a wedge pushes itself, as it were, up between the two counties of Warwick and Northampton. At the apex of this triangle, or wedge, are what are called the three shire stones. These three stones are of small size — only a few pounds in weight — and are placed so closely together that a person can set one foot on the representative marks of the three counties. The parish of Claydon is small, consisting of about 1,170 acres, and forms this northernmost wedge of the county. The southern part of this wedge of land broadens, and rises into a rounded knoll, or small low hill, and it is upon the flattened top of this that the village itself is placed. It now consists of a few farm houses, mostly in an old and dilapidated condition, with several laborers' cottages in a similar state. There is a tradition among the inhabitants that the village used to be called "Golden Claydon," and notwithstanding its present decay, there are unmistakable evidences in the architectural features of some of the oldest houses, that they were formerly the residences of well-to-do people. Three or four of such houses are evidently of Tudor times, as the stone mullions and flat hooded stone caps of the windows, and the substantial character and general features of that period of architecture are prominent. These bespeak a time when the owners must have been of the sturdy Yeoman type, owning, cultivating, and living upon the produce of their own property.

* George William Palmer, for 27 years Vicar of Claydon, died there, Nov. 19, 1891, aged 61 years. He was buried in Claydon churchyard.

The village, though seated upon high ground, must have been, two or three centuries ago, a very quiet and secluded spot. It is, even now, quite off the highroad leading from any neighboring town to another. The nearest of such roads at the present day is reached by lanes across fields, and these lanes, two centuries since, could have been little other than bridle roads, or paths for foot passengers.

The houses of the village cluster round the Church, which stands about in the center on the flattened top of the knoll. This is a very interesting structure, and possesses evidences of having existed from times close upon the Norman Conquest. It was completely restored in the year 1860, but a good deal of the original masonry was preserved. Its square tower at the west end terminates in what is called a "saddle-back" roof, and is unique in the county of Oxford. There are only a few others — ancient ones — of the kind in England; one at Walton in Somersetshire, and another in Northumberland. In the interior, in the nave, are three perfect Norman arches, standing upon their short and massive round pillars, with their basements and capitals. These are in as good and solid a state of preservation as when the builder's skill laid them stone to stone — each stone showing itself clear and distinct, and save in one or two places, "still untouched by time's rude hand." In the chancel is a plain, solid, well-proportioned early English arch, and also another, a small Gothic arch, which from the weathering of the stones of its front shows that it once formed an outer doorway, and has been removed from its original place, now closed up, to its present position, where it forms an entrance from the Lady Chapel to the church. The church is entered on the south side through a fine Gothic porch, but the doorway itself is Norman. The oak door is ornamented with an oak bordering into which is worked the date, "1640," showing that some labor was bestowed upon that part of the church in the reign of Charles I.

The old Norman arches and the pillars upon which they stand, also the other arches before mentioned, and the tower — though later than Norman, but of Plantagenet or other periods of the best style of ecclesiastical architecture — standing where they have stood for centuries, must have been looked upon by the eyes of many generations, and presented to them exactly the same appearance as they do to ours at the present day; and close around, under the shadows of these hoar walls, in the green churchyard, the many generations of the forefathers of the village hamlet sleep "ad tubam."

At the time of Domesday Book, 1084, Banbury, Cropredy, etc., undoubtedly including Claydon, were among the possessions of the Bishops of Lincoln, who continued to hold them till the time of Edward VI (1547), when they were conveyed to the King. Claydon is first found mentioned by name in the time of Henry III and Edward I (1216 — 1307) in a list of "Military tenants of the Bishoprick of Lincoln" — "Ralph the son of Robert 1 knight (knight's fee) in Claendon (Claydon) & Wardinton."

An extract from the History of Banbury is of especial interest as it regards Claydon, showing the character of the land and soil as it was when cultivated by the ancestors of Thomas and Samuel Boreman.

"The rich red land of Oxfordshire, which comprises nearly 80,000 acres, is situated wholly in the northern part of the county, about Banbury, and it far exceeds the rest of the county in fertility. This red district in respect of soil, may be considered as the glory of the county. It is deep, sound, friable, yet capable of tenacity, and adapted to every plant that can be trusted to it by the industry of the cultivators."

Is there not here foundation sufficient for the truth of the tradition concerning "Golden Claydon"?

Note. Some further particulars in regard to Claydon Church (St. James) are taken from a detailed description printed at the time of its reopening (Mch. 7, 1861) after its restoration.

INTERIOR OF CLAYDON CHURCH.

“ The Church of Claydon consists of chancel, nave, and tower, with a north aisle opening eastward into a Lady Chapel. The chancel and nave are about 60 ft. by 15 ft. ; the north aisle about 6 ft. by 20 ft. ; the chapel 12 ft. by 30 ft. The east window has three lights ; the stained glass of the center represents the Crucifixion, and on either side, Our Lord bearing the Cross, and the Resurrection. The two southern windows contain, one, the Crucifixion of St. Peter, with St. James and St. John on either side, a memorial to the late Mrs. Tait, wife of the incumbent (1861) ; the other St. James the greater. The restoration of the church may be considered a success. Its archaic character has been retained ; it is not the church as it was at any time, but the scattered beauties of former and later periods have been gathered together. It tells how it fared from age to age ; its Norman birth, its Plantagenet growth, and lastly, of its having fallen in its old age on evil days, the Laudian. There have remained untouched the piers of two arches and the arches themselves, which are Norman ; also the doorway of the Chancel and the Tower. The capitals of the two piers show that the mouldings were cut before the figuring was carved. When we examine the arcade as a whole, we see how far it continued, where stopped and recommenced, the narrowness of the original aisle, and how it is crossed by a late Early English arch, prettily corbelled with a wimpled head where it spreads into a ‘ Ladye Chapel,’ with its opening for a view of the high altar, and another of approach. The reredos is in colored alabaster, the sedilia in Caen stone ; each is three arched, of the decorated order, and well carved. The font is Norman in design.”

THE OLD HOME IN THE CIVIL WAR.

So far as Thomas and Samuel Boreman are concerned, enough has perhaps been said of their early home and its history. It is not, however, to be forgotten that though they themselves were now safe from oppression in a land of freedom, trouble was coming to those left behind. Hardly could Samuel Boreman's letter from his mother have been despatched, before there broke out in England a great and dreadful Civil War, lasting for years, until it ended in the execution of the King whose conduct had provoked it. The scene of many events in that war during its first years was close about Banbury and Claydon, where still lived the greater part of Thomas and Samuel Boreman's family left in England. Interest in them would lead us to try to obtain some idea of what may have been their later experiences, by a study of the events of the war so far as they concerned their home. For this purpose we continue a little farther our gleanings from the History of Banbury.

Remembering that the date of Julian Boreman's letter is Feb. 5, 1641, or according to our present Calendar, Feb. 5, 1642, the new year then beginning March 25, instead of January 1, as now, we read as follows :—

“The dispute between the King and the Parliament arrived at a crisis in the beginning of 1642. The House of Commons on the 9th of February proceeded to nominate and recommend persons whom they desired to be entrusted with the militia of the kingdom, Lord Saye being named for Oxfordshire, Lord Brook for Warwickshire, etc. On the 5th of March the Parliament published their celebrated Ordinance, appointing lieutenants of the several counties to array and arm the militia, which was considered a declaration of war. The King's Commission of Array followed, and the summer was employed by both parties in making preparations for war.”

The following is quoted from a contemporary account of the first military proceedings at Banbury, given by one of the Puritan party. It relates to an attempt made by Lord Brook (Parliamentarian) in July, 1642, to convey some ordnance from Banbury to strengthen his Castle at Warwick, distant 19 miles north. Warwick lies in the same general direction from Banbury as Claydon, and the road traversed by Lord Brook runs within three miles of the village.

“My Lord Brooke comming from Warwicke, riding all Friday night, came to Banbury by foure of the clock on Saturday morning, bringing with him about a hundred men to guard them (the ordnance) to his Castle, and going out of Banbury about nine of the clock that morning, divers of Banbury gentlemen and others thereabouts going out with them; they had not gone above foure miles,* but the Earle of North-hampton (Royalist) appeared to them, accompanied with about 150 or 200 horse, and about 200 musketeers and pikes; the news thereof being carried back to Banbury, and townes adjoyning, presently the Lord Brooke was assisted with more men and munitions, the country came in very thick to his assistance, and but few to the Earle of North-hamptons; but my Lord Brookes company increasing in a few houres to the number of a thousand at least, women also to his company bringing in Beere and Victuall in abundance, and six or seven cart-load of harrowes to welcome their horses.”

The result of this encounter was that the ordnance was returned to Banbury, and put into the Castle for safe keeping. The Banbury men, afterwards hearing rumors of the Earl of Northampton's coming to fetch the Ordnance, prepared and fortified their town. “The countrey hearing of their fears and dangers, divers came in thereabouts, and about 1500 out of North-hamptonshire with their armes, colours and captaines came in freely,” etc. The inhabitants of the town afterwards hearing reports that an overpowering multitude of the enemy were coming upon them,

“They gave ear to the treacherous advice of one Capt. Austin, who persuaded them, that seeing now there was such a mighty force coming

* They must here have been but a short distance from Claydon, and this skirmish was probably the first practical experience of the war its inhabitants had.

against them, and their aide was weak, so that it was not possible to keep the town, he therefore advised them, it was the best way to get the best of their things into the Castle, and so secure themselves and children, and some of their goods, which after some debate they were most unhappily persuaded to, and on Sunday night removed their fortifications about the town and gates, and drew them to the Castle to fortify that more; which, when the rest of the men, the women and children knew thereof, their was on a sodain such a lamentable schreeking and crying out throughout the town not to be exprest with pen, whereby the whole town were in such a maze, distraction, and confusion, they knew not what they did. At which time also those few neighbors of the adjacent towns that were left and stayed to assist them, fled also; then also the women and children of the towne at the privatest wayes they could find ran out of the town, carried and lug'd away their children and goods all night, and every one cast about which way to shift for themselves; and those who had brought much of their best goods and children into the towne before from adjacent villages (supposing they would be safer there than in their own townes, they looking to be presently ransackt and pillaged) came hurrying all night into the town as fast, to fetch away what they had trusted there."

Beesley continues:—

"In the Midland Counties the King's Commission of Array was published only partially, and generally with very little success. Very different was the progress of the Parliamentarian party. The parishes and hundreds, often with their preachers at the head, mustered at their market houses to march forth for training. In the dearth of all the ordinary implements of war, arms and accoutrements of the most grotesque fashion now left the walls where, from the time of the civil wars of the Two Roses, they had hung as hereditary trophies in the manor-houses, the churches, and the cottages of the yeomen. It was not till some months afterwards, when the stores of Hull, and Newcastle, and Plymouth, and of the Tower of London, were distributed, that the matchlock and pistol found their way into the hands of the 'ordered musqueteers and dragooners' in the country parts; and even to the end of the civil wars, large bodies of men, besides the regular pikemen, were furnished only with rude lances."

On the 28th of August, 1642, three troops of horse which had been sent by the King to the defence of Oxford, on reaching Brackley, nine miles east of Banbury, were so closely pursued by the country people who had armed themselves with pikes, bills, and pitchforks, that they lost more than 60 horses, and 60 or 70 men, and much gold, silver, and other valuables.

The first battle of the Civil War was fought, Oct. 23, 1642, at Edgehill, five miles west of Claydon. The Royal Army was commanded by King Charles in person, who, in his advance towards the south, on the night of the 21st slept at Southam, about seven miles north of Claydon, and on the 22d, passing within sight at least of the village, he came with his two sons (afterwards Charles II and James II) to Edgecot, three miles southeast of it. The main army of the King lay encamped that night between Edgecot and Cropredy, while the rear, under Prince Rupert, took up quarters at Lord Spencer's seat, Wormleighton, two miles north of Claydon, and in full view from it across the fields. At three o'clock the next morning, Sunday the 23d, Charles, having received intelligence that the Parliament's army was rapidly advancing from the west, gave orders for all his army to march immediately to Edgehill to meet them.

The road taken on this march, crossing the Cherwell at Cropredy, passes within less than one and one-half miles of Claydon, and by this route the army returned after the battle to the same quarters.

The battle of Edgehill was a hard fought one; the victory was doubtful, being claimed by both sides; on the whole it appears that the advantage lay with the Parliament. The slaughter was very great, but no accurate record of the number slain is to be found. It has been variously estimated at from 1,000 to 5,000. The Parliamentarians seem to have lost more in private soldiers, the King's army most in persons of distinction. It is on record that the sound of the ordnance could be heard twenty or thirty miles off.

Nearly two years later an important battle took place nearer yet to Claydon, for only two miles distant, was fought in June, 1644, the battle of Cropredy Bridge, between the Royalists commanded by King Charles, and the Parliamentarians under Col. Waller, in which the latter was defeated, it is said with the loss of 600 killed and 700 taken prisoners. After this battle the King withdrew his forces from this region, "because the provisions for his army were becoming scanty in a part of the country which was already desolated by a two years' war."

During the winter of 1642-3, six regiments of the King's horse were quartered in the county of Oxford, the inhabitants being obliged either to receive the men and horses to be maintained, or to pay a tax as an equivalent. A letter written from Banbury, Dec. 29, 1642, says, "Wee cannot enjoy anything that is our owne. The towne of Banbury, for the most part the chieftest men, are wholly undone all alreadie, and we in the countrey cannot long subsist: For we have great Taxes layd upon us, and if wee will not pay them, ourselves and goods are both taken away."

Banbury and its Castle during all the Civil War occupied a conspicuous place in the national annals, and was at times the center of most interest in the kingdom. The Castle was taken by the King's forces in the first year of the war. It was a fortification of great strength, and of much importance to the royal cause, because it was the stronghold by which the King maintained his footing in the center of the kingdom. Its capture was therefore greatly desired by Parliament, and for four years it continued to be the object of vigorous attacks. In 1644 it withstood what was called "the Great Siege," which lasted over three months. When it was at last taken in 1646, it was not till after a siege of 15 weeks. The maintenance of the strong garrison needed to hold this fortress for the King in a region whose inhabitants were ardently attached to Parliament, could only be secured by robbing and pillaging the surrounding country, which suffered greatly in consequence of the frequent raids thus made upon it.

"The Parish Register of Banbury," says Beesley, "is carried on with great regularity from its commencement in the first year of Elizabeth (1558) until the 30th of May, 1642, after which there is a blank till the 25th of December in the same year. A memorandum here made says: 'In those 7 months here recited in the first begininge of the warre the ages of those that were baptized were burnt and could not possible be recouered any more to be set downe.' The earliest effects of the war as regards Banbury are therefore not to be gleaned from the Register; but the records which immediately follow, compared with those that precede this date, sufficiently and terribly point out the consequences of the war. From the amount of deaths in former years varying from thirty to ninety-eight, the numbers rise in 1643 to 255, and in 1644 to 297, and these without including such soldiers as fell in any numbers in combat, whose burials are not alluded to. But the Plague had followed in the train of war; and the mortality does not diminish until the close of strife in 1647, when an equally awful fact is elicited: the depopulated state of the town at once reduced the annual number of deaths to twenty-six!"

The desolation of this part of England caused by the War may be seen from the following:—Camden, who wrote before the Civil War, had said that Oxfordshire was a "rich and fertile country; the lower parts are cultivated with pleasant fields and meadows, the hills are covered with great store of woods." Taylor, the "Water Poet," writing in 1636, said:—"Oxfordshire is scarce second to any county in England for plenty of corne and pasturage, wood and fruits of all sorts that this kingdom yields." But Dr. Plot, who wrote after the Civil War, says:—"The hills, 'tis true, before the late unhappy wars, were well enough beset with woods, where now 'tis so scarcity that 'tis a common thing to sell it by weight, and not only at Oxford, but at many other places in the northern parts of the shire; where if it is brought to mercat it is ordinarily sold for about one shilling the hundred."

ORIGIN OF THE NAME; CHANGES IN SPELLING; LOCALITIES WHERE FOUND; OTHER BORE-MAN FAMILIES IN ENGLAND.

From a Dictionary of English Family Names by Mark Anthony Lower, recognized authority on this subject, the following is quoted concerning the name BOREMAN.

“BOREMAN (See Borrer.)

BORRER — Borrer appears in Sussex from the 15th Century under the forms of Bourer, Boorer, Borer, and Borrer, the extra r being a somewhat recent addition. These, together with the Atte-Bore, Atte-Bowre, de la Bore, BOREMAN, and other modifications, are probably derivable from the Anglo Saxon būr, a bower, inner room, or bedchamber. Every baronial residence had its ‘Ladyes Bower,’ and the original Atte-Bore, or de la Bore, (subsequently modified to Borer), was probably the chamberlain of a great feudal household. This supposition is strongly supported by the Anglo-Saxon name for chamberlain, which is ‘bur-thegn,’ bower-thane, one who was admitted to the private apartments and councils of the lord.”

The derivation given by Mr. Lower is confirmed by the spelling of the name in early wills. In the three earliest found the form is BOWREMAN, these three representing families in as many different counties of England. The first is that of Robert Bowreman, “Citizen and taylor of London,” 1454, who speaks of having been born at Chart in Kent. In 1491 we have the will of Richard Bowreman of Warham in Dorsetshire; and in 1503 that of Dame Joan Bowreman of the Isle of Wight (Hampshire). In the 17th Century we find some of the decendants of the Isle of Wight family writing their name BOREMAN, while a branch of the same family, which early settled in Devonshire, has maintained to the present day the spelling BOWERMAN, an early variation of the original Bowreman. There were other families of the name in Oxfordshire, contemporary with those in Claydon, and no doubt related to them, who wrote themselves Bowerman. In Kent, where the name was by far most frequent, it came to be almost universally Boreman. Other forms were BOURMAN or BOUREMAN, BOARMAN, BOORMAN, or BOOREMAN. Sometimes it was BURMAN, as shown in an administration granted in 1587, where a son, "WILLIAM BOURMAN," is executor of the estate of his father, "ROBERT BURMAN." This latter form is seen in the Claydon Register, where known members of the family are written "BURMAN." Another example where a different spelling was adopted by members of the same family, is found in a will in 1683, where "GEORGE BOREMAN" appoints as his executor his nephew, "JOHN BOWERMAN," who is called in the administration account, "JOHN BOWERMAN, alias BOREMAN." The latter spelling prevails in England at the present day; a number of Boremans or Bormans are found in the London Directory.

With all the liberties that have been taken in spelling the original BOWREMAN, it would seem very natural that it should sometimes have been confounded with the not uncommon name Bowman, (in New England occasionally written Bo-man,) but that has seldom been found to be the case. Whatever have been the changes and additions, from quite early times to the present, the r has generally been clung to tenaciously, and the genealogist of an inquiry like the present has little reason to be tempted to search for the owner of a name omitting that important letter.

BORDMAN or BOARDMAN* was from the first entirely dis-

*The derivation of BOARDMAN is thus given in Mr. Lower's Dictionary;—

"BOARDER, BOARDMAN, a cottager. (See BORDE.)

BORDE, BOORD, BOARD, (old French, borde) a little house, lodging, or cottage of timber standing alone in the fields, and in some parts of France, any messuage, farm or farmhouse. In Domesday the occupants of cottages are called 'bordarii,' and amounted to 82,119 in number. The French form of the surname is DE LA BORDE."

tinct from BOREMAN, and has an altogether different derivation. A family of this name (now also spelt BOARDMAN) were early residents of Cambridge, Mass., their ancestor undoubtedly being Andrew Bordman of Cambridge, England, some account of whose family is included in the chapter on the Boreman Family in New England, where may be found mention also of Thomas Boardman of Yarmouth, the only other early settler of that name. Curiously and unaccountably, the descendants both of Thomas Boreman of Ipswich and of Samuel Boreman of Wethersfield, having at first generally employed the spelling BORMAN, by inserting after a few generations the d, and sometime later the a, gradually changed their name to its present form, and so made it not only different from the one by which their ancestors were called, but identical with that of an entirely distinct family.* Such changes are much to be regretted; they were, however, by no means rare among the early settlers, whose names in many instances came to be quite as different from the original form, as was the case with that of Samuel and Thomas Boreman's descendants.

As has already been said, by far the largest number of Boremans in the 16th and 17th centuries were to be found in the County of Kent. At New Romney, a town on its southeastern coast, there was in 1450 a grange called Bouremans Barns

*At Wethersfield the change from BOREMAN or BORMAN to BORDMAN first appears among the family records in that of Richard Bordman of Newington in 1707, nearly 70 years after the first appearance of Samuel Boreman in New England. The new form was adopted by most of the name in Wethersfield till 1780, in which year the a is first added in the record of Elijah Boardman, son of Israel of Newington. Similar changes in the Ipswich family seem to have occurred at about the same periods. The new modes of spelling as they appear in the records of births, marriages, and deaths, indicate of course only approximately the times of the changes. Some families would be likely to keep to the old form longer than others. It is easy to find instances where the same person might have his name spelt in all three ways in succession, as is the case of Richard of Newington, above, whose birth was recorded as a BORMAN, his marriage as a BORDMAN, and his death on his gravestone as that of a BOARDMAN.

(Bourmannys Bernis). Boremans were inhabitants of towns here and there, all over the county — near the coast, in the interior, and on the banks of the Thames as far up as Greenwich and Deptford. As might be expected from the nearness of their homes to the city many of them were also to be found in London. Living, as some did, near the coast, or on the Thames, a considerable number followed the sea, or were engaged in shipbuilding. An early example of one of the last named occupation is found in an account of shipbuilding expenses in 1519, in the time of Henry VIII; “To William Bowerman for making a great cat-hook for the Henry Grace à Dieu, 4s.” In London they were merchants or craftsmen of various kinds; here and elsewhere they call themselves in their wills gentleman or esquire, yeoman, husbandman, shepherd, merchant, cutler, tailor, mercer, hosier, weaver, cordwainer, shipwright, etc., but in very many cases no mention is made of their calling.

One of the Boremans who was knighted, was Sir William Boreman of Greenwich, 1613—1686. He seems to have been the son of William Boreman* of Greenwich, 1564—1646, who held the Office of the King’s Locksmith during the reigns of James I, and Charles I, as appears in the following: — “Jan. 10, 1637.8. Warrant for payment of £265 — 7s. — 6d. to William Boreman, His Majesty’s Locksmith, in full sat-

* Among the inscriptions in the old church at Greenwich, a record of which has been preserved, was the following by the door against the wall: it is in Latin, and is supposed to refer to William Boreman, the King’s Locksmith.

“ Here lies William Boreman, armiger, who after having during sixty years served most faithfully Queen Elizabeth, and Kings James and Charles, died peacefully June 30, 1646, in the 82nd year of his age.

Susanna and Jane.

isfaction for his making anew and altering all the locks of his Majesty's lodging and garden at Whitehall, and of St. James Park, and making keys thereto." The son, afterwards Sir William, was "Clerk of the Kitchen" in the household of Charles I, and after the Restoration (1660), calling himself "Clerk Comptroller of the Household," he petitions the King for certain privileges, and an increase of pension, "certifying that he supplied the family of Princess Henrietta with food for 28 weeks during the siege of Exeter, and on its surrender, gave them money for their journey to London, whereby he incurred debts of £650, which kept him in prison four months." He appears to have been knighted for this service. At his death in 1686, he held the "Office of 2nd Clerk of the Green Cloth in Ordinary" to his Majesty Charles II. He left no children, and endowed in his will a school for poor boys in Greenwich, called the Green Coat School.

Pepys in his Diary makes numerous allusions to Sir William Boreman; they often dined together at various houses, or Pepys was invited by him to his home in Greenwich. Nov. 16, 1665, Pepys speaks of borrowing a horse from Mr. Boreman's son to ride to Erith; as no mention is made of any children in Sir William's will, this one must have died before his father. In an entry, June 14, 1662, Pepys, who had just attended the execution of Sir Harry Vane, but on account of the crowd was unable to approach within hearing distance, gives at length the last words of Vane, as they were told him by Mr. Boreman, who stood on the crowded scaffold. In a letter of Oct. 10, 1685, Pepys speaks of "the statutes designed by Sir William Boreman for the government of his new Mathematical School at Greenwich, in imitation of that of the King's at Christ's Hospital," and of "meeting the Founder upon the place," adding, "and indeed it is a deed of the old man's very praiseworthy."

A brother of Sir William Boreman was Dr. Robert Boreman (died 1675), Rector of the Church of St. Giles in the Fields, London, and author of several Memoirs of distinguished persons. Pepys speaks of meeting him, March 6, 1666-7, at a dinner at Lord Crewe's, where the party were much interested in an account of the recent conversion of two papist women, given by "Dr. Boreman, who is preacher at St. Gyles in the Fields." Another of the Greenwich Boremans,* a relative of Sir William's, was George Boreman, merchant, who in 1657 was granted the "Office of Ballasting Ships" in the Thames, at a rent of £1,000.

Another clergyman of the name was Rev. Thomas Bourman, D.D., of Kingston-on-Thames, born 1616; also Dr. Andrew Boreman of Stratford, Wiltshire, 1645.

Allusion has been made to the Boreman family of the Isle of Wight, some account of whom, taken from the history of Hampshire, 1795, is of interest.

"The manor of Brooke, Isle of Wight, was held by the family of Roucle for several generations, when the name became extinct in two daughters. One of them, Joan, married Thomas Bowerman of Brooke, the other, a Gilbert. They held it in common till 1550, when Nicholas Bowerman purchased the other half. The Bowermans possess the living. The church was repaired by the late W. Bowerman Esq., who also rebuilt the Manor House, which is situated in a rich vale. King Henry VIII, coming to the Isle of Wight in the 14th year of his reign, honored Joanna Bowerman,† then Lady of the Manor of Brooke, with a visit. In acknowledgement of his entertainment, he not only left a drinking horn for a present, but gave her a warrant for a fat buck of the season to be yearly delivered out of the Forest of Carisbrook during her life, which warrant is now in possession of the family of Bowermans."

One of Dame Joan's descendants was Major Thomas Boreman, Deputy Governor of the Isle of Wight, and Governor of Sandown Castle in the time of the Commonwealth. Some further particulars of this family are found in their Pedigree in the Visitations of Hampshire, Somersetshire, and Devonshire. The above-named Nicholas Bowerman of the Isle of Wight, grandson of Dame Joanna, married Elizabeth

* The son of another brother of Sir William Boreman died unmarried in the Colonies, for, Jan. 23, 1679, administration on the estate of Thomas Boreman, bachelor, lately deceased in Virginia, was granted to his uncle, William Boreman, "miles" (knight).

† In her will of 1503 spelt Bowreman.

Russell, "daughter of James Russell Esq. and sister of the first John Russell, Earl of Bedford." Their younger son, John Bowerman, settled at Hemyock in Devonshire. He had three sons; John, the eldest, "preest and confessor to the nuns of Canon Lee"; William, the second, "a preest, batchellor of the civil law, and Canon of the Cathedral Church of Wells" (afterwards Sub-Dean of Wells Cathedral); the third, "James Esq., heir to his brothers" (who being priests, dropped from the succession), was a merchant in Hemyock. He died in 1547, leaving a large family of children; of these, Andrew inherited the Manor; William, the third son, was of Wells in Somerset, and his daughter Margaret married Thomas Goodwyn, Bishop of Bath and Wells, while one of his granddaughters was the wife of John Young, Dean of Winchester. Three of the other sons of James Bowerman of Hemyock were merchants, viz.: Laurence of Hemyock, Simon of London, and Hugh. These three all married Spanish wives; Laurence left no children; Hugh died "at Malago in Spain," (also called "Malligay in the Kingdom of Granado.") One of Hugh's two children was "Sir Andrew Bourman of Malago in Spain, knight," living in 1619; the other, Cicely, wife of "Sir Emanuel de bona Vedos, knight." Simon, who was of London, had ten children; among them, Hugh is called "principal to the council of the English Merchants in Spain," and another, Simon, "Counsell to the merchants in Spayne."

It will be observed that all the Boremans hitherto mentioned had their home in the extreme south of England, a fact which tends to confirm the theory that they originated in that part of the island. So far as the present search has extended, with two or three exceptions,* the only Boremans found in more northern counties were those in Claydon, and its neighborhood more or less remote, that is, in Oxfordshire, and the adjacent parts of Warwickshire and Northamptonshire. Here they were far less numerous than in Kent, and may easily be supposed to have been all descendants of some ancestor who at an earlier, but not very remote day, left his more southern home, and came to these parts.*

The earliest Boreman in the region of Claydon of whom any record has been found, is WILLIAM BOREMAN OF BANBURY, enrolled in the list of that town in a Lay Subsidy of 1525, when he is the only one of his name in Banbury Hundred. Twenty-one years later, in 1546, five of the name appear in the Hundred, all in towns near Banbury. One of these, Thomas of Claydon, ancestor of the two New England emigrants, was doubtless William's son, as were probably some, if not all of the others.† These five Boremans appearing in 1546 in Banbury Hundred, would sufficiently account for there being, two or three generations later, even a larger number of families of the name than have been found, scattered over northern Oxfordshire, as well as in adjoining portions of Warwickshire and Northamptonshire. That there

* We may note in this connection that the family of the Sayes of whom we have spoken as being intimately associated with the northern part of Oxfordshire, and particularly with Banbury and Claydon, had its original home in Kent and Sussex. Their ancestor in the early part of the 15th century was James de Fenys, the first Lord Saye and Sele, beheaded in Jack Cade's Rebellion in 1451. This Lord Saye, among other high offices, had held those of Constable of Dover and of Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, the official residence of the latter being near Deal in Kent. We find also that the Sayes held possession of Deptford from very early times. It was the first Lord Saye's son William (died 1471) who married the heiress of Sir Thomas Wickam, knight, and thus became possessed of the Lordship of Broughton Castle, near Banbury, where the family afterwards resided. Since we find Boremans, not only in the counties where this family originated, but in their very homes at Deal and Deptford, it is by no means an improbable supposition that the ancestor of the Oxfordshire Boremans may have come from Kent somewhere about 1450 with the first Lord of Broughton.

† This subject is more fully discussed under William of Banbury in the Pedigree of Oxfordshire Boremans.

was another more remote ancestor in these parts, back of William of Banbury, 1525, appears in the fact that contemporary with him there lived in the parish of Shottery, Stratford-on-Avon, 15 miles northwest of Claydon, another of the name, Richard Boreman, whose will, interesting on account of its quaint spelling, is here given. It is dated 1538, and is to be found in the Probate Registry at Worcester.

Other Boremans whose names have been found in the region around Claydon are as follows. No attempt has yet been made to discover their connection with the Claydon family, or with each other; a further search of records and Parish Registers would no doubt result in throwing much light on this subject.

Matthew Boreman, Great Borton; * inventory exhibited Sept. 24, 1610.

Thomas Boreman, "the elder," of Culworth, † Northamptonshire, "Sheperd." Will proved May 5, 1657. Wife to have during her life the room "where I lie, one pair of stairs high, and the room under it," both near the barn to which she is to have free access. Heaynes Boreman, eldest son; son Andrew, £20; son Thomas, whose wife is Marie, to have the messuage after his mother's death.

John Bowerman of Banbury; administration granted to his son John Bowerman Aug. 27, 1649.

Edward Boarman of Tysoe,* Warwickshire, administration granted to his wife, Anne Boreman, July, 1657.

Thomas Booreman, Charlbury,† Oxfordshire, 1642. (Lay Subsidy.)

William Booreman of Tackley,‡ Oxfordshire, administration granted to his wife Katherina, May 23, 1604.

John Burman of Whitfield, Oxfordshire, administration granted to William Bridges, Professor of Theology, Oct. 15, 1615.

Christian Bowerman of Idbury,§ Oxfordshire, Widow, will proved June 18, 1614; property left to relatives of other names.

John Boreman, Draiton,|| 1546 (Lay Subsidy).

John Burman, Hanwell,|| 1546 (Lay Subsidy).

Thomas Bourman, Cropredy,|| 1546 (Lay Subsidy).

William Bourman, Bloxham,|| 1546 (Lay Subsidy).

The frequency of Thomas as a Christian name is noticeable in most of the Boreman families in England; William is almost as common, and also John. In Claydon itself not only is this family extinct, but there remain no descendants of any of the earlier inhabitants among its whole population, now numbering about 300; all are of families which have come there to live in more or less recent years. It is not known to what extent the name occurs in other parts of Oxfordshire at the present day. It is said that there are families of the name now living in the vicinity of Daventry, Northamptonshire, about ten miles northeast of Claydon.

PEDIGREE of the Boreman Family of Claydon near Banbury, Oxfordshire, England, showing the ancestry of Samuel Boreman of Ipswich, 1638-1641, Wethersfield, 1641-1673, and of Thomas Boreman of Ipswich, 1634-1673. (For account of the individuals numbered, see pp. 81-130.)

PEDIGREE OF BOREMANS OF CLAYDON, NEAR BANBURY, ENGLAND.

I. William¹ Boreman, of Banbury, Oxfordshire, in 1525, was in all probability the father of Thomas Boreman of Claydon, from whom the American family can be clearly traced. His name is found in a Lay Subsidy* list for Banbury Hundred† in the 16th year of Henry VIII (1525); WILL. BOREMAN, BANBURY, IN BONIS, 40 s. 7 d. (his tax on goods). He is the only Boreman in all the towns included in Banbury Hundred in this Subsidy list of 1525. Twenty-one years later, in 1546, another Subsidy was called for, when five other Boremans appear in the lists of various towns near Banbury, some of whom, at least, may be concluded to be William's sons, especially as one of the five, Thomas of Claydon, is known to have called his eldest son William, the succession thus begun being kept up in his family through five generations—William,¹ Thomas,² William,³ Thomas,⁴ William⁵—the last William dying in childhood, and thus ending the series.

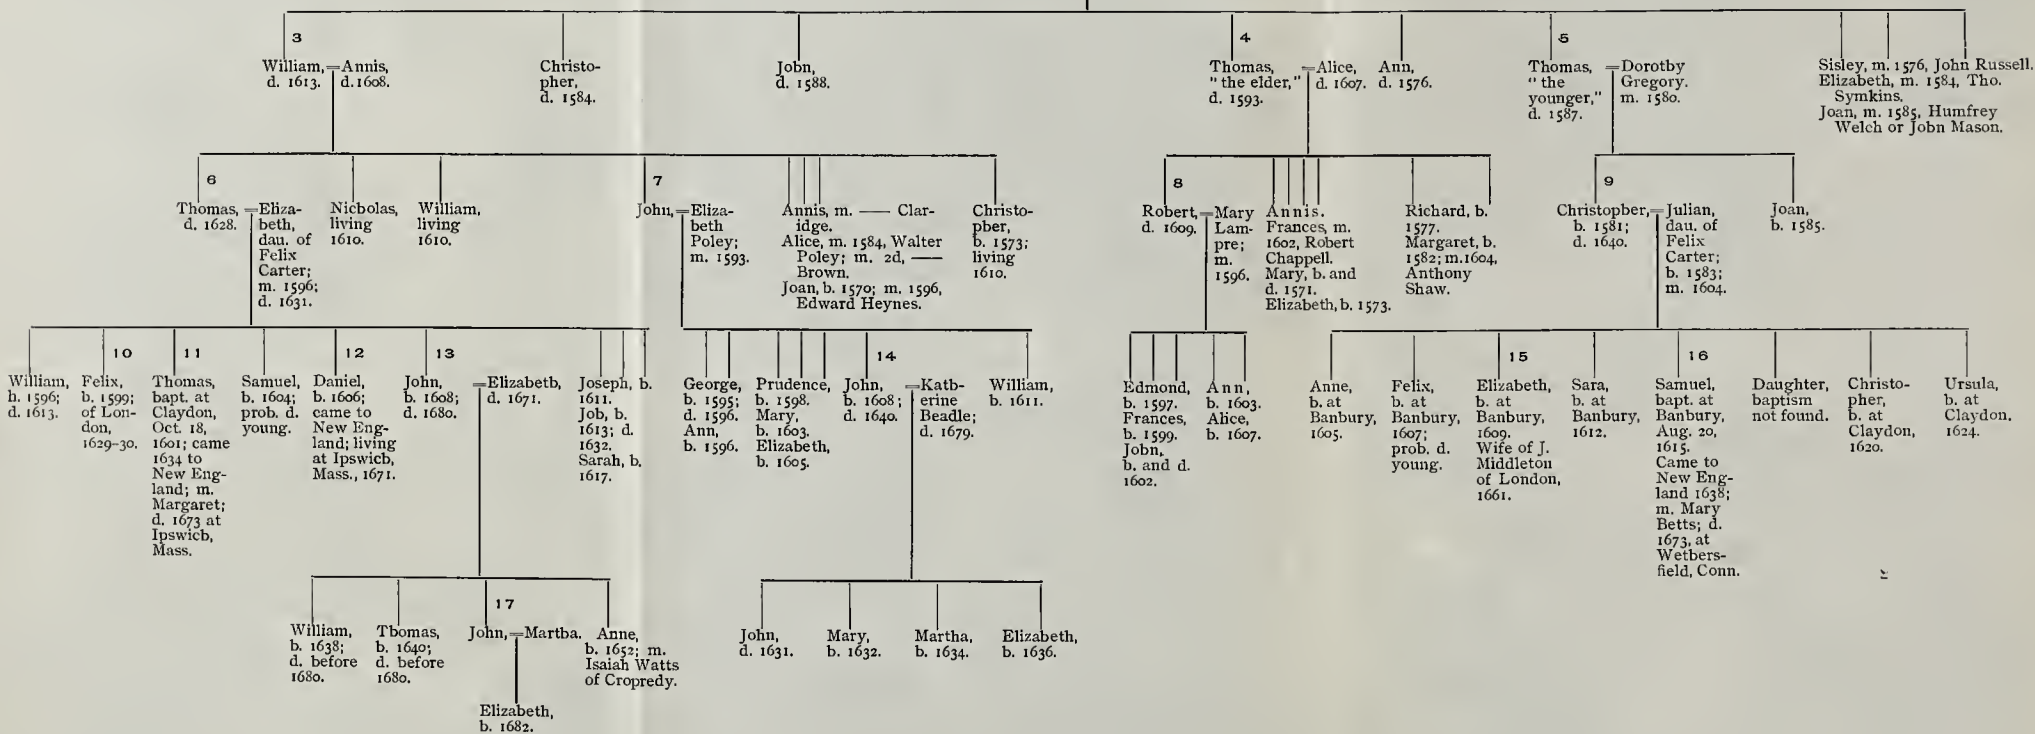

The names of these five Boremans found in 1546 are variously spelt, as persons of the same family felt free to do in those days, and the same Christian name is repeated in two instances. This was a common custom at that time, the first Thomas of Claydon having two sons named Thomas, and there is good reason to think he himself was one of two brothers of that name, since his death is recorded as that of "Thomas Boreman the elder," to whom Thomas Boreman of Cropredy, below, would correspond as Thomas the younger. With this explanation, the names of the five Boremans in Banbury Hundred of a generation later than William Boreman* of Banbury are given.

*Lay Subsidy, aid furnished to the King by a tax on the lands and goods of the people, in distinction from the clergy. Many of these Subsidy accounts, now in the Public Record Office, in Fetter Lane, London, contain full lists of the persons taxed in the various towns, and are thus a valuable aid to the genealogist.

2. Thomas² Boreman "the elder" (William¹) of Claydon, near Banbury, the first of the name found in that town, was the great grandfather of Thomas and Samuel Boreman, the emigrants to New England. He appears first in 1546 in a Lay Subsidy list for Banbury Hundred, where Thomas Boreman, Cleidon, is taxed £3-00s.-3d. on goods. The Parish Register of Claydon begins in 1569, ten years only before the death of Thomas; the baptisms of his children are therefore not to be found in it, and their names can only be gathered from his will. As nearly as can be computed, he was at the time of his death, in 1579, somewhere between 50 and 60 years of age. "The Elder," affixed to his name does not signify that he was an old man, but is added to distinguish him from a younger brother Thomas, probably of Cropredy. His will is dated Apr. 3, 1576, and was proved May 2, 1580. His burial record in the Parish Register is,

* Aside from this one mention of his name, nothing is known of William, as the record concerning him was found too late for further research at that time. It is possible something in regard to him might be learned from the town records of Banbury, or from the Manor Rolls, which should be at Broughton Castle.

"Thomas Boreman, the elder, Dec. 9, 1580," but the year is evidently a mistake, as shown by the Probate Records. This entry in the Register follows others of later date, showing that it was not made till several years after his death, when there might naturally be confusion between the last part of 1579 and the year following. The inventory of his property, taken Jan. 4, 1579-80, together with his will, show him to have been the cultivator of a farm with considerable live stock, including a horse, two cows, three heifers, and sixty pigs. He had good store of hay and grain in his barn, and a good supply of farming implements, household furniture, bedding, etc., the whole not greatly differing from the average inventory of the first New England settlers some four generations later, and making mention of the same rooms in the dwelling house, viz.: the Hall, or living room, Kitchen, and Chambers. His various tools — augers, saws, adze — and "the bedstede I made myself," imply that he may have also resembled the Puritan emigrants of a later day, in having, in addition to his occupation as a farmer, skill in a trade, evidently in his case that of some worker in wood, possibly, like a number of his descendants, that of a cooper, whose distinguishing implement, as shown by the coat of arms of their corporation in the city of London, was the adze. Thomas Boreman's wife, who survived him, was named ISABEL; no record of her death has been found, and it does not appear whether she was the mother of all his children.

Felix Carter who here appears as one of the appraisers of Thomas Boreman's estate, was then a young man, not long married, whose eldest daughter, Elizabeth, then about five years old, became the mother of Thomas Boreman, the emigrant to Ipswich, while another daughter, not yet born, was the mother of Samuel Boreman of Wethersfield.

with his oldest son, Thomas, another son, John, perhaps living in part of the same house. The three remaining sons, Nicholas, William, and Christopher, do not appear in the Claydon Register, and probably settled in some other place. The will of William was made Dec. 12, 1610, he being then sick, but he lived about two years longer, and it was not proved until Apr. 13, 1613. He was buried Jan. 10, 1612-13, aged probably not far from sixty years. His inventory taken on the day of his burial, indicates that he was in comfortable circumstances in life, with an estate somewhat larger than his father's. His occupation seems to have been exclusively husbandry.

William Sanderson, whose name appears as a witness to William Boreman's will, and to four others of later date, was doubtless the Curate of Claydon, and the writer of the wills he signs as witness. These date from 1593 to 1631, showing that he was minister of the parish for at least 38 years. His predecessor was probably Christopher Polley or Poley, witness to the will of the first Thomas Boreman in 1576, who signs himself, "Curate and writer herof." As may be seen from the records of William's children, two of them married into the Poley family, and it is quite possible that the various Christopher Boremans were namesakes of the old Curate.

5. Thomas³ Boreman "the younger" (*Thomas,*² *William*¹), the grandfather of Samuel Boreman of Wethersfield, was born in Claydon, probably not far from 1560. He, with his mother Isabel, were made residuary legatees of his father's property, and the two probably lived together in the old home. He married, very soon after his father's death, Feb. 16, 1579-80, DOROTHY GREGORY, by whom he had two children whose baptisms are in the Claydon Register. He died at an early age, probably some time before reaching his thirtieth year, and was buried June 13, 1587. No probate records whatever are found relating to him, perhaps because he inherited what property he possessed jointly with his mother. Nothing is known of his widow Dorothy, who may, it is very likely, have married again.

6. Thomas⁴ Boreman (*William,*³ *Thomas,*² *William*¹), the father of Thomas, the emigrant to Ipswich, Mass., born not far from 1570, married, Feb. 2, 1595-6, ELIZABETH, born about 1575, eldest daughter of Felix and Margaret Carter of Claydon. Thomas died when somewhere near 58 years of age, and was buried March 9, 1627-8. We find no will, but there is a full inventory of his estate taken March 8, 1627-8, the day before his funeral, together with the account of his widow Elizabeth as administratrix, dated Apr. 12, 1630. It is from the latter that we learn that their son Felix lived in London. Thomas's property considerably exceeds that of his father William, and his grandfather Thomas. He has livestock consisting of horses, mares, and colts, two cows, two steers, four heifers, seventy-nine sheep, and also poultry, with all the implements for carrying on a large farm. His widow Elizabeth continued to manage it after his death, assisted probably by her son John, then in his twentieth year. Of the two older sons, Felix, aged 29, was in London, and Thomas, aged 27, afterwards the emigrant, was apparently also away. The widow survived her husband about three years, and died at the age of 56. The date of her burial was May 11, 1631. She had made her will, Apr. 27, 1631, shortly before her death, and while sick. This will is of great importance, because the special provision she makes in it for the maintenance of her son Daniel, together with a similar provision that Thomas of Ipswich makes for his brother Daniel, clearly prove that the emigrant Thomas was her son.

Judging by the sum of her inventory, Mrs. Boreman must have ably managed the farm left by her husband, for we find that the value of the property after the interval of three years had more than doubled in her hands, rising from a valuation of £54 3s. 3d. to £109 6s. 4d. She had five horses and mares, with five "payre of horse geres" for them, six milch cows and eight heifers, besides swine and poultry. The farm implements included two carts, three harrows, plow, twenty-two hurdles,* etc. The household utensils and provisions show that there was carried on there, in addition to the ordinary labor, the brewing of ale, the making of cheese and butter, the smoking of bacon, and the spinning of linen. The house had on the ground floor, the hall, there, as in early New England, a large apartment, serving not only as the entrance room, but as the ordinary living place; the kitchen, and an old kitchen, and the bedroom, called "the chamber she laye in"; above stairs were the "over rooms." These all, with perhaps the "daye house" or dairy, constituted the house proper. Outside was the barn with stabling for the horses, and room for hay and grain; also various "hovels," or sheds, for carts, for oats, for pease, and for wood and a "garden house," the whole forming a considerable establishment, for that early day in a small village.

A special interest attaches to the study of the position and circumstances of this family, from the fact that their emigrant son, Thomas, was one of those honored through life in New England by the then rare title of "Mr."

* Hurdle; in husbandry a movable frame of split timber or sticks, wattled together, serving for gates, enclosures, etc. (Webster.)

9. Christopher⁴ Boreman (Thomas,³ the younger, Thomas,² William¹) of Banbury and Claydon, father of Samuel Boreman of Wethersfield, was baptized in Claydon, Dec. 1, 1581, and married, Nov. 19, 1604, JULIAN CARTER, baptized Dec. 20, 1583, daughter of Felix and Margaret Carter of Claydon, and sister of Elizabeth Carter, mother of Thomas Boreman of Ipswich. Christopher and his wife removed after their marriage to Banbury, the principal town in the neighborhood, about seven miles south of Claydon, and there the baptisms of five of their children are recorded. On the death of Julian's father, Felix Carter, they returned to Claydon, probably to live with and care for the widowed mother. Margaret, and their two youngest children were baptized there. As there were five daughters in the family, one of them, whose baptism is not found, was born, perhaps, about the time of their removal.

Boreman*

Christopher Boreman was evidently not a husbandman, but was master of some trade at which he was employed in the thriving town of Banbury. When his sister-in-law, Elizabeth, mother of Thomas Boreman of Ipswich, made her will, he was one of those whom she asked to be an overseer, and he was also one of the witnesses to it, signing with his name, not mark. He died about ten years after his return to Claydon, and was buried there April 1, 1640. This record of his burial was an important help in the identification of the family of Samuel Boreman, whose father is known to have died about that time.

While most others of our Boreman family in England are comparative strangers, only recently introduced to our acquaintance, Julian's has always been a household name among her New England descendants, and we come upon her again in her English home as an old friend. It is pleasant to find that the impression of the graces of her character derived from her letter is strengthened by what is now learned of her. It is evident that she was a family favorite. When her parents grew old, and her father was about to die, she was sent for to be with them, and to care for her mother's declining days. On this account, perhaps, her father's house and part of his land were given to her. Her mother, in her will, made Julian her residuary legatee, and when her youngest brother, Richard Carter, died unmarried in his 25th year, he singled her out from all his brothers and sisters by a special remembrance. The last we hear of her is in the letter of her daughter, Elizabeth Middleton of London; she was then, in 1661, living and in good health at the age of 78, surrounded probably by most of her children. She had passed, apparently unharmed, through the horrors of a war that raged for years, with all its attendant evils, at her very door, and we will trust that her few remaining days were peaceful and happy.

10. Felix⁵ Boreman (Thomas,⁴ William,³ Thomas,² *William*¹), cutler or armorer, of the city of London, was baptized in Claydon, March 4, 1598-9. The administration account of his father's estate, dated April 12, 1630, records the payment of 10s. to "Phelix Boreman of London." He was then 31 years old. This mention of his being of London enables us to recognize him in the following extract from the Records of the "Governor and Company of Massachusetts Bay in New England," previous to the removal of the Government to America under John Winthrop :

The charter to the Massachusetts Bay Company had been granted by the King thirteen days before the date of this account; the purchase was very probably part of the outfit of the party under Rev. Francis Higginson and others, almost immediately afterwards sent to strengthen the colony at Salem.

"Fleete Lane" is in the heart of the city of London, not far from St. Paul's Cathedral. It runs east out of Farringdon street, and skirted the north side of the famous old Fleet Prison for debtors. Felix Boreman's family may hereafter be found in the records of some of the old London churches which have not yet been printed. He would seem to have been dead in 1661, for otherwise he would naturally have been mentioned in Elizabeth Middleton's letter.

II. Thomas⁵ Boreman (Thomas,⁴ William,³ Thomas,² *William*¹), the emigrant to Ipswich, Mass., was born in Claydon, where he was baptized Oct. 18, 1601. Nothing has been found in English records to show where he lived just previous to his emigration. We infer from the fact that his mother's bequest to him in her will of 1631 was, like that of his brother Felix, in money only, that he was not then, at the age of 30, living in Claydon. He must somewhere have learned in youth his trade of cooper. As his cousin Samuel of Wethersfield was of the same calling, and likewise some of his children after him, there is good reason to conjecture that that was an inherited trade in the family, which some in every generation were taught at home, and that thus Thomas Boreman learned it. It is well known that in earlier times trades were handed down in a family from generation to generation, one or more sons in each growing up from childhood to become skillful in their father's occupation, to which they succeeded as naturally as to the tools of the trade that came down to them. A good illustration of this fact is found in the autobiography of Dr. Franklin, where, in speaking of his family, who lived in the county adjoining Oxfordshire, he says : "The trade of blacksmith was perpetuated in the family down to my uncle's time, the eldest son having been uniformly brought up to this employment, a custom which both he and my father observed with respect to their eldest sons." Whether or not a similar custom existed in the Boreman family can only be a matter of conjecture ; it is certain, however, that the business of Thomas and Samuel was an excellent one for the new country to which they came, where, as will be shown in speaking of Samuel, they had to do with making one of the earliest and most important articles of New England commerce.

The exact date of Thomas Boreman's coming to New England is not known. He was probably here as early as 1634, but is first found on record in March, 1634-5, when he was made freeman by the General Court of Massachusetts. His first grant of land is recorded at Ipswich in 1635.*

"Granted to Thomas Boreman about fifty-five acres of land, having on the north west the creek called Labour in vaine, George Carr on the south west, the town river on the north east, and Mr. Wythe on the south east. Also a six acre lott on the north east side the Hill by the town, having William Bartholomew on the north west and Thomas Scott on the south east. Likewise an house lott in the Towne upon which he hath built an house, havinge Mr. Bartholomew on the South west. To enjoy to him his heirs and assigns forever."

These lands are again entered, May 7, 1639, with others he had since acquired. The house lot is more particularly described in the second entry, as follows :

" One house lott about two acres of ground lying to the street called the East End,* and butting upon the sayde street at the South east end, bounded on the north east by a House lott belonging to Mr. John Winthrop, and on the South west by a house lott granted Will^m Bartholomew."

The piece of fifty-five acres is in the second entry described as :

" An Island about fifty and five acres of Land medow and upland, bounded on the north and north east by the Town River, and on the East by a creek parting it and an Island belonging to John Perkins the Elder, and on the South a p'sell of Land formerly granted to George Carr, and on the West the great creek called the Labour in vayne."

He retained also the six acres of planting ground on the "North syde the Towne," and has recorded the following new purchases :

" Also a p'sell of ground about two acres for a house lott lying on the South syde the Town River, bounded on the South by a highway† leading to the Labour in vayne, on the North west by certain house lotts granted to Daniell Hovey, William Holdred, &c. on the North east by a house lott formerly granted to Thomas Gilven." (Thomas Boreman bought this adjoining houselot of Thomas Gilven, containing one acre, almost immediately: recorded June 1, 1639.)

" Also a small p'sell about a rood of ground on the street called the East end bounded by a house lott of John Perkins the younger on the east end and by two house lotts formerly granted to Serjeant Howlett and Thomas Hardy on the South, the town reserving liberty to digg clay in any part of the say'd p'sell last granted :‡ to enjoy all the sayd Lands to him his heirs and assigns forever. Entered the 7th day of May 1639."

* Now East Street.

† Now Boardman Street.

‡ It is not easy to conceive any reason for Thomas Boreman's buying this small piece of clayey ground, not connected with his house-lot, and where the town were at liberty to dig, except that he wanted it for a shop. It was on the same street as his house, but on the opposite side.

Dec. 27, 1647, Thomas Boreman sold to Philip Long his house and lot of two acres on East Street, where he had lived, next to John Winthrop, Jr.; also two other pieces of land, a half acre of meadow, and seven acres in the common field.

Oct. 7, 1652, he bought for £35 twenty acres, called in another place, "the Iland sometime Goodman Websters," adjoining his farm, making thus 75 acres in the whole farm of Boardman's Island, so far as found entered on the Town Book. The records there are, however, imperfect, and it is impossible to trace clearly all his sales and purchases of lands. At his death, his half "the land within the rivers and creeks," is called $42\frac{1}{2}$ acres, thus making the whole island 85 acres, the other half having doubtless been before made over to his son Thomas, who succeeded him there. His only other inventoried land was ten acres of planting ground on the other side of the river.

Thomas Boreman's house, which he had already built when his land was recorded in 1635, was probably his dwelling from that time till he sold it in 1647, and was situated at the east end of the High Street, now called East Street, not distant from the landing place on the bank of the Ipswich River. His farm on the island was some ways farther down the river, and on the other side of it. As there was but one bridge, and that farther up stream than either his farm or his house, the way from one to the other was a very round-about one, and if farming was his principal occupation, it would be a wonder that he lived on the High Street so long. It is not unlikely that his business as a cooper was then the important one, the rood of ground he bought in 1639 on the opposite side of East Street, perhaps containing his shop, and on that account a location in the town was desirable. There is no barn spoken of at any time in connection with his dwelling house, which argues that his farm was an entirely separate concern, probably having buildings of its own, and a farmer (Isaiah Wood?), just as John Winthrop, Jr., his next neighbor on East Street, had a farm in Ipswich, called Castle Hill, very much more remote from his dwelling than Thomas Boreman's.

Wherever Thomas Boreman removed after selling his house on East Street, it is plain that at the close of his life he had retired to live on his farm. Mr. Farley, a well-known Ipswich antiquarian, was of the opinion that there were never dwellings on Boardman's Island. None are there now, and probably any traces of former habitation are entirely obliterated, but we can interpret the description of his home in his inventory only as showing that it was situated on lands within the river and creeks, in other words, on Boardman's Island,* so called after him.

This island had on the east and south only inconsiderable creeks, rising and falling with the tide, but on the north flowed a navigable river, and on the west, separating the island from the town proper, was "the great creek, called the Labour in vayne." To establish communication with the town, a bridge was necessary, and this Thomas Boreman built. The following in regard to it is found in the Colonial Records of Massachusetts. It can hardly be supposed that the bridge referred to here was the first one he had built. More likely it was erected to replace an earlier and less substantial structure. As the road from the town to the Islands, so called, beyond him, lay through his lands, it was natural that he should have felt himself justified in making this petition.

"At a session of the General Court held 6 May, 1657, In answer to the petition of Tho. Boreman for liberty to build a bridge over a creeke about his farme, y^t in considera^on of his building a bridg so necessary, he might be exempted from county rates, and y^t such as make use of ye sd

*The Island was in the third generation the property of Thomas' grandson, Jacob Bordman, who by a deed of gift, dated June 23, 1748, gave it to his two sons, Jacob and John, when it is described as the "homestead and buildings," with bounds explained at length as beginning at Labor-in-Vain bridge, running south by the Labor-in-Vain creek, then northerly through the ditch which parts Col. Choate's farm, to the bridge leading to Col. Choate's farm, and so on by various ditches to low water mark on the Town River, thence west by the river till arriving at the creek they terminate at the bridge first mentioned. It is thus evident that some members of at least the first four generations of the family had their home on Boardman's Island.

bridg & not contribute to y^e same, they might be liable to such charge as the Court shall determine &c — the Court doth not judge it meete to exempt the petiçoner from rates, but judge it aequall that none make use thereof except it be by the allowance of the petiçoner or making contract with him." Further at the same court, "Thomas Boreman of Ipswich desireing to be ratified in reference to his building of a bridg is denied his request, but so far as his pet hath respect to others making use of it, the Court judges it equall that none make use thereof but by his allowance or contract wth him."

The bridge there is to this day called by his name, and the street leading to it, for the most part a country road, is named Boardman Street. The bridge often got out of repair, and provision had to be made for mending it. An entry in the Town Records, Jan. 26, 1670, under the head of "Liberty granted to fell trees," reads, "To Mr Borman for pines to mend his bridge." In his will it is provided that his son Daniel and his heirs should allow his brother Thomas two days in a year to repair the bridge.

The following evidence given in court, March 25, 1695, and relating to matters at the early date of 1645, is interesting in this connection. The change here already begun in the spelling of the name is noticeable. "Labor-in-vain fields," were the fields on each side of Boardman Street, which led to the bridge and island.

"John Webster aged 63 testified than when he lived with his father at Ipswich 50 years since, the way to Mr. Bordman's Island and Mr. Emersons and Mr. Perkins Island, layd over the lots in labor in vain fields near the bank side * until Mr. Bordman's servant Isaiah Wood † lett ye oxen pull down ye cart of (off) the bank where the oxen were hanged by the neck, one of them till he was dead, and said Wood came to my Father and myself that were in the fields at work to borrow a Hoe to stick the ox, but said Borman's ox being dead then the way was altered to the place where now it lyeth neer the middle of the lotts down to the * Bank of Ipswich River.

† Isaiah Wood, said to be 41 years old in 1668, married, 26 Jan. 1653, Mercy, daughter of Simon Thompson of Ipswich, by whom he had fifteen children. creek about 20 or 30 rods below ye bridge yt now is, which way was ever after while we lived in town occupied for the owners of ye lands and meadows of and belonging to the proprietors on this side the great Creeke and of the other Side by said Bordman Mr. Emerson and Mr. Perkins — witnes my hand John Webster.”

“The testimony of Nathaniel Emerson aged 64 years. Testifies that the occasion of the removing of the above way was ye killing of said Bordmans ox and that the way where now it lyes downe to ye Creeke for the above said occupiers was staked out two rods wide by Mr. Symon Broadstreet late Governor and my father Emerson. The above said Webster’s father, Doctor Dane and Daniel Hovey Deceased asking them why they staked it out so wide, they said because carts when they met might not be hindered in passing to & fro, and said way was ever since improved by the above said proprietors till Thomas Bordman* begun to obstruct the same.”

Boardman’s Island is described in the record as consisting of meadow and upland, and as appears elsewhere there was also salt marsh and “thatch ground,” the latter so called because it produced a kind of rushes suitable for thatching houses. Provision was made by the General Court that certain such grounds should “be for the use of the whole town, to be improved for thatching houses.” The early dwellings, therefore, of Thomas and Samuel Boreman in Ipswich were probably roofed with thatch like those they had left in Claydon, and such as we may see there to-day.

The amount of Thomas Boreman’s inventory, £554. 6s. 6d, does not give a correct idea of his property. There should be added to the account the portion he had given at the time of his marriage to his son Daniel, £225, and the land set off to his other son, Thomas, which was no doubt worth at least as much more; also his two married daughters’ portions, probably £100 each, judging from that left to Joanna. A better idea of his estate is obtained from his share in the division of Plum Island in 1665-6, which was distributed as follows: all that did not exceed 6s. 8d. in their country rate were to have a single share; those not exceeding 16s., a share and a half, and all above 16s., together with magistrates, elders, Messrs. John Rogers (the minister), and Thomas Andrews (the schoolmaster), a double share. In this division, April 10, 1666, out of 203 commoners, 28 had a double share, 70 a share and a half, and 105 a single share. Thomas Boreman had No. 4 of the double shares.

His position in the community may be gathered from the fact that he is uniformly spoken of as Mr. Boreman, and his wife had the corresponding title of M^{rs}, or Mistress, terms of distinction applied to very few in those days. We obtain a glimpse of the estimation in which he was held, in the following extracts from a letter printed among the Winthrop papers. The letter is without date, and was written by Samuel Symonds, afterwards Deputy Governor of Massachusetts, and then probably in Boston, to John Winthrop, Jr., later the Governor of Connecticut, but then living in Ipswich in his house next to Mr. Boreman's.

"I desire you would talk with Mr. Boreman & with his help buy for me a matter of 40 bushells of good Indian corne, of him or of some honest man to be paidd for now in ready money & to be delivered at any tyme in the sumer as I please to use it. I would deale with such a man as will not repent if corn rise, as I will not if it fall. . . . My wife and I desire to be kindly remembered to your good neighbors* Mr. Boreman & his wife & the rest of our friends."

Of the public offices held by Thomas Boreman, not much is known. The year ensuing that in which he was made freeman, "At a General Court houlden at Boston," Sept. 8, 1636, "M^r Boreman" is one of the Deputies. He was then 34 years old. In 1640, "Mr. Bartholomew and Mr.

*There seems to be uncertainty among Ipswich antiquarians as to where the home of John Winthrop, Jr., during his residence in that town, was situated. In the published account of the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the town's incorporation, a picture of a house on the south side of the river, on the Essex road, called the "Winthrop-Burnham house," is given, in regard to which the tradition of his having lived there is quoted. The description of Thomas Boreman's house lot on the north side of East St., recorded in 1639 as "bounded on the North East by a House lott belonging to Mr. John Winthrop," together with this mention of the two as neighbors, makes the location certain.

Boreman were appointed to lay out the planting lotts of John Perkins Jun. and Edmund Gardiner"; also of Thomas Clark's meadow. The following proves him to have been one of the townsmen or selectmen in 1635, at the beginning of his life in Ipswich, from which it may be concluded that he was at other times chosen to that office. The record relates to the Grant of a Mill to Mr. Saltonstall (Richard) by the town of Ipswich in 1635, which is signed by

This Grant with its signatures is cited in the Town Records with the following testimony:

"Thomas Borman, a very old man, being before us at Ipswich, declared upon his oath that he Judgeth the words (Thomas Borman) subscribed among others in the testimony above written to be his hand, and further upon his oath he saith not; dated the last of February 1671 1672)."

Daniell Gookin

Mr. Boreman was at this date 70 years and about 4 months old, and of sound mind, as shown by his making a codicil to his will more than a year later. He had lived to an age considerably beyond that of most of his ancestors in Claydon, but he was, according to our present standards, far from being "a very old man." An extract from another letter making mention of him is given in this connection. It was written by Lidia Bankes in London to Daniel Eppes of Ipswich, and was dated, London, 5 Sept., 1672.

. . . . "my service to your father Symonds, my coussen, and not forgetting old Mr. Bourman, Mr. Rogers and their wives if alive; my great respects to them; I should be glad to hear of them."

The provision made by Thomas Boreman for his eldest son, Daniel, appears in the following "testimony of Richard Hutchinson and Nathaniell Putnam of Salem concerning Daniel Borman."

"The sayd Richard Hutchinson and Nathaniell Putnam being at the house of Mr. Thomas Borman att Ipswich about the twelfth month, '61, upon propositions of ye mariage of his sonn Daniell with the daughter of the said Richard do both testify upon the condition of their mariage together. The said Mr. Thomas Borman gave in wrighting to his sonn Daniell the one halfe of his dwelling house, barnes, outhouses, orchyards, upland, & meddows with all the priviledges and appurtenances to be presently possessed & enjoyed without any other condition than this, if he dyed before his father without issue, in which case the sd Mr. T. Bourman was to pay unto Hannah, wife of sd Daniell Bourman an hundred pound Joynture & the whole land to be at his dispose, and further that after the death of the said Tho. Bourman & his now wife that the other halfe of the aforementioned dwelling house etc. were given unto the said Daniel with this proviso that he (Thomas) would have liberty to dispose of £200. in way of legacy where he should think good & that both this half & the other were given to sd Daniel & his heirs & assigns forever & further that the sd Mr. Borman tould us he had a frame of a dwelling house which when he had sett up & furnished that then his son Daniel should have it to live in, or elce the best room in the old, but only he himself would have his choice. The substance of what is here testified, (excepting the new frame) was delivered in wrighting by the sd Mr. to his son Daniel in our presence."

"Taken upon oath 27th 9^{ber} 1663
before me William Hathorne."

Daniel afterwards decided to settle in Topsfield, where he bought, December, 1665, for £315, of William Evans, planter, and Agnes, his wife, a farm of 200 acres, with dwelling, etc., having conveyed back to his father all right to the home farm in the following agreement, dated Sept. 27, 1665 :

"Daniell Borman for dyvers considerations moving him hath sould unto his father Thomas Borman all his right in his father's farm, in consideration of which sayd Tho. Borman doth agree to give said Daniell Borman the full sum of £225, in manner followeth; the 1st 100£ to be paid in the year 1666, 20£ in horse flesh, 20£ in sheepe & porcke, 30£ in neate cattell, 20£ in corn, 5£ in pork and 5£ in cattle — notwithstanding what is above written Mr. Borman hath liberty to pay 30£ in English goods — the corn to be payd by the 1st of March — the places are the kell, mill, or Mr. Tho. Borman's house; all the rest of the payments to be made by the 10th of November. 50£ to be paid in the year 1667 — 50£ in 1668 — the 25£ to be payd at the end of 7 years. In case Mr. Borman decease before that time, then within 12 mos. after. Mr. Tho. Borman

“ Whereas there is a marriage intended between the sonn of Mr. Tho. Borman & the daughter of Sargt. Jacob Perkins — he (Thomas Borman) freely gives all his lands etc. after his decease & that of his loving wife that now is, to his son Thomas. The said Thomas & Elizabeth to have their abiding place at the house of Mr. Thomas Borman and one half of whatever is raised on the farm,” etc.

The family name of Thomas Boreman's wife, Margaret, has not been found, neither does it appear whether they were married before or after coming to New England. Judging from what can be gathered as to the ages of their children, it seems probable that their marriage took place not long before leaving England, at which time Thomas was about 33 years old, and his wife no doubt considerably younger; her surviving him some seven years indicates this. She was, of course, born in England, and may have been a daughter or sister of one of the Ipswich settlers. Her title of M^{rs} or Mistress implies the respectability of her family. If their children all lived to grow up, their number was not a large one for that day. It should not be forgotten that their family included also Thomas Boreman's brother Daniel, who lived to be at least 65, and who, though he makes no figure in Ipswich records, is to Thomas Boreman's descendants a most important personage, without the knowledge of whose existence they would have had no certainty of their English ancestry.

Thomas Boreman's will (the original on file in the Probate Office in Salem) was made Dec. 17, 1670, when he was just past his 69th year. He added to it a codicil dated May 3, 1673, and his inventory was taken on the 26th of the same month, showing that he died in May, 1673, at the age of 72 years and 7 months. It is interesting to note that his cousin Samuel of Wethersfield, fourteen years younger, had died in April, about one month before.

Mrs. Margaret Boreman, the widow, died Nov. 25, 1679 (Essex County Records at Salem). The wills and inventories of husband and wife which are here quoted, require no comment, except that particular attention should be given to the important clause in the will of Thomas, providing for his brother Daniel, which, in connection with a similar clause in the will of their mother, Elizabeth Boreman of Claydon, fully proves Thomas Boreman's origin.

WILL OF THOMAS BOREMAN OF IPSWICH.

In the name of god Amen the seaventeeth Day of December in the yeare of our Lord god one thousand six hundred and seaventy I Thomas Boreman senior of Ipswich weake in body, but blessed be god of sound and perfect memory Doe make this my last will and Testament as followeth freely and willingly comending my spirit into the hands of god that gave it, and my body to the earth from whence I received it. CHILDREN OF THOMAS¹ AND MARGARET BOREMAN.

(1.) Mary,² m. ROBERT KINSMAN, JR., born 1629. He was one of the six men renowned in the history of Ipswich, who, Aug. 27, 1687, voted that Andros had no right to tax the people without the consent of the Assembly, for which vote they were fined and imprisoned twenty-one days by Andros. The inscription on his tombstone reads: "Here lieth the body of Quarter Master Robert Kinsman who died February ye 19, 1712 aged 83 years." He had the trade of a glazier. His will, dated Aug. 24, 1710, and proved March 12, 1712-13, (his wife being then evidently dead) speaks of sons, Joseph, Robert, Thomas (deceased), and Tobijah, and daughters, Mary, Sarah Perkins, Joanna, Margaret, and Eunice Burnam.

(2.) Daniel, m. April 12, 1662, HANNAH, daughter of Richard and Alice (Bosworth) Hutchinson of Salem, born Jan. 20, 1639. He was selectman in Topsfield from 1668 to 1673. He died in Topsfield, April 27, 1708. Children:

i. JOSEPH,³ m. Feb. 17, 1696-7, Prudence Foster. They have recorded,* Abigail,⁴ b. Sept. 8, 1700, m. March 8, 1716, Isaac Cummings, and Hannah, b. Aug. 16, 1703, m. Dec. 5, 1721, Jacob Perkins. Joseph was town treasurer, 1698; selectman, 1715.

ii. MARY, m. Jan. 23, 1705, Ebenezer Foster; settled in Rowley.

* Hon. I. M. Boardman of Belfast, Maine, one of a numerous family, descendants of Dea. Joseph Boardman, a first settler of Isleborough, Me., (said on his gravestone to have been born in Boston, Aug. 12, 1753,) finds good reason to suppose him a grandson of a Jacob Boardman of Boston, mariner, whose will of 1727, proved 1729, mentions his wife Philadelphia, and children Joseph and Lydia, then evidently young. This Jacob, he believes, after careful examination, to have been an unrecorded son of Joseph and Prudence, born in the three and a half years' interval between their marriage and the birth of Abigail, the first child recorded. The fragmentary condition of Topsfield registers shows that many records must be missing, while the recurrence of family names among Jacob's descendants renders the above conclusion not improbable; positive evidence of the truth of such a supposition has not, however, so far been found.

- iii. NATHANIEL, m. June 28, 1710, Abigail Rolfe. Their children died without heirs before the death of Nathaniel, who left his homestead in Topsfield to his nephew, John Boardman of Preston. Nathaniel held a commission from the king as quartermaster, dated 1723. He was also town treasurer, selectman, and representative to the general court for several years.
- iv. THOMAS, b. July 15, 1666 ; no further record.
- v. HANNAH, b. Feb. 18, 1670 ; m. Eleazer Putnam of Danvers.
- (6)+ vi. WAIT JOHN, b. Aug. 23, 1676 ; m. May 4, 1713, Mary Billings of Preston, Conn.; d. Feb. 2, 1739.
- vii. { DAVID, b. June 21, 1682; d. Feb. 1, 1724-5, at Preston, unmarried.
- viii. { JONATHAN, b. June 21, 1682; d. Oct. 3, 1723, at Topsfield, unmarried.

(3.) Martha, m. July 4, 1660, Dea. THOMAS LOW, born 1632, of Chebacco Parish, Ipswich, "malster," who died April 12, 1712, aged 80. The will, dated June 17, 1708, of Dea. Thomas Low, "of good understanding & sound memory, but ancient, crazy & infirm in body," gives to true and well beloved wife Martha the lower room and the chamber of the new end of the house I now live in, with privilege of cellar, 200 weight of good pork, two good new milch cows to be well kept and maintained winter and summer for her use, 10 bushels Indian corn, one bushel wheat, 6 bushels malt, 14 lbs. sheeps wool, 12 lbs. flax, firewood ready cut for a fire, a horse to ride on as she may have occasion, 10 bushels apples for the winter, and what apples she may have occasion for in the summer for her own use, two barrels of "cydar," and the garden at the end of the house ; also ten shillings money yearly. The children mentioned are Jonathan, Samuel, David, Martha Dodge, Joanna Dodge, Sarah Low, and Abigail Goodhue.

(4.) Thomas, b. 1643 ; m. Jan. 1, 1667-8, ELIZABETH, daughter of Sargt. Jacob Perkins, born April 1, 1650. He died Oct. 3, 1719, in his 76th year. His wife died Dec. 4, 1718, aged 68 years 8 mos. 3 d. (Gravestones in Ipswich.) Children :

- (7.)+ i. THOMAS,³ b. Aug. 8, 1669; m. Sarah Langley.
- (8.)+ ii. JACOB, b. June 10, 1671; m. 1699, Martha, widow of John Rogers.
- iii. JOHN, b. March 18, 1672-3; no further record.
- (9.)+ iv. OFFIN, b. Dec. 3, 1676; m. Feb. 28, 1698, Sarah Heard.
- v. MARGARET, b. April 5, 1681; m. 1703, Thomas Burnam.
- vi. ELIZABETH, b. Nov. 9, 1686; m. 1717 (?), Jedediah Tittcomb.

(5.) Joanna, m. Jan. 29, 1672, ISAAC FELLOWS* (son of William¹). Their children were Isaac, Samuel, Ephraim, Jonathan, Joanna. The family Bible, said to have belonged to the grandson of Isaac (printed in London, 1799), contains the following record: Isaac Fellows, born 1635, died April 12, 1721, aged 86 years. Joanna Fellows, his wife, born 1646, died March 20, 1732, in her 86th year. The Ipswich record says: "Capt Isaac Fellows dyed ye 6 day of April, 1721, upwards of 84 years old. Joanna Fellows, relict of Isaac Fellows deceased, dyed March 22, 1732." The record of Isaac's marriage among the county records at Salem reads, Isaac Fellows married Joanna "Borm" Jan. 29, 1672 (3). As it is certain from her mother's will that Joanna Borman was wife of a Fellows in 1679, and the records of the Fellows family forbid the idea that any of them except Isaac could have been her husband, it must be concluded that "Borm" is a contraction for Borman. Joanna being mentioned in her father's will of 1670 as yet to become 22 years of age, leads us to consider her age at death in the above record as exaggerated. It was no doubt from this supposed age that her date of birth was reckoned as set down in the family Bible.

* The entry found at Ipswich, "John Newmarsh & Joanna Borman maryed 22 Novemb 1671" is evidently a mistake, Borman being substituted for Burnam, as appears from the following: John Newmarsh, Sr., Nov. 8, 1671, deeds house and land to John, Jr., his son; to the record of the deed is appended this testimony of Nathaniel Treadwell, that "the above settlement was before his marriage to Lieut. Thomas Burnham's daughter — that the marriage was deferred for it, and on his doing it, that night the time of their marriage was appointed," etc.

THIRD GENERATION.

(6.) Wait John³ Bordman (Daniel,² Thomas¹) of Preston, Conn., born in Topsfield, Mass., Aug. 23, 1676, settled in Preston about 1710, and there married May 4, 1713, MARY BILLINGS, born April 24, 1689, oldest child of William Billings. He died Feb. 2, 1739. His widow died May 24, 1776. Wait John early dropped his first name, and appears as John Bordman in Preston records.

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND MARY BORDMAN.

(9.) Offin³ Bordman (Thomas,² Thomas¹) of Salisbury, inn-keeper, born in Ipswich, Dec. 3, 1676, married Feb. 28, 1698, SARAH HEARD. Two children, Offin and Nathaniel, are recorded to them in Ipswich. The will of Offin, made January, 1748, proved April 2, 1750, mentions JUDITH, "my now loving wife," grandsons Offin, Thomas, Jacob, John, Jonathan, and granddaughter Elizabeth Pearson, children of son Offin deceased; also grandchildren Amos, Stephen, John, Sarah, and Elizabeth Coffin, orphan children of his daughter Sarah Coffin. The property bequeathed included dwelling-house, grist-mill, saw-mill, and lands in Salisbury, dwelling and lands in Newbury, dwelling and lands in North Yarmouth, County of York, right in township of Nottingham, N. H., and "my Island in Kingstown, N. H., in the country pond, so called." The amount of his inventory was £1453 6s. 5d. His name, Offin, has been perpetuated in every generation of his descendants to the present day.

CHILDREN OF OFFIN AND SARAH BORDMAN.

- i. OFFIN,⁴ b. Dec. 16, 1698; m. Jan. 17, 1722, Sarah Woodman. He was master of a vessel, which, in going from Casco Bay to Boston with a cargo of rafts at her stern, was upset, September, 1735, and he with twelve others were drowned. (History of Newbury.) His widow married Stephen Wyatt. Children: Offin, Elizabeth (m. 1748, John Pearson), Thomas, John, Jacob, Jonathan.†

* Two of the children of Captain John Boardman, son of Daniel and Mary, removed to Mississippi. Their descendants have been prominent as captains and pilots on the Mississippi River, living in New Orleans and other places in the Gulf States.

† Jonathan Boardman, born March 15, 1735, married in Newbury, March 12, 1761, Rebecca Moody. Their descendants are living in Calais, Maine, Macon, Ga., and elsewhere. The old Bible belonging to Jona-

- ii. SARAH, m. Aug. 16, 1722, Stephen Coffin, Jr. They both died before January, 1748, leaving children, Amos, Stephen, John (d. before 1756), Sarah (m. James Dwyer of Portsmouth), Elizabeth.
- iii. NATHANIEL, bapt. July 8, 1705; not mentioned in his father's will.

12. Daniel⁵ Boreman (Thomas,⁴ William,³ Thomas,² William¹), was born in Claydon, where he was baptized March 21, 1605-6. Everything further that is known of him is contained in the following clauses of two wills, one, that of his mother Elizabeth, the other, that of his brother Thomas, nearly 40 years later.

"Item, my will is that my sonne Daniell shall staye & have his being with my sonne John Boreman & alowe unto my sayd sonne Daniell meate, drinke, and apparrell and tenn shillings a yeare during the naturall lyffe of the sayd Daniell & yf my sonne Daniell shall not be contented to stay with his brother John & can better p^rfer himself in some other service, he may, my sonne John to paye unto him tenn shillings a yeare notwithstanding as aforesayde."

(Will of Elizabeth Boreman of Claydon, April 27, 1631.)

"Item, my will is that my Brother Daniell shall abide with my wiue while shee lives, and after her Decease that he shall continue with my sonne Thomas to be mainteyned by him."

(Will of Thomas Boreman of Ipswich, Mass., Dec. 17, 1670.)

Daniel had therefore availed himself of the provision made by his mother, and "better preferred himself" by coming to New England with his brother Thomas, or following him later across the ocean. Notwithstanding the apparent meagreness of the account, several things may be inferred concerning Daniel from these few lines. He was evidently the object of very tender regard to all his family. It was his mother's first thought, before making any mention of her other children, to provide for him, and that in a way ample for his support in those simpler times. His brother than has these entries, without names, but evidently relating to Offin and his wife, Sarah, afterwards wife of Stephen Wyatt:

"Sept. 8, 1735 my honored father departed this life."

"July 12, 1752 my honored mother departed this life."

Thomas, too, though both were then old men, kept up the same care for him in providing in his will for Daniel's last days. But the affection of his relatives is more strikingly shown in another way. For whom else did Thomas name his eldest son, and Samuel of Wethersfield his second son? Daniel was the only one of his name among all the generations, both of paternal and maternal ancestry, that have come to our knowledge, and it cannot be doubted that these two sons were namesakes of his, and that the many Daniels of Boardman descent, from that time to the present, may look back to him as the original from whom their name has been handed down through generation after generation.

The question naturally arises, What was it in Daniel that made him the object of this care? It is plain that he suffered under some disability; what that disability may have been, is an inquiry leading to much speculation, and one more easily answered by showing what it was not, than what it was.

Though he seems to have been in a condition that left him pretty much at the disposal of his friends, it cannot for a moment be thought that Daniel was an imbecile, or even weak-minded. His mother would never, in such a case, have given him freedom of choice as to a home, or have directed that money should be put into his hands; neither would his relatives have been likely, under such circumstances, to give his name to their children. It cannot be doubted that his was a physical ailment, yet not such as to take away his ability to perform some labor. He could evidently in some ways assist his brothers, as is implied in the expression, "if he can better prefer himself in some other service." His brother Thomas would not have taken him with him to share the hardships of the New World, unless he had had a certain amount of physical vigor to endure its deprivations, and strength to be a help in life in the new country. A young man in delicate health, or a cripple, would have been only a burden in such circumstances; neither was bringing him a last resort, since his other brother, John, lived on for years in Claydon, and could still have cared for him there. It has been suggested that, through sickness in childhood, Daniel might have lost his sight or his hearing, more probably the latter, and with it the power of speech, an affliction which in that day, when nothing was known about instructing such children, would have rendered him an object of continued care in his family, and yet not have unfitted him for being in many respects a valuable helper. This possible explanation is only thrown out by way of suggestion. What was Daniel's condition will probably never be certainly known. He is, in any case, not only an interesting, but a most important character in his family, constituting as he does the evidence that establishes the connection of his brother's descendants in New England with their Claydon ancestors. His death is not found in the records of Ipswich, and being only a ward in his brother's family, without property in his own right, we cannot learn the time of it from the Probate Records, as we do that of his brother Thomas. His life would seem to have been passed entirely without care, and on that account may have been a long one.

13. John⁵ Boreman (Thomas,⁴ William,³ Thomas,² *William*¹), of Claydon, was baptized there, Oct. 30, 1608. Out of the six sons of Thomas and Elizabeth Boreman mentioned in the will of the latter, John only remained in his native village. The name of his wife was Elizabeth, and the baptisms of three of their children are in the Claydon Register. A fourth child, John, is not there recorded. John Boreman's lot was cast in troublous times. He was married not long before the outbreak of the Civil War, which raged fiercely for two years or more immediately around his home. The whole country about was completely devastated to provide subsistence for two armies, while they were contending in hard-fought battles, or laying long siege one to another, once and again, around Banbury Castle, these dangers closely attended by that even greater horror, the plague. Yet through all, he and his wife seem to have passed safely, and with two of their children, survived long after. Elizabeth, the wife, died first, and was buried Mch. 1, 1671. John lived to be 72 years old, and was buried Sept. 3, 1680. He is the cousin John Boreman of whom Elizabeth Middleton speaks in her letter to her brother Samuel in 1661, saying he is in good health. Though seven years older than Samuel, he survived him more than seven years. His will is found, but no inventory.

14. John⁵ Boreman (John,⁴ William,³ Thomas,² *William*¹), baptized June 27, 1608, married, about 1630, Katherine Beadle. They had four children baptized in Claydon. John died and was buried in September, 1640. His widow, recorded as "Katheren Boreman of Cropredy," was buried in Claydon in 1679. As far as appears, they left no male heirs, and the name of Boreman became extinct in their branch of the family.

15. Elizabeth⁵ Boreman (Christopher,¹ *Thomas*³ the younger, Thomas,² *William*¹) was born in Banbury, where she was baptized Nov. 26, 1609. When she was about ten years old the whole family returned to Claydon to live, and there she probably passed the remainder of her early life. She is the only one of the five sisters of Samuel Boreman of whom we know more than the name. It was she who wrote the recently-discovered letter to her brother Samuel in Wethersfield, little thinking that she was thus perpetuating her memory to distant generations of her family. As her history, so far as it is known, is fully discussed in connection with that letter, it is unnecessary to say much of her here. She married Mr. J. Middleton of Clerkenwell, London, probably rather late in life, being 52 years old when she wrote, and they evidently had no children. It would be interesting to know how she happened to come up to London, but it is not difficult to imagine various reasons for her doing so, when we remember that several of her relatives had been there long before we hear of her.

16. Samuel⁵ Boreman (Christopher,⁴ *Thomas*³ the younger, Thomas,² *William*¹), the New England emigrant of Wethersfield, was born in Banbury, Oxfordshire, England, where he was baptized according to the following record in the Parish Register there :

“ Samuel Bormā son to Xpofer Bormā and Julian his wife was bapt y^e 20 day August 1615.”

He emigrated to New England about 1638 ; married MARY BETTS. Though of the fifth generation of the family, as found in England, he will hereafter, in giving the genealogy of his American descendants, be considered as of the first generation.

17. John⁶ Boreman (John,⁵ Thomas,⁴ William,³ Thomas,² *William*¹) of Claydon, the last of the family found there, was born probably about 1642, the year of the beginning of the Civil War, the first battle of which was fought at Edgehill almost within sight of his birthplace. It is no doubt for that reason that his baptism is not in the Register, though the records of three others of his father's children are found there. His name appears in his father's will of Jan. 14, 1679-80 ; also in the Parish Register in 1681, when John Boreman and Oliver Stockley are chosen church wardens ; and for the last time in 1682, when his daughter was baptized. His wife's name was Martha, and the record reads, “ Elizabeth, daughter of John and Martha Boreman, was baptized Aug. 20, 1682.” No probate records concerning John have been found, and after the last date the family entirely disappear from the Parish Register, where during 113 years the names of seven succeeding generations of Boremans have been entered.

ELIZABETH,⁷ bapt. Aug. 20, 1682.

THE CARTER FAMILY OF CLAYDON.

Felix Carter is, equally with Thomas Boreman, the ancestor of all descendants of the emigrants Thomas and Samuel Boreman, since the mother of each of these two was his daughter. He is the first of his name in Claydon records, his earliest appearance being July 28, 1577, when the baptism of his son Peter is recorded. The baptisms of his son George and of his oldest daughter Elizabeth, mother of Thomas Boreman, are not on record, and it is possible that the family had, in 1577, recently come to Claydon. No person of the name appears in the Lay Subsidy lists for Banbury Hundred before Felix himself in 1610. It is not unlikely that a Richard Carter of Hornton, "Quarryer," whose will was proved June 12, 1617, was his brother, since Felix named one of his sons Richard. Hornton is also in Oxfordshire, in Bloxham Hundred, some six or seven miles southwest of Claydon. Felix Carter is early found in connection with the Boremans, as one of the appraisers of the estate of the first Thomas, 2 May, 1580.

In a Lay Subsidy list for Claydon, 7th James I (1610), Felix Carter is the first of the only two there named, the other being Matthew Clerke; their tax is the same, iis. viiid., and it is in terris, that is, on lands. As may be noticed, the taxes before spoken of have been in bonis, or on goods. It thus appears that Felix Carter was owner in his own right of the property he occupied, as is shown also by his disposing of it in his will to his daughter Julian and her heirs." The ordinary mode of land tenure in England, as is well known, is by lease from the Lord of the Manor, generally for a long term of years, or for life, the eldest son usually succeeding to the estate on the death of his father, when the lease is renewed. All the Bormans of Claydon held the land they occupied in this way, and the records* of their holdings are perhaps still in existence in the Manor Rolls, which should be at Broughton Castle. Felix Carter was thus, in the above respects, one of the two exceptions among Claydon land-holders, and may be considered to have been one of the richer men in the village. The amount of his inventory considerably exceeds the others of the family found there, and a good share of it was in money, called "a debte in the hands of Franncys Ward† by specialty." His will is nuncupative, its date, May 29, 1619, the same as that of his burial, being that on which the witnesses gave testimony to the bequests they had heard him declare. His inventory, where he is described as yeoman, was taken on the 31st of the same month. He must have been at his death not far from 70 years old. His widow survived him about a year and a half, her daughter Julian Boreman and her family probably living with her and caring for her during that time. She made her will (nuncupative) Oct. 14, 1621, and her inventory was taken the 12th of November following. If the date is correct, it was not proved till April 6, 1624, more than two years after her decease.

Richard Carter, youngest child of Felix Carter, baptized in Claydon, Nov. 11, 1591, died unmarried, April, 1616, in his 25th year. Though a young man, he had already accumulated considerable property, as appears from his inventory. The mare and its colt with saddle and bridle, together with three score and eight sheep, give a hint of his active life, and the gold piece for Ann Cleaver of Cambridge, we cannot but guess, was sent to one whom he was intending soon to make his wife. Richard's evident acquaintance with Cambridge is an interesting item in what we learn of him, and like what is found as to other members of the Claydon family having their homes in London, proves that they were not confined to the narrow range of thought and life in their secluded village. Cambridge and London were nearly equally distant from Claydon, about 75 miles in a straight line, equal, in that remote day of poor roads and no public conveyances, to many times what it is now. The special regard Richard seems to have had for his sister Julian has been before alluded to.

As John Betts is known to have been the son of the Widow Mary Betts, one of the first settlers of Hartford, Mary Boreman and Martha Graves are thus proved to have been two other children of the same family.

The name Betts (spelled also Bet, Bett, Betes, Beetts, Bettes,*) is one of much respectability in England, where it occurs early in various counties, as Kent, Hampshire, Rutland, Northampton, Oxfordshire, Norfolk, and Suffolk. In the last-mentioned county, a family of the name, given by Burke, has been seated since the latter part of the 15th century at Wortham Hall, near Withenden, among whom the familiar Christian names, Richard and John, of the Claydon family frequently appear in the different generations. The immediate family of Mary Betts, wife of Samuel Boreman, was evidently from Claydon or its neighborhood. The earliest mention of it that has been found is in a Lay Subsidy list for Banbury Hundred, dated 1546, where occurs the name, Richard Bett, Cleidon, second in the list of that town, his tax on goods, one of the highest, being £5 os. 10*d*. Richard Bett was thus a contemporary of the first Thomas Boreman in Claydon. The name is not found there again for about 80 years, at the end of which time the following baptism is recorded in the Parish Register, the name afterwards again disappearing; "John Bet, the sonne of John Bet and Mary his wyffe was baptised the 5th daye of May 1627." As the mother of Mary Betts was named Mary, and her brother, John, this record, found in the town that was Samuel Boreman's early home, can hardly be doubted to relate to the family of his wife, the John baptized being her brother. Nothing appears to show whether they were descended from the Richard of an earlier date, and their residence in Claydon seems to have been only temporary. There were, however, others of the name in the neighboring towns. In Kings Sutton, in the immediate vicinity of Banbury,† was a John

* In the records of Huntington, Long Island, whither John Betts removed from Wethersfield, his lands are in one instance recorded as those of "John Bates." He is also called there John Bets and John Beets.

† The name Betts can be seen on a shop sign in Banbury to-day.

Bett, whose will,* made Jan. 15, 1615, speaks of brothers Thomas and William, and children, John, Margaret, Thomas, Nicholas, Joane, and Anne. It is quite possible that the oldest son, John, of this testator, is the John found eleven years later in Claydon, father of Mary Boreman.

There were a number of emigrants named Betts among the early New England settlers, some of them also having the Christian name John, but we have no means of learning their relationship to each other or to the Widow Mary of Hartford. Among them was Richard Betts of Cambridge, 1636, later for a few years at Ipswich, and finally, before 1654, removing to Newtown, L. I., for which town "Mr. Richard Betts" was appointed one of the commissioners in 1664, by the General Court of Connecticut. The name Richard, and his settlement in Ipswich, give some ground for suspicion that he may have been related to the Claydon family. There was a John Betts in Cambridge, 1634, who died there 1671, leaving a wife Elizabeth, but no children. There was a William Betts† propounded for freeman in Plymouth Colony, June 1, 1641, and in the list of those able to bear arms in Barnstable, 1643. Hinman notes a Roger Betts in a land division in Branford, 1648, and a Roger and Thomas who settled in Milford in 1658. He gives also a Thomas Betts of Guilford, 1650, with sons Thomas, John, Stephen, Samuel, who removed to Norwalk, where his descendants became prominent citizens. "From him," says Hinman, "descended Dr. Thaddeus Betts, a highly respectable physician of Norwalk, father of William Betts, Esq., many years Postmaster and Judge of Probate of Norwalk. He was father of Hon. Thaddeus Betts, who represented Connecticut in the United States Senate, and died at Washington in 1840, at the age of 52." It is possible that the Thomas of Guilford and Norwalk, who called one of his sons

* See page 149.

† The will of a William Betts of "Younckers" plantation in the town of Westchester, is recorded in New York city. It was made the 12th day of the 12th month, 1673, and mentions a wife Alice, sons Samuel, Hopestill, and John, and dau. Hittabell Tibbott.

John, may be identical with the Thomas, son of John, found in Kings Sutton, and a brother of the husband of the widow Mary.

The Claydon family of Betts is next found in Hartford; the father had in the meantime died, either before their emigration or during the voyage, and the mother, the "Widdoe Betts," has a grant of land (four acres) there among the first settlers, being one in the list of those who had "lotts at the courtisie of the town." In the division of lands on the east side of the River, June 12, 1666, there was set off to her right 12 acres, which John Betts, June 22, 1678, sold to Mr. William Pitkin, it being described in the deed as land "which was his mothers." Her house lot, which she had bought of Seth Grant before February, 1639-40 (the first date when any land in Hartford is recorded), was situated near the bank of the Little River, on the east side of the foot of the present Trumbull Street. In her home there she supported her family by keeping a school for young children. John, supposed to have been her youngest child, was in 1636, when the settlers removed from Cambridge to Hartford, nine years old, Martha, about eleven, and Mary, probably thirteen. We learn of the death of Mrs. Betts from a letter written by Rev. Samuel Stone of Hartford to "Mr. Thomas Shepard, pastor of the Church of Christ at Cambridge," dated Hartford, July 19 [1647]. After announcing the death of Rev. Thomas Hooker, July 7, 1647, and speaking of his own sorrow over the great loss, he goes on:—"Mrs. Hooker was taken with the same sicknesse that night when I came to Hartford, and was very neer death; she is yet weak and I hope recovering.

. . . Mrs Cullick dyed that day when I came to Hartford. Goody* Bets the school dame is dead with some others. 2 of Mr. Warum's children are dead. My wife is sicke & weake. I am not well," etc. The Rev. Thomas Hooker, as well as the others mentioned, died of an "epidemical sickness,"* which is supposed to have been similar to what is now called the "grippe." The Rev. Thomas Shepard, to whom this letter was addressed, came to New England in October, 1635, six months before Rev. Thomas Hooker and his congregation removed to Hartford. He must therefore have become acquainted during the succeeding winter in Cambridge with all that little company, a reason for Mrs. Betts being mentioned to him by name, which may be presumed to show also that she was a person valued in the community. Hon. I. W. Stuart in his "Hartford in the Olden Time," speaking of this mention of Goody Betts in the letter just cited, says: "All we can learn of her and her school, is contained in the brief record of death quoted; yet doubtless there were many of the future magistrates and ministers, and public men of the Colony, who conned their first lessons from the horn book at Goody Betts' side, in her little school room."

At the time of his mother's death, John was past his twentieth year, and Mary had for five or six years been settled in her home in Wethersfield as the wife of Samuel Boreman. Martha, the other daughter, was not married to Nathaniel Graves till some years later. Since all three were afterwards settled in Wethersfield, it is likely that John and Martha had their home after their mother's death with their sister, Mrs. Boreman.

* Governor Winthrop, in his Journal of that summer says: "An Epidemical sickness was through the country among Indians and English, French and Dutch. It took them like a cold and a light fever with it. Such as bled or used cooling drinks died: those who took comfortable things for most part recovered, and that in a few days. Wherein a special providence of God appeared, for not a family, nor but a few persons escaping it, had it brought all so weak as it did some, and continued so long, our hay and corn had been lost for want of help, but such was the mercy of God to his people as few died, not above forty or fifty in the Massachussetts, and near as many at Connecticut." It was during this sickness that Gov. Winthrop's wife Margaret died at Boston, as he goes on to say in the same journal.

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND MARY BETTS.

- i. MARY, b. about 1623, m. probably 1641 or 2, Samuel Boreman ;
d. 1684.
- 2+ ii. MARTHA, b. 1625, m. Jan. 16, 1655-6, Nathaniel Graves ; d. Apr.
13, 1701.
- 3+ iii. JOHN, bapt. in Claydon, England, May 5, 1627; m. 1st, Abigail Elderkin; m. 2d, March 13, 1672-3, Widow Abigail Adams ;
d. about 1690.

2. Martha Betts, second daughter, so far as appears, of John and Mary Betts, was born in England about 1625. She married, Jan. 16, 1655, NATHANIEL GRAVES of Wethersfield, son of Thomas and Sarah Graves of Hartford and Hadley, born in England in 1629. Their home in Wethersfield was on the east side of Broad Street, at its south end. Martha's niece, Mary Boreman, wife of John Robbins, lived next them on the north. Nathaniel Graves was a juror in the Court of Magistrates, 1659 and 1660, surveyor in Wethersfield 1661, and constable 1674. The deaths of himself and wife, as recorded in Wethersfield, are :

"Nathaniel Graves, Sen. aged about 53 died Sept. 28, 1682."

"Widow Martha Graves deceased Apr. 13, 1701, ætatis sua, a 75, as some think."

The births of their two elder children only are in the town records. The others, with their ages, are given in the Probate Record.

CHILDREN OF NATHANIEL AND MARTHA GRAVES.

- i. SARAH, b. Oct. 4, 1656 ; m. Samuel Bradfield, son probably of Lesley Bradfield, who removed from Wethersfield to Branford in 1646.

3. Sergt. John Betts of Wethersfield and Huntington, L. I., son of John and Mary Betts, was born in Claydon, England, where he was baptized May 5, 1627. With his mother and sisters, the father having meantime died, he is next found in Hartford, Conn., where his mother appears among the first settlers. He married, date unknown, Abigail, daughter of John Elderkin, born at Dedham, Mass., Sept. 13, 1641. The Dedham church record reads : "Abigail ye Daughter of our sister Elderkin, being a member of ye church at Linn, at hir request was bapt. 19. 7. 1641." The father, John Elderkin, was a builder and millwright, and resided for short periods in many different towns to which his business called him. He was of Lynn,

To his Betts

1637, of Dedham, 1641, Reading, 1646, Providence, 1648, New London, 1651, and finally settled in Norwich in 1664, where he died June 23, 1687, aged 71. "John Elderkin of Pequett," was appointed by the General Court, May 17, 1655, "to keep an ordinary at Pequett" (New London), which he "laid down" about two years later. It must have been while the family were living in New London, that John Betts married the daughter, fourteen years younger than himself. None but persons of the highest character were then allowed to be inn-keepers, and John Elderkin's family was one of much respectability. His descendants became prominent citizens of Connecticut, and intermarried with some of its best families. The daughter Abigail proved, however, an exception among her people. John Betts was a man of excellent repute in Wethersfield, as is shown by the positions of trust he occupied. In May, 1657, he was confirmed Sergeant by the General Court; he was chosen constable of the town in March, 1655-6, and was a Juror in the Court of Magistrates in 1652, '53, '54, '55, '58, '59, '60, '61. Not long after the last date, his domestic troubles begin to appear. There was estrangement between him and his wife, justified on his part by the latter's character as it comes later to light. She was a strange woman, at that time but twenty-one years of age, whose conduct it is hard to explain according to present standards of judgment. It is not necessary to enter into all the circumstances as they appear in the records: suffice it to say, she was accused of blasphemy (evidently, as her later history shows, not her only or worst offense), was condemned and sentenced in March, 1662-3, to punishment, which consisted in her being led to the place of execution, and made to ascend the gallows with a rope about her neck, there to stand for a time in the presence of the people. The court issued later the following order:

"It is ordered by y^e magistrates upon consideration of an irreconcilable distance of spirit that is in John Betts and his wife in reference to conjugal union. That John Elderkin, her father shall take her under his tuition and Government until further order issue forth from y^e Court or from ye Deputy Governour, Maior Mason, with advice of Mr. Fitch and Mr. Buckley."*

John Betts attempted to live again with his wife, but the records of the Court from 1669 to 1671 show that she was incorrigible, and he was granted a divorce, Oct. 14, 1672.† He married Mch. 13, 1672-3, Mrs. ABIGAIL ADAMS,‡ widow of John² Adams, son of Jeremy¹, who had died in 1670, leaving his wife with seven young children. John Betts sold his house and lot "on the east side of the great street in Wethersfield," Jan. 13, 1680-1, and removed probably about that time to Huntington, Long Island, where he bought, Jan. 26th of the same year, the house and lands formerly belonging to Mark Meggs. Here he seems to have prospered, standing, in 1683, seventh in the list of those who had rateable estates in that town. He had a daughter Abigail by his first wife, and a son John by his second. Of the seven Adams children of Mrs. Betts, Abigail, Jeremy, John, and Jonathan are found in Huntington records. March 29, 1684, on the occasion of a marriage between his "daughter-in-law, Abigail Adams," and Edward Higbe of Huntington, "John Beets and Abigail his wife" deed to them "the south west end of my home,"

* Rev. Gershom Buckley, afterwards of Wethersfield, was then of New London, John Elderkin's home; Rev. James Fitch and Major John Mason, of Norwich.

† The record in regard to Abigail Betts is quoted at length in the Burnham Genealogy, where she is called a "school teacher in Hartford," and an entirely erroneous construction of Thomas Burnham's connection with the case is given. If the compiler of that genealogy had then seen (as he had not) the additional evidence in relation to the affair to be found in Wethersfield Records, including a copy of "the Paper," which Thomas Burnham calls his indictment, he would have been compelled to relinquish such theories. The mistake here alluded to is repeated in Goodwin's History of East Hartford.

‡ She was dau. of Richard Smith, as is shown by a certificate, dated Aug. 26, 1657, in Vol. II, Hfd. Prob. Rec.:

"These are to certify that our children John Addams & Abigail Smith have our full consent to be married together & we know no engagement of either party to any other as witnesseth our hands.

containing two acres. Jeremiah and Jonathan Adams received in 1688 and 1689, deeds of a farm in Huntington from John Beets and Abigail his wife. The descendants of the other son, John Adams, born Sept., 1666, inherited in part the Betts property in Wethersfield, as shown by the following deed. Their right may have come through John Betts, Jr., half brother of John Adams, supposing him to have left no issue.

Jonas Adams* of Trent-town in the Parrish of Hopewell, in the Province of New Jersey, conveys to Thomas Seymour one half part of all his right, title, and interest which he had in the property of his great grandfather, Mr. Jeremiah Adams in Hartford, and also one half part of the lands &c that did belong to his father John Adams, late of Great Egg Harbour, deceased ; also the full half part of the lands in Wethersfield belonging to the estate of John Betts deceased, of Wethersfield.

Dated 16 July 1753 (Vol. 17, p. 379, Hartford Records).

John Betts died at Huntington not long before May 6, 1690, at which date Mark Meggs appeared from Stratford at the land formerly his, and "delivered it by turf and twig unto the widdowe Betts for the use of John Betts and John Adams." The same day Mark Meggs of Stratford acquits certain rights to "John Adams of Huntington, husbandman, son of Abigail Betts of Huntington."

In 1696, "John Beets and Abigail Beets, mother of John Beets," sold to Benj. Scudder their land at Crab Meadow in Huntington, "with housing and outhousing, medow, bogges, swamps thereto belonging," and are not afterwards found in the records. John Betts, Jr., had, not long before this date, come of age, his father and mother having been married in 1673. It was probably in the same year (1696) that he pre-

SAMUEL BOREMAN OF WETHERSFIELD AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

THE BOREMAN FAMILY IN NEW ENGLAND.

There have been found in New England records four early settlers named Boreman. These, in the order in which they appeared, are as follows:

1. Thomas Boreman of Barnstable, some leading facts in whose history may be gathered from the records of Plymouth Colony.

March 25, 1633, "Thomas Boreman" is in a list of those rated in that Colony.

March 13, 1634-5, "Thomas Boreman was agreed wth for 30^{li} to be paid in beauer at 10s p li or other comodities of valuable price to be levied of the Company to doe ye forte (in mañer following) by y^e last of May An^o 1635." Here follows a description of the work (carpenter's) required.

"Thomas Boreman" is one of those in Barnstable in 1643 able to bear arms.

"Thomas Boreman" of Barnstable married, March 3, 1644-5, Hannah, daughter of Anthony Annable* of Barnstable.

June 8, 1655, "Thō Burman" is one of the surveyors of highways for Barnstable.

June 4, 1661, "Thomas Burman" of Barnstable, one to have land at Saconeesett (now Falmouth).

June 3, 1662, in a list of those to whom grants of land are allowed, "as first born children of this Government," appears "Anthony Anible for his daughter Hannah Burman."

* It is said of Anthony Annable by a historian of Barnstable, that he was oftener employed in public business than any other man in the town except Gov. Thomas Hinckley, yet he never had the title of "Mr.," but was always called "Goodman."

June 1, 1663, Anthony Annable and William Crocker were appointed administrators on the estate of "Thomas Burman."

CHILDREN OF THOMAS AND HANNAH BOREMAN.

- i. HANNAH, b. May, 1646.
- ii. THOMAS, b. Sept., 1648 ; m. Apr. 9, 1678, Mary Harper.
- iii. SAMUEL, b. July, 1651 ; slain Mch. 26, 1676, at Rehoboth.
- iv. DESIRE, b. May, 1654.
- v. MARY, b. March, 1656.
- vi. MEHITABEL, b. Sept., 1658.
- vii. TRISTRAM, b. Aug., 1661.

The family removed, probably in the second generation, to Falmouth, where Thomas Bourman, April 22, 1690, bought 100 acres of land. Thomas Bourman was town clerk of Falmouth in 1702, 1704, 1705. March 26, 1676, he was appointed with William Wyat to lay out lands at Woods Hole. The family early joined the Friends;* for refusing to pay for the support of the ministry in Falmouth, Thomas Bourman was sent to prison, and from 1709 to 1728, had several distrains made of his property to pay taxes. Thomas² Boreman, and Mary Harper, his wife, had children : Samuel, Thomas (m. Jane Harby), Stephen (unm.), Benjamin (m. Hannah), Hannah (m. 1719, Nathan Barlow), Wait (m. 1720, Benjamin Allen). The son Benjamin, who married Hannah, was a man of enterprise and wealth. He died 1743, leaving sons, Daniel, Samuel, and Stephen, all Friends.† He wrote his name Bowerman, as many of the family, it is said, now do. A Benjamin Bowerman of Sandwich and Yarmouth (d. 1777) whose descendants removed to Maine, is spoken of in the Gen. Reg., Vol. 31, p. 280.

The different forms of the name in the Barnstable fam-

* Thomas Burman of Barnstable was perhaps suffering for maintaining Quaker principles when he was fined, March 8, 1678-9, £5, "for being married in a clandestine way ;" or, as elsewhere expressed, "for marrying himself."

† Much of the information relating to the children of Thomas Boreman is taken from Sketches of Barnstable Families, by Amos Otis.

ily are exactly the same as those found in early English records, as already mentioned. As Thomas was one of the most common names in the Boreman family around Banbury, this one in Plymouth Colony may have belonged to some branch of it. His descendants seem never to have changed the name to Boardman.

2. Thomas Boreman of Ipswich, 1634-1673. See pp. 103-125.

3. Samuel Boreman of Ipswich, 1638-9; Wethersfield, 1641-1673. See p. 158.

4. William Boreman of Guilford, Conn., concerning whom the account of Hinman, p. 262, is quoted. He was plaintiff in court in Hartford, Dec. 4, 1645, against John Stadder of Wethersfield. He thus appears to have been in the Connecticut Colony for a time. His name was not entered in the list of planters of Guilford until 1650, and not on any list of freemen there. He was unmarried, or had no wife in Conn. Colony, or in Guilford. He died about 1659. "At a Particular Court held at Guilford, the 6th of February Anno 1661" (1662, present style) "an inventory of the estate of William Boreman was presented by Henry Dowde and Wm. Seward, with whom the said Boreman sojourned, and left the chief part of his estate in custody, when he went away and perished in his journey." "The foresaid was proved in Court, and the just value thereof. Mr. [Brayan] Rossiter requested on behalf of Thomas Dunk of Saybrook, and Daniel Butcher of Hawkhurst in Kent, Old England, brother-in-law to the said Boreman, deceased, and so next of kin for aught that appears, that no alienation may be made of the estate so far as may occasion imparity of payment unto them or any that have just debts to claim from the estate after due trial." A letter found in his chest after his decease confirmed the claim of his English relative. Hinman says farther that William Boreman is noted in June, 1654, on the records at Stratford, "that he and Samuelli Barrett had been ordered to wear a halter."

William Boreman was therefore from Kent, and could have had no relationship, except the most remote, to Thomas and Samuel Boreman. A record from Somerset House, London, relating probably to some of William's family, is this: "April 1, 1658, Administration granted to Katherine Borman, relict of Joseph Borman, late of Hawkhurst, Kent." Many of the name lived in the region about Hawkhurst.

There are in the early records of the Colonies two settlers by name Boardman and Bordman, respectively. As the Boremans, descendants of Thomas and Samuel, have, by gradual change of name, come to be confounded with this originally distinct family, these are here mentioned, though proved to be of an entirely unrelated stock.

Contemporary with Thomas Boreman of Barnstable, there lived also in Plymouth Colony a THOMAS BOARDMAN of Sandwich and Yarmouth, of which latter town he was for some years constable. He came from London; had a wife Lucy, and children, Thomas, Susanna, and Thankful. He is said to have died very aged, Aug., 1689.

The second of the name was WILLIAM BORDMAN of Cambridge, Mass., freeman there in 1652. He was the son by a former marriage of Rebecca, wife of Stephen Day, the first Cambridge printer, whom he accompanied from England in 1638. He was no doubt the son of Andrew Bordman, of Cambridge, England, baker, whose will, made Feb. 10, 1616, proved Apr. 19, 1617, is recorded at Somerset House, London. In it he leaves £40 to each of his sons, Richard, Andrew, Thomas, and William, to be paid them at the age of 21; his house and remaining property he bequeathed to his wife, Rebecca Bordman. According to Mr. Savage, William lived probably a short time at New London, but returned to Cambridge in 1649. He had, by his wife Frances, children, Moses, Rebecca, Andrew, Aaron, Frances, Martha, Mary, William, and Elizabeth. He was a major, and was connected for a long time with Harvard College as steward, as were also one or more of his descendants. He died Mch. 25, 1685, aged 71. His descendants have been a highly respectable family, living in eastern Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine, and in various other parts of the Union. The name is now spelt by them Boardman.

Letters have been received from a number of Boardman families who have come from England to America, either in the present generation or in the one or two preceding. The name is said to be common at the present time in the vicinity of Liverpool. There are others, whose origin, so far as known to them, was in Canada; they are, perhaps, descendants of some of the name who emigrated from the States at an early period. Still others, through lack of knowledge of early family records, suppose their first American ancestor to have come from England at some time in the last century — an idea which has, in several instances, been proved entirely unfounded, and which could doubtless, if the facts were known, be disproved in other cases also. One instance is known where a family of French Canadian descent in East Hartford has taken the name Boardman to replace their own, which is Bowdoin. Some of this family live in Hartford, and are entered as Boardmans in the City Directory. Another of the name found in the same Directory has proved on examination to be a Swede, whose real name is Bowman, or some name of similar sound.

GENEALOGY OF THE FAMILY OF SAMUEL BOREMAN OF WETHERSFIELD.

FIRST GENERATION.

1. Samuel¹ Boreman (Christopher, Thomas, Thomas, William) of Wethersfield, Conn., son of Christopher and Julian (Carter) Boreman of Claydon, near Banbury, Oxfordshire, England, was born in Banbury in 1615, and baptized there Aug. 20, 1615, as shown in the following extract from the Parish Register.

August
Samuell Borma son to Christopher Borma
& Julian his wife was baptiz^d 20 day

He removed with his father's family about 1619, from Banbury to Claydon, their early home. He married, date unknown, MARY BETTS,* daughter of John and Mary Betts, who were of Claydon in 1627, and afterwards emigrated to New England, where the mother, then the "Widoe" Mary Betts, had a portion in the first grants of land in Hartford, Conn., and died there in the summer of 1647, being then called "the School Dame."

* See account of the Betts Family, p. 138.

Samuel Boreman's first appearance as a settler in New England is at Ipswich, Mass., where, in a list of inhabitants without date, he is called a cooper, and has land recorded to him, Aug. 22, 1639. He was no doubt in the country some time before this date, having very possibly arrived the preceding summer, when, as we learn from Governor Winthrop's Journal,* very many came over. Among the twenty ships which arrived that season, was one called the "New Supply, alias the Nicholas" of London, in which came Mr. John Josselyn, Gent., who kept a journal of this voyage, and also of one taken some years later, both of which were published in London in 1675.† It is not only interesting, but curious, that Josselyn, who gives the names of very few on board, including those of not more than two or three of the 164 passengers, should have happened to mention among the latter one called Boreman; he says :

"Anno Dom. 1638, April the 26, being Thursday, I came to Gravesend and went aboard the New-Supply alias the Nicholas of London, a Ship of good force, 300 tons burthen, carrying 20 Sacre ‡ and Minion, man'd with 48 sailors. The Master, Robert Taylor, the Merchant or Undertaker, Mr. Edward Tinge, with 164 passengers, men, women, and children."

Further he says: "On the eighth day,§ one Boreman's man, a passenger, was duck'd at the main Yards Arm (for being drunk with his master's strong waters which he stole) thrice, and fire given to two whole Sacree at that instant."

* Mo. 4, 1638, "Many ships arrived this year with people of good quality and estate, notwithstanding the council's order that none should come without the King's license, but God so wrought that some obtained, and others came away without. . . . There came over this summer 20 ships, and at least 300 persons."

§ Of May.

At the close of Josselyn records; "July 3 we anchored in the Bay of Massachusetts before Boston."

As Josselyn omits giving the full name of this Mr. Boreman whose servant was punished by being ducked, it is necessary to examine other evidence in order to discover which one of the Boreman family this passenger in the New Supply must have been.

He was, to begin with, one of the Puritan emigrants, so many of whom arrived in New England that summer, and he had come, bringing a servant (perhaps also a wife), evidently intending to settle in the country. He had chosen a favorable season for his voyage, when the ocean passage was least likely to be stormy, and though he did not land till July 3d, too late to undertake the cultivation of ground that year, there was business enough to occupy him during the remaining months of the summer and the following autumn and winter, before the season for planting should come round. He must look about for the best place in which to establish himself, and when that point was decided, and he had obtained his grant of land, he must clear it and fence it, plough it to make the soil ready for his crops — all this no light labor in a new country — and he must, in the meantime, have a dwelling put up to shelter himself and family. It was the law in the colonies, that the settlers should confirm the titles to their grants of land by entering them with their location and boundaries upon the Town Book — a law not always complied with without delay, as is often shown by the date of these records, as well as by the occasional, evidently needed enforcement of the ordinance by the General Courts. Sooner or later, however, such entry was necessary, especially when a sale of the property made the giving of a good title imperative. Naturally, therefore, this Mr. Boreman would be expected soon to appear in the Record Book of some town, and in fact, after such an interval as under the circumstances might be allowed, a record of this kind does appear, and it is that of Samuel Boreman, who, Aug. 22, 1639, enters his grant on the Town Book of Ipswich.

It will be remembered, that there have been found among the early New England settlers but three besides Samuel, bearing the name of Boreman; that of these, Thomas Boreman of Barnstable and Thomas Boreman of Ipswich, had in 1638 already been several years in the country, while the third, William Boreman of Guilford, does not make his appearance in the records till Dec., 1645, more than seven years later. The presumption is therefore strong, that we here discover, with singular good fortune, not only the ship in which Samuel Boreman crossed the ocean, with the port from which it came, and the date of its sailing and arrival, but also, what could hardly under any circumstances have been hoped for, full particulars of his voyage.

Whether the Mr. Boreman* of Josselyn was Samuel, as is probable, or some other of the name, who in an unaccountable manner utterly disappeared† after landing, the journal has a direct bearing on this history as showing the circumstances likely to attend a voyage taken at the time when Samuel Boreman is known to have crossed the ocean, as well as for the interesting glimpse it gives of some of the ideas on various subjects prevalent at that day, which he doubtless shared. Some of the entries are therefore here quoted, such only being selected as are of most importance in this connection.

Leaving the mouth of the Thames, April 26, 1638, our

* The mention of a Boreman in Josselyn's Journal was first brought to notice by Mr. Manly B. Boardman, who has no doubt of his identity with Samuel.

† There seems no way of accounting for any such disappearance of a planter who was evidently a man of some substance, except on the improbable supposition, that after having taken the decisive step of leaving his native country, and incurring the trouble and expense of the voyage with its attendant preparations, he soon turned about, and went home to England. If he had died anywhere in the Colonies, even before settling, or receiving a grant of land, some notice of him would have appeared, as is shown in the case of William Boreman of Guilford, and of many others in the early probate records, where even those who had only a few personal belongings, such as clothing, tools, etc., had account of their property taken and preserved in the records.

voyagers saw, on the second day out, the wreck of a man-of-war on the Goodwin,* with only the main mast top visible above water ; it was cast away a month before, sixteen men were drowned, the rest were saved by fishermen.

May 3^d, at one o'clock at night, "wind with a gust, rain, thunder, and lightning, and now a Servant of one of the passengers sickened of the small pox."

"May 5th, anchored within 10 leagues of Isle of Wight—becalmed from 7 o'clock in the morning till 12 at noon, where we took good store of whittings and half a score Gurnets,† saw an infinite number of porpisces about the ship—night proved tempestuous with much lightning and thunder."

"The 7th day the uttermost part of Silly was N. E. 12 leagues off, and now we began to sail by the logg."

"The Eighth day, one Boreman's man etc.—two mighty whales we now saw, the one now spouted water through two great holes in her head ; about 8 of the clock at night, a flame settled upon the main-mast, it was about the bigness of a great Candle and is called by our Seamen St Elmes fire, it comes before a storm and is commonly thought to be a Spirit ; if two appear they prognosticate safety."

"The Eleventh day they spoke a ship of Dartmouth, which came from Marcelloes ; great seas all night and we now see to the S. W. six tall ships."

"The Twelfth day being Sunday . . . the partie that was sick of the small pox now dyed whom we buried in the Sea, tying a bullet (as the manner is) to his neck, and another to his leggs, turned him out at a Port-hole, giving fire to a great Gun. In the afternoon one Martin Ivy, a stripling, servant to Captain Cammock, was whipt naked at the Capstern with a Cat with nine tails for filching 9 great Lemmons out of the Chirurgeon's Cabbin which he eat rinds and all in less than an hours time."

"The Thirteenth day, we took a Sharke a great one.

* Dangerous sands on the southeast coast of England.

† Whittings and Gurnets, kinds of fish, the latter abounding particularly on the south coast of Devonshire ; both highly esteemed for food.

The Seamen divided it into quarters and after they had cooked it, he proved very rough grained, not worthy of wholesome preferment, but in the afternoon we took store of Bonitoes or Spanish Dolphins, a fish about the size of a large mackarel, beautified with admirable varietie of glittering colours in the water and was excellent food."

"The Fourteenth day we spake with a Plimouth man bound for New-found-land. . . . Now was Silly 50 leagues off, and now many of the passengers fall sick of the small Pox and Calentures."

"The Seventeenth day, the wind at N. W. about 8 of the clock we saw five great ships bound for the Channel, which was to the Westward of us about two leagues off, we thought them to be Flemmings; here we expected to have met with Pirates, but were happily deceived."

"The Eight and twentieth day, all this while very great grown Sea and mighty winds."

"June the first day in the afternoon, very thick foggie weather, we sailed by an enchanted Island, saw a great deal of filth and rubbish floating by the Ship, heard Sea-gulls and Crowes (Birds that always frequent the shoar) but could see nothing by reason of the mist; towards Sunset, when we were past the Island it cleared up."

"The Fourteenth day of June, very foggie weather, we sailed by an Island of Ice, three leagues in length mountains high, in form of land with Bayes and Capes, and a River pouring off it into the Sea. We saw likewise two or three Foxes or Devils skipping upon it. These Islands of Ice are congealed in the North, and brought down in the Spring-time with the current to the banks on this side New-found-land, and there stopt, where they dissolve at last to water. Here it was as cold as in the middle of January in England and so continued till we were some leagues beyond it."

"The Sixteenth day we sounded and found 35 fathom water, upon the bank of New-found-land we cast out our hooks for cod-fish, thick foggie weather, the Codd being taken on a Sunday morning, the Sectaries aboard threw those their servants took into the Sea again, although they wanted fresh victuals, but the Sailors were not so nice."

"The Nineteenth day Captain Thomas Cammock (a near kinsman of the Earl of Warwick) now had another lad Thomas Jones, that dyed of the small pox at eight of the clock at night."

"The One and twentieth day we met with two Bristow men bound for New England, and now we are 100 and 75 leagues off Cape Sable."

"The Two and twentieth another passenger dyed of a Consumption. Now we passed by the Southern part of New-found-land, within sight of it."

"The Eight and twentieth day one of Mr. Edward Ting's the undertaker's men now dyed of the Phthisick."

"The Nine and twentieth day sounded at night and found 120 fathome water, the head of the Ship struck against a rock; at four of the clock we descryed two sails bound for New-found-land, and so for the Streights; they told us of a general Earthquake in New England, of the birth of a monster at Boston, in the Massachusetts Bay a mortality, and now we are two leagues off Cape Ann."

"The Thirtieth day proved stormie, and having lost the sight of the Land, we saw none untill the morning; doubtfully discovering the Coast, fearing the Lee-shore all night we bore out to Sea."

"July the first day we sounded at eight of the clock at night, and found 93 fathome water, descried land."

"The Third day we Anchored in the Bay of Massachusetts, before Boston. Mr. Tinge's other man now dyed of the small pox."

"The tenth day I went a shore upon Noddles Island to Mr. Samuel Maverick, the only hospitable man in all the country, giving entertainment to all Comers gratis."

"Having refreshed myself for a day or two upon Noddles Island I crossed the Bay in a small Boat to Boston, which then was rather a Village than a town, there being not above Twenty or thirty houses." *

From what has been learned of Samuel Boreman's home and family, it is easy to see what were the influences that had led him to come to New England. Claydon had always been a field too confined for most of the members of his family. It is plain from the records that not more than one or two in each generation had continued to make it a home through life, while the rest had sought their fortune, some in London, and others elsewhere. Samuel had grown up amid strong Puritan influences, and he must have heard all through his youth much talk of the emigrations then taking place in such numbers. He was fourteen years old when Governor Winthrop and his company set sail for Massachusetts Bay, about which all the Boreman family must have known, not only through the ordinary channels of news, but from their relatives in London, one of whom, Samuel's cousin Felix, had supplied some part of the equipment of an earlier voyage. When he was about nineteen, his cousin Thomas Boreman, fourteen years his senior, had joined the ranks of the emigrants, and Samuel, with the rest of the family at home, had no doubt eagerly read the accounts regarding the new country which he from time to time sent back. He was twenty years of age at the time when Lords Say and Brook, in whose immediate neighborhood his family lived, undertook the founding of the town of Saybrook in Connecticut, while in the same year had gone from the adjoining town of Fenny Compton, William Gibbons, sent by the Wyllys family to prepare a home for them in Hartford, to which they themselves came the year following. Doubtless some others also of Samuel's friends and acquaintances from the immediate region of his home were among the emigrants.* That his cousin Thomas, between whose family and his own there seems to have been a tie stronger even than that ordinarily found between cousins, had established himself in Ipswich, is reason sufficient for Samuel's having decided to settle in that town.

* At the close of his journal, Josselyn gives "the intending planter some instructions for the furnishing himself with things necessary and for undertaking the transport of his family." The ship's provision is "Beef or Porke, Fish, Butter, Cheese, Pease, Pottage, Water-gruel, Bisket and Bear." Certain things recommended to be carried in case of sickness at sea are: "Conserves of Roses, Clove Gilliflowers, Wormwood, Green ginger, Burnt wine, English spirits, Prunes to stew, Raisons of the Sun, Currence, Sugar, Nutmeg, Mace, Cinnamon, pepper and ginger, white Bisket or Spanish Rusk, Eggs, Rice, juice of Lemmons well put up to cure or prevent Scurvy." A list of needed articles of clothing and bedding is also given, the latter including "Seven ells of course Canvas to make a bed at Sea for two men to be filled with straw," and a rug for bed covering.

Granted to Samuell Boreman one house lott one acre a quarter of ground, lying at the West end of the Towne, having a house lott of Richard Hucklyes (elsewhere Hutley) on the East and a house lott of Thomas Hartes on the West : also six acres of planting ground beyond Mudy River having a planting lott of Mr. Smiths South east and certaine tenn acre lotts of Thomas French the elder and others butting upon the North west of it, to enjoy the sayde Lands to him his heires and assigns forever. Entered the 22nd of the sixth month 1639 into the Towne [records]

*There are many familiar New England names in the records of Claydon and its neighborhood, such as Waters, Gibbs, Jarvis, Richards, Haynes, Draper, Franklin, Goodwin, Eglestone, Ward, Barret, Sherman, French, Page, Nichols, Bradford, Turner, Welch, Greenhill, Dix, Partridge, Gardner, Coleman, Savage, Robbins ("Richard Robbins, Reeve of Cropredy"), etc., but we have no means of identifying them with the families of any of our early settlers. It can hardly be thought that the Boremans and the Widow Mary Betts were the only representatives of that neighborhood in the Colonies. There is trace of others in the following : Benjamin Herbert who came to Hartford in 1644, had a wife, Christian Nethercott, who, in her will, dated 1670, left property to her kinsmen, "Abel and John Nethercoat, living in Old England, near Banbury." (There is a hamlet in the parish of Banbury called Nethercot.) Elizabeth Watts also, widow of Capt. Richard Watts of Hartford, in her will, dated Feb. 28, 1695, left a bequest to her cousin, Mary Smith, "living in Banbury, in Oxfordshire, in Old England."

Memorandum that Samuel Boreman hath sould and exchanged this house lott, and planting lott, lying and bounded as is here above written, unto George Hadlye of this towne, husbandman, together with one small Dwelling house, built and standing upon the sayde house lott, together with all the privileges and apurtenances to the sayde house lott and planting lott belonging as by a deed under his hand bearing date the same day and year with this present exchange, and the sayde George Hadlye to enjoy the sayd house and Land together with all the privileges to him his heires and assigns forever. (pp. 58, 59, Ipswich Records.)

Memorand. that whereas George Hadley of this towne Planter being lately possessed of one house lott about one rood of ground, lying on the South syde the Towne River,* bounded by an house lott formerly granted to Philip Challis on the East, and by a house lott formerly granted to Robert Hayes on the South west, this houselott being formerly granted to John Wedgwood as apeareth on this book folio 10, and by him sould to the sayd George Hadlye. also the sayd George being possessed of a planting lott bought of Katheren Gilven widow, lying uppon Rabbitt Hill, and bounded as apeareth in this book folio 20, now the sayd George Hadley hath sould and exchanged all the sayd house lott and planting lott to Samuell Boreman of this Towne, cooper, together with one small Dwelling house built and standing upon the sayd house lott together with all the privileges and apurtenances to the sayd House and Lands belonging as by a deed under his hand bearing date the same day and yeare with this present date, as doeth more largely appear, and the sayd George Hadley doeth by this entrance confirm the sale, and the sayd Samuell Boreman is quietly to enjoy the sayd House and Lands together with all other the premises to him his heires and assigns forever. Entered by theyr joynt consent this 12th day of the 11th month called January 1639. (pp. 63 and 64, Ips. Rec.)

The last information in regard to Samuel Boreman's residence in Ipswich is contained in a letter written by him at Wethersfield, ten years after his removal there. The place where it was written is not given, but the name of the witness, Nathaniel Dickinson,† a well-known man in Wethersfield, and a special friend of Samuel Boreman, shows that the letter came from that town. It is found recorded as a quit-claim deed at Salem, and is of great value because it fixes the date of Samuel's removal from Ipswich. It refers to further land transactions, not elsewhere recorded, by which, within little more than a year from the time when he bought the above property of George Hadlye, he had sold it, and bought another house and house-lot of Edward Ketchum, which he had again sold about April, 1641, to Francis Jordan.

The letter is as follows :

This 12 of April 1651.

This present writing witnesseth that I Saml Boreman sold unto Frances Jordan of Ipswich about Ten years agoe my house and house lott containing about one acre more or less, Scituated in Ipswich which I formerly bought of Edward Ketcham and do by these present give him the sayd Frances Jordan as good a title unto the saide house and house lott as I ever had from the fore s'd Edward Ketcham and I Samuel Borman have good deeds at this day from the sayd Ketcham that I came to it lawfully & possesst peacably. now for the sending you a totall receipt of the full payment of the seaventeane pounds I cannot because there is about the matter of six shillings behynd but as for the rest of the pay of sixteen pounds and fourteen shillings I do acknowledge myself fully satisfied. I thought not to have spoken of the 6 sh. but having such an opportunity I thought to put you in mynd of it and to let you see it is my right, and do desire you to take some time to convey it me. I had two bills of you but I think I have burnt them before ever this writing came into my hands for I cannot find them but lett this paper be your discharge of all the price of the house save only 6 shillings which I here challenge and there I rest.

Your friend

SAM BORMAN

Witness to this deed

NATHANIEL DICKINSON

I Samuel Borman have delivered this deed or writing as my act before this witness for the use of Frances Jordan or assigne. Witness my hand the day and year afore said.

(Recorded at Ipswich) Apr. 29, 1671.

Samuel Boreman was thus, during the two or three years at Ipswich, the owner of three different homesteads in succession. The first, granted him by the town, was in its northwest part, at the west end of the High Street, while his cousin Thomas was then living at the east end of the same street (called there, however, East street), not far from the landing on Ipswich River. The second piece was in the south part of the town, and on the south bank of the river ; the third, not being recorded, except as mentioned in this letter, its location is unknown.

It was, therefore, in 1641, that Samuel Boreman took the important step of removing from Ipswich, in the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, to Wethersfield in that of Connecticut. For this change several very probable reasons may be assigned.

First; it had just then begun to be dark times in the New England colonies. Emigration from the mother country, which up to this period had been so numerous that the population in 1640 had come to be 26,000, had almost entirely ceased. Changes were taking place in England that promised relief from the evils the Puritans had left home to escape, and those who might otherwise have come over found their aid needed in the contests now beginning there. The tide seemed indeed for a time to be setting the other way, so many went back to help on the Parliament's cause in England. The result of this state of affairs was, that property in New England declined in value, money became scarce, and there was general stagnation in business. The uneasiness arising from these conditions led many among the colonists to begin looking about for new homes. Especially was this the case in some parts of Massachusetts. Governor Winthrop, in his Journal in 1641, speaks of this desire of many to emigrate, by which he was evidently troubled, and it was at this time that the following appears in the records : "Divers families in Linne and Ipswich having purposed to inhabit Long Island, their leaders were called before the General Court, and dissuaded from proceeding any farther, because it would strengthen the Dutch," etc. In this general movement, Connecticut offered superior advantages to the settler in the greater freedom* of its

* In Massachusetts all but church members were excluded from becoming freemen. As the early records of the Ipswich church are not in existence, it does not appear whether Samuel Boreman was a member of it. If so, he had not in 1658 removed his relation to the one in Wethersgovernment as compared with Massachusetts, and in the well-known fertility of the soil in its river valley. No doubt, too, in Samuel Boreman's case, there were in Connecticut old friends from England who held out to him these and other inducements to settle near them.

A second probable reason for his removal consisted in the greater advantages to be enjoyed for his business. Samuel Boreman was a cooper, an important trade in the early days of the colonies, not alone because it supplied useful and almost indispensable articles for the household, field. There is printed in Hollister's History of Connecticut a list of signatures to the remonstrance of inhabitants of Wethersfield to the General Court, Aug. 17, 1658, in regard to Rev. John Russell, asking that he should be compelled to give his reasons for excommunicating Lieut. Hollister. The signers are divided into "members of the church," and "not members of the church." There are of the former, eleven, five men and six women; the latter, all men, Samuel Boreman among them, number thirty-eight, comprising probably the great majority of the adult males of the town, which eleven years later, in 1669, when most of the second generation had grown up, had but sixty-two freemen. Prof. Johnston, in his History of Connecticut, says: "The first churches were mostly small — those of Hartford and New Haven, of course, the largest. The church of Wethersfield when it split (1640-41), and the defeated party removed to Stamford, numbered but seven communicants, the orthodox majority numbering four, and the heterodox minority three. Pierson's church at Southampton, L. I., numbered but sixteen. This paucity of numbers, however, was due to the promptness of the first settlers in organizing their churches. The church really began with the settlement."

Prof. Johnston's authority for the statement in regard to the Wethersfield church (which, it is to be remembered, was an offshoot from that of Watertown, Mass.), is Gov. Winthrop's Journal, where, under date of Nov. 5, 1639, he says: "The rent at Conn. grew greater etc., so as the church of Wethersfield was not only divided from the rest of the town, &c, but of those 7 who were the church 4 fell off, so it was conceived thereby the church was dissolved which occasioned the church of Watertown here (which had divers of her members there not yet dismissed) to send two of their church to look after their members to take order with them, but the contention and alienation of mind was such as they could not bring them to any other accord than this that the one party must remove to some other place, which they both consented to but still the difficulty remained, for those 3 who pretended themselves to be the church pleaded that privilege for their stay, & the others alleged their multitude etc., so as neither would give place etc."

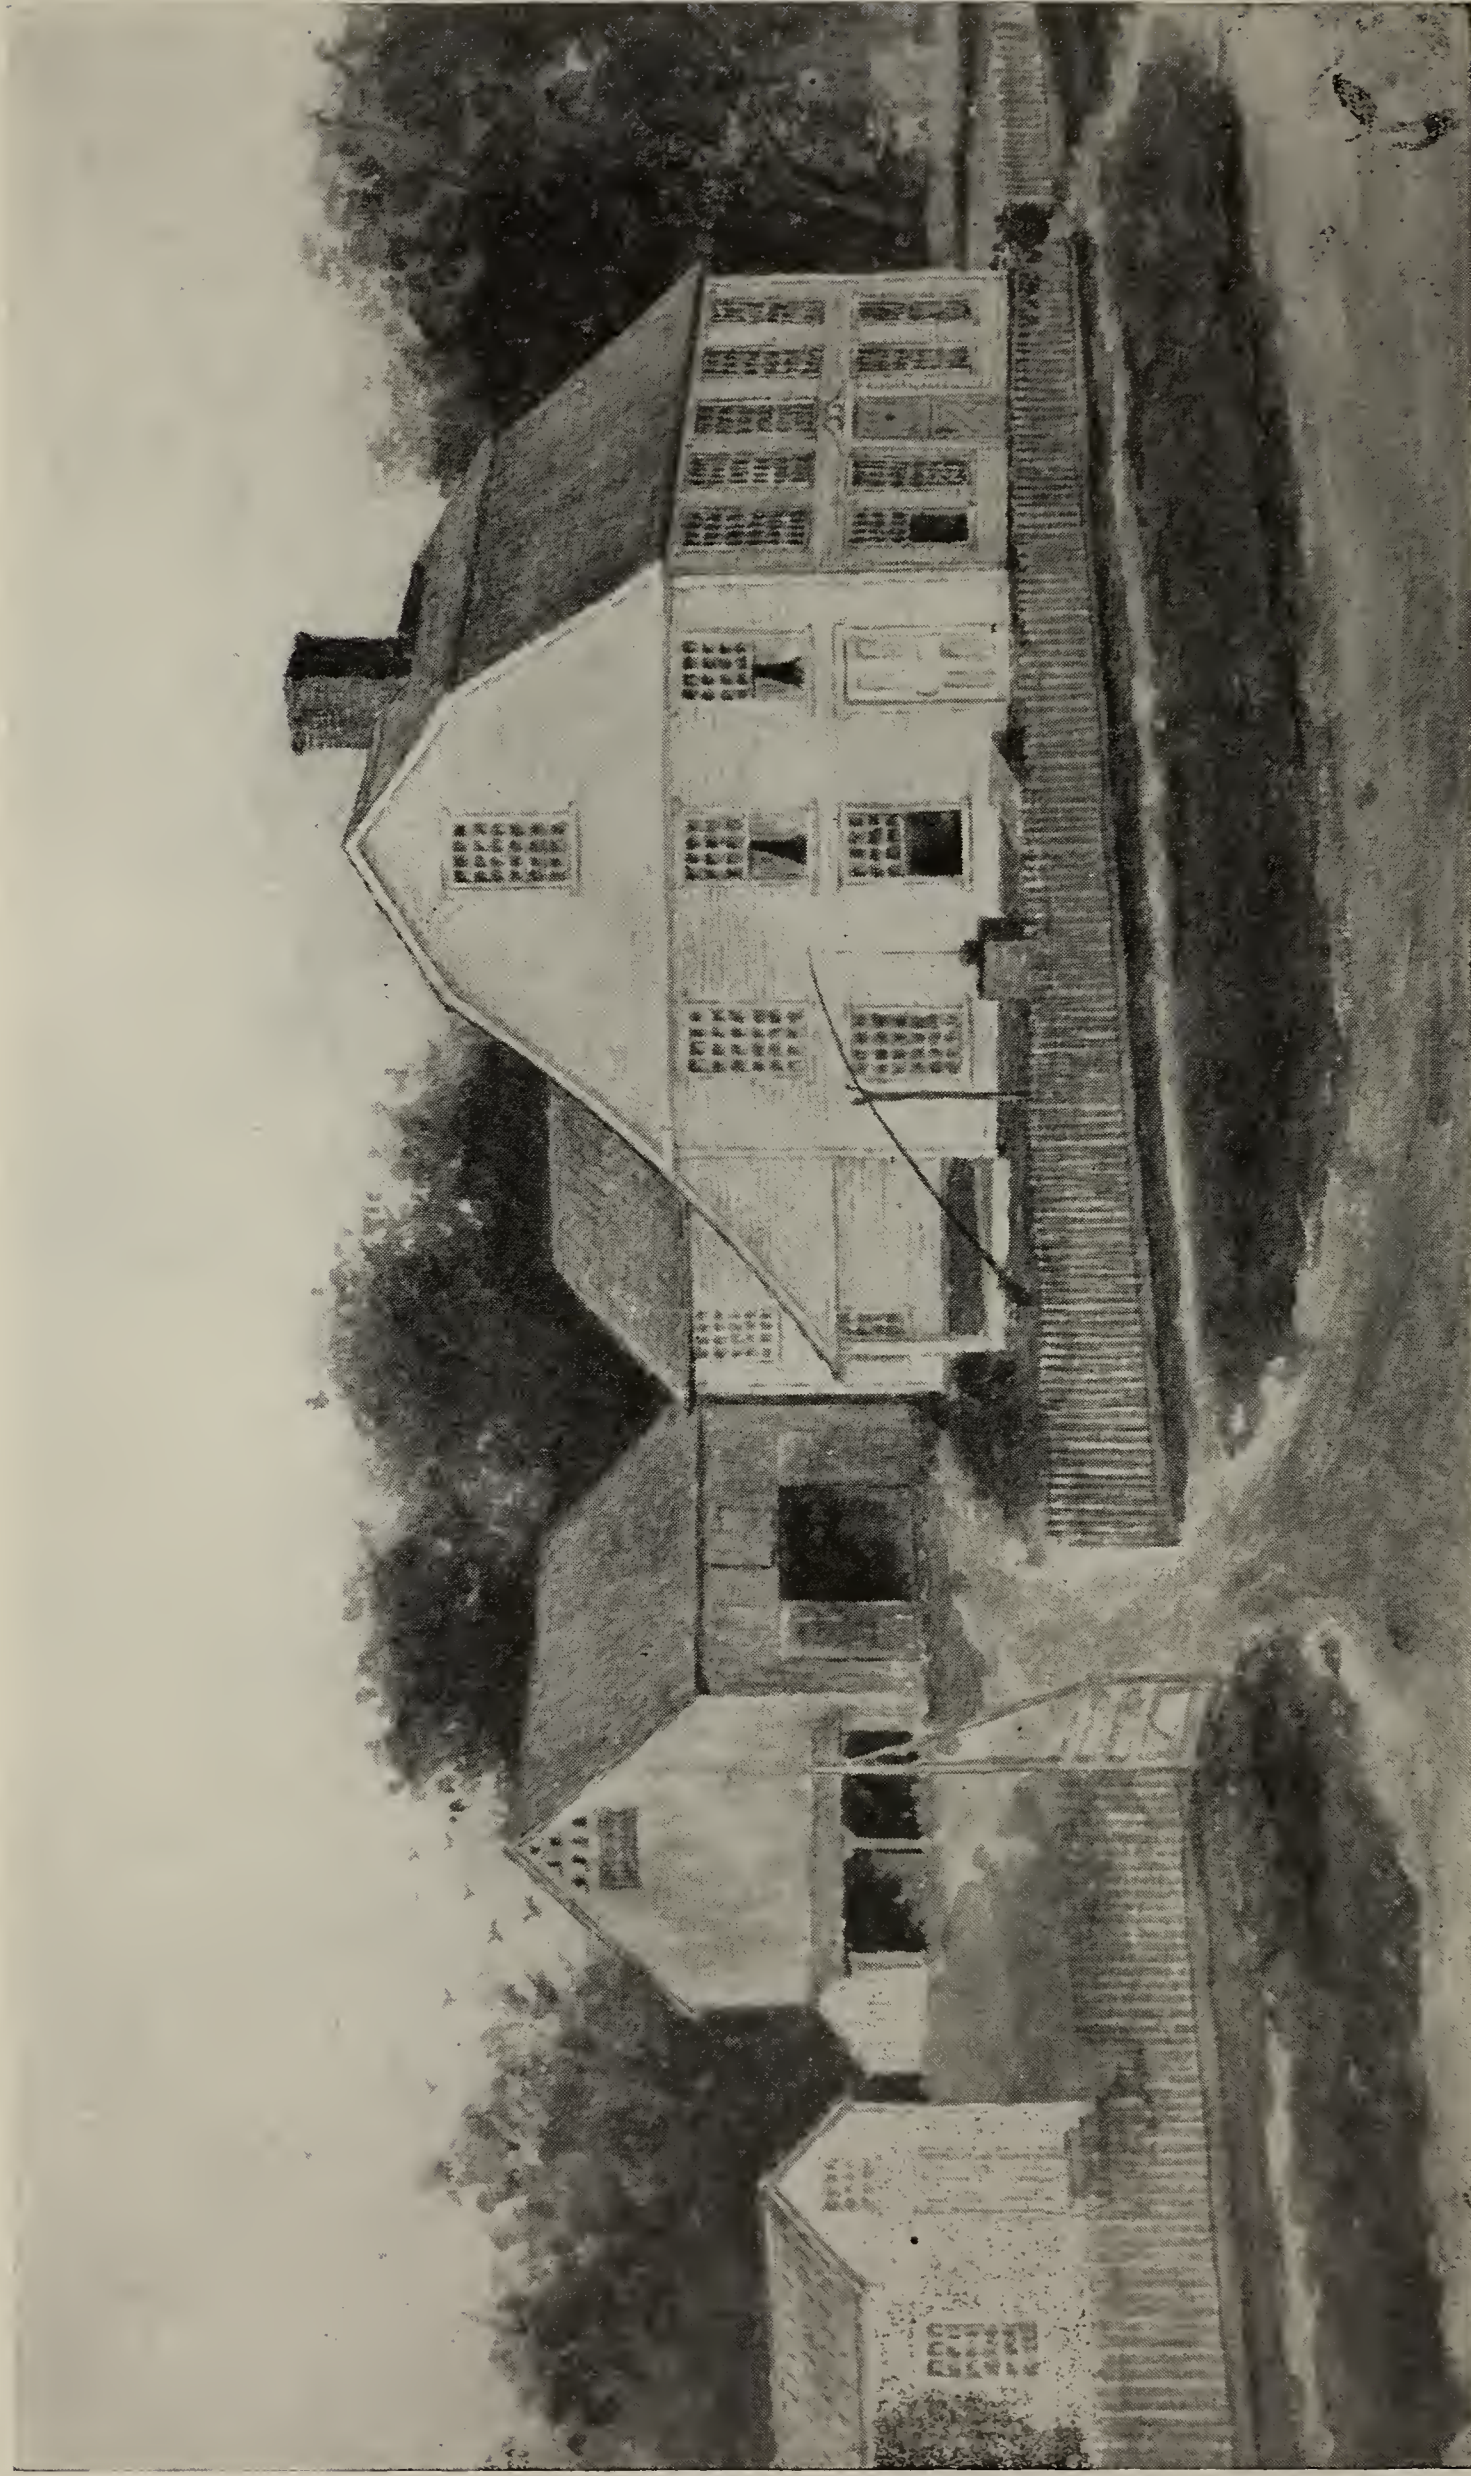

which was a very small part of its business. As soon as any commerce was established in the country, one of the most important articles of trade was pipe staves, to make which was the province of the cooper. As early as 1641, the year of Samuel Boreman's removal from Ipswich, these had become so much a leading article of export in Connecticut, that a law was made regulating their dimensions, and providing for an inspector of them in each town. In November, 1649, the General Court of Connecticut authorized Samuel Smith, "and the rest of the owners of the shipp at Wethersfield to get and make so many pipe staves as will freight out the said shipp the 1st voyage." This "shipp" is supposed to have been the first built in Connecticut. Wethersfield was the largest producer of staves in the Colony, being authorized to export 30,000 per annum, while Hartford and Windsor were limited to 20,000 each. In relation to this subject, Judge Adams says, "In the northern part of what is now Newington (formerly Wethersfield) the business of making pipe staves was so great as to cause the name of Pipe Stave Swamp to be given to a considerable section there, and Pipers River to the principal stream in that place. The staves were shipped in bundles or shooks to the Barbadoes and West Indies to be returned thence in the shape of pipes or hogsheads, filled with molasses, sugar, or rum." Reports from a place of such activity in his line of business reaching Samuel Boreman's ears in Ipswich, where production of that kind was probably not as great, and where there was at least one other of his calling, his cousin Thomas, would have had much influence in inducing him to go thither.

A third reason for his removal might have been added to those already mentioned, by Samuel Boreman's family circumstances. When his first grant of land at Ipswich was entered, Aug., 1639, he was just 24 years old. Five months later, when he sold it, he had built a house upon it, from which it is naturally to be inferred that he was thus early married, as he certainly was at the later date of his mother's letter. His removal to Connecticut took place in the spring of 1641, and his first child was not born till Feb. 3, 1642-3, nearly two years after reaching there, the mother being the daughter of one of his old Claydon neighbors, who was then living in Hartford. It may be that, contrary to what has formerly been thought, the wife alluded to by his mother was one who died in Ipswich, and his marriage to Mary Betts did not take place till after his coming to Connecticut. Her supposed age, eighteen or nineteen at that time, renders it probable that she would in 1641 still be living with her mother in Hartford, and the date of birth of her first child also tends to confirm this supposition as to the time of their marriage. The removal from Ipswich was evidently the result of a somewhat sudden resolution, for his mother had plainly received no hint of it, and directed to his old home in Massachusetts her letter, which was not written till a year after he left it. It is thus not at all improbable that, being left by the death of a wife unencumbered with family cares, he was the more free to take the long journey to Connecticut, and establish himself in a new home under more favorable circumstances.

The earliest notice of him in Wethersfield, so far as appears, is on page 2 of the town votes. "The eare marke of Sam: Borman of Wethersffeilde is; the near eare under half penyed; the off ear is whole." Judge Adams, the historian of Wethersfield, considers this entry to have been made in 1640, which does not, however, agree with our interpretation of Ipswich records, as stated.* The birth of the oldest child, Isaac, took place Feb. 3, 1642-3, but was plainly not entered

* While it is possible that Samuel Boreman might have come to Wethersfield sometime in 1640, leaving his land in Ipswich unsold till the year after, this is highly improbable. It was already 1640 (Jan. 12) when he became possessed of the second of his three homesteads. This was to be sold, a third bought, and that in its turn disposed of, making thus four real estate transactions after the beginning of that year. If, as would be naturally inferred, he lived, even for a short time, on each of these pieces of property, he must be allowed a year at least for all these changes. A removal in 1640 would, moreover, not be easy to reconcile with the fact that in 1642 his mother addressed him at Ipswich.

on the record before 1648, for the appearance of the writing shows that the births of Isaac, Mary, and Samuel were recorded at one time. His first purchase of land, a house lot of three acres, with a barn and a cellar, is recorded April 9, 1645. It was situated on the east side of Broad Street, a little north of Plain Lane, near the great elm tree now standing there. He owned at various times six other house lots in Wethersfield, upon one of which, bought Nov. 3, 1659, of Nathaniel Dickinson, who that year removed to Hadley, he resided during the last fourteen years of his life. This place, containing three acres, was on the west side of Broad Street, on the south side of Fletcher's Lane, and extending back to Wethersfield Main Street. It was one of the best sites in the town, for it fronted on the wide expanse of its most beautiful street, and was surrounded on three sides by highways. The house on it, at times repaired and enlarged, was the home of five generations of the family. Samuel Boreman bought at various times many pieces of land*—meadow, upland, plain, and swamp, and had also several grants from the town—thirty acres on the southeast side of Rocky Hill,† 52 acres next Farmington bounds, etc. At the time of his death in 1673, he was the owner of about 350 acres, including an Indian grant of 200 acres on the east side of the Connecticut River, in the present town of Marlboro, which was confirmed to his heirs by a vote of the town in 1685. He had already given a portion to his son Isaac, which was not included in the inventory.

Samuel Boreman's name appears often in the records of Wethersfield. He was eight years elected Townsman, chosen twice to take the list of estates, was rate maker, surveyor of highways, and often appointed to lay out highways, town bounds, or lands granted to different individuals. He was one of the committee in 1665 "to treat with som man to keep a writing school," and was many times chosen as one of those to act on church affairs, such as seeing to the repairs of the meeting house, providing a place for the minister, erecting a parsonage, seating the meeting-house, treating with the minister, "informing him of the mind of the church and town," and reporting to them his answer; also for procuring a minister, of which the following is an instance:—Aug. 15, 1664, "At a town meeting Samell Borman was chosen to goe forth with downe to the bay to be helpfull in the p^rcuring of Mr. Terry, and also to be serviesable to him upon the way in his jernye if Mr. Terry pleases to come now." He last appears in Wethersfield Town Records, March 26, 1673, when he is the first named of five townsmen who were to procure a house for the use of Rev. Mr. Bulkley. As the inventory of his estate was taken May 2, 1673, about five weeks afterwards, he must have died in April of that year.

The records of the Particular Court, or Court of Magistrates, show that Mr. Boreman was a Juror as early as Oct. 1, 1646, and that he filled that office for fifteen years between 1646 and 1662. In 1660 and 1662 he was one of the Grand Jury.

Samuel Boreman first represented Wethersfield as Deputy to the General Court, Oct. 1, 1657, and was elected, in all, for eighteen terms of the court, being reported present at thirty-four sessions. Oct. 9, 1662, when Connecticut's famous Charter, which had just been procured in England from Charles II by Governor Winthrop, was "first publicly read in audienc of y^e Freeman, and declared to belong to them and their successors," Samuel Boreman was present as one of the deputies. He was in 1649 appointed by the General Court, Town Sealer of weights and measures, and in 1659, Customs Master at Wethersfield, being the first to hold that office. In 1662 Samuel Borman and Serg't Nott were appointed to notify those in Wethersfield indebted to the country in behalf of Mr. Cullick to prepare payment to enable the country to discharge such sums as should be charged by Governor Winthrop for procuring the charter for the Colony. He was appointed by the General Court on committees to settle church differences, to lay out the new town of Haddam, including its purchase from the Indians, to settle estates, to lay out the bounds of Middletown, and settle its differences with the Indians, to lay out the bounds of the proprietors at Naubuck, etc.

"Mr. Sam¹¹ Boreman's" last appearance as a Deputy on record was, October 12, 1671, the beginning of a term of the court which expired in April, 1672, one year before his death. He died in his 58th year, in April, 1673; his last sickness was evidently short, and he left no will. His property, inventoried at £742 15s. was divided to his wife and ten children, Isaac (who had already had a portion), Mary, Samuel, Jr., Joseph, John, Sarah, Daniel, Jonathan, Nathaniel, and Martha, the oldest being then thirty years old, with a wife and family, and the youngest less than seven years of age.

The widow, Mrs. Mary (Betts) Boreman, survived her husband more than eleven years, and died in August, 1684, aged probably about 61. The inventory of her property amounted to £277 1s. 2d. The eight children then living and named in the distribution were Isaac, Samuel, Mrs. Mary Robbins, Jonathan, Sarah, Daniel, Nathaniel, and Martha.

SECOND GENERATION.

2. Isaac² Boreman (Samuel¹) of Wethersfield, born Feb. 3, 1642-3, married ABIAH KIMBERLY, bapt. in New Haven, Conn., Dec. 19, 1641, daughter of Thomas and Alice Kimberly of New Haven. Her father, Isack Borman Thomas Kimberly, was of Dorchester, 1635, and removed with his wife Alice to New Haven, 1639, where they had seven or eight children, and the wife died in 1659. He married another wife and removed to Stratford, where he died in 1673. Mrs. Boreman's next older brother, Eleazer Kimberly, said to be the first male born in New Haven (bapt. Nov. 17, 1639), was schoolmaster at Wethersfield at intervals from 1661 to 1689, and in 1696 he succeeded Col. John Allyn as Secretary of the Colony of Connecticut. His home was on the east side of the river in what is now Glastonbury. He died there, Feb., 1709, and his monument is still to be seen in the cemetery.

The house, barn, and homelot ($3\frac{1}{2}$ acres, 20 rds.) bought for Isaac Boreman by his father Samuel, March 2, 1665-6, was situated on the west side of the Main St. of Wethersfield, a short distance below the church. He remained there through life, and it was afterwards occupied by his son Thomas and his grandson Thomas. He owned also various outlying pieces of land: five acres in the Great Meadow; twelve acres in the West Swamp; nine acres in the Dry Swamp; ten acres in the West Field; three in the Wet Swamp; four in the Great Plain, etc. He had one of the fifty-two acre lots in Newington distributed in 1685, and a share in the second division of 1695. He was chosen fence-viewer in 1684, surveyor of highways 1689, also sealer of weights and measures, selectman, and constable. He died May 12, 1719, in his 77th year, three days after his oldest son, Isaac Jr., to whose four children, Isaac, Edward, Josiah, and Ephraim, he gave a deed, signed on the day of his death, of several pieces of land with a house and barn on part of it. He had deeded Sept. 26, 1718, his homestead in Wethersfield, with other land, to his son Thomas and his grandson Thomas, reserving the use of one-half during the life of himself and wife, and after his death one room to his daughter Abiah as long as she remained unmarried. Some time previously he had provided for his second son, Samuel, by giving him, Nov. 17, 1697, a house-lot and other land. Having given his land by deed to his children, he made no will. His inventory, taken Sept. 19, 1719, contains only his clothing, household furniture, and other articles of personal property; included among them are "cooper's tools 12s. 2d." showing that he had the same trade as his father. His daughter Abiah was appointed administratrix. The widow, Mrs. Abiah (Kimberly) Boreman, died Jan. 6, 1722-3.

3. Mary² Boreman (Samuel¹), born Feb. 14, 1644-5, married April 24, 1675, JOHN ROBBINS of Wethersfield, born

Apr. 20, 1649, son of "Mr. John Robbins" * and Mary, his wife.

John Robbins

"Mr. John Robbins, aged about 40 years Dyed the 10th Day of

* "Mr." John Robbins and Mary, his wife, were among the first settlers of Wethersfield. He represented the town as Deputy to the July in y^e year of our Lord 1689." (Weth. Rec.) His will, dated July 1, 1689, gives his wife the use of one end of his new house, and names his loving brother-in-law, Samuel Boreman, and loving cousin, Mr. John Chester, Jr.,* as guardians of his children, if his wife should die before they are of age. "Mr. John Robbins" was deputy from Wethersfield May, 1687. The widow, Mary, married 2d, Mr. Denison, at some time before March 7, 1698-9, at which date "Mrs. Mary Robins alias Denison" appeared in court and made oath regarding the estate of her deceased husband, John Robbins. In 1709 she is found spoken of as the Widow Denison. Inquiry has so far failed to show who Mr. Denison was; his is not a Wethersfield name, and it does not appear in any other connection in the town records.

General Court, in 1643, 1656, 1657, 1659. His wife died in September, 1659. He died June 27, 1660. Their children were:

- i. MARY, b. Jan. 20, 1641-2; m. about 1662, Hon. Eleazer Kimberly; d. before 1669.
- ii. HANNAH, b. Apr. 10, 1643; m. Dea. William Warner.
- iii. COMFORT, b. Oct. 12, 1646; m. Theophilus Sherman.
- iv. JOHN, b. Apr. 20, 1649; m. Mary Boreman, as above.
- v. SAMUEL, b. ———; d. Nov. 1659.
- vi. JOSHUA (Capt.), b. ———; m. Elizabeth ———; d. 1738-9.

The record of the distribution of Mr. John Robbins' estate says, "It is granted to Mr. Kimberly that is to match with Mary Robbins that he shall keep the three young children till they come of age, and educate them in writing and reading, and instruct them in Christian principles."

*The mother of John Chester, Jr. (b. 1656), was Sarah (b. 1631), daughter of Gov. Thomas Welles. In the absence of records explaining his relationship with John² Robbins, the will of Blaynch Hunt (d. abt. 1644), gives reason to suppose that it was through the first Mrs. Robbins' connection with the Welleses. Blaynch leaves bequests to "Cossen Mary Robins," and gives the disposal of her estate to "my Uncle Welles" (mentioning also "Cossen Mary Baylding.") The fact that there were in the third and fourth generation of the Robbinses at least five Welles intermarriages, shows the intimate connection of the two families. If the tradition in regard to Thomas Welles is true — that he was private secretary to Lord Saye and Sele before coming to this country — his residence in England was then in the neighborhood of the Boremans.

"Widow Mary Denison Deceased on May 19 Anno Dom 1721." (Weth. Rec.)

She was then 72 years old. The amount of her inventory* was £376 5s. 4d. Administration on her estate was granted to Joshua Robbins, her son; the other heirs were Samuel and Richard Robbins. Joshua, as oldest son, being granted a double portion, his right to it was disputed by Samuel. (Hfd. Prob. Rec.)

The home of John and Mary Robbins was on the east side of Broad street, near its lower end: Mrs. Robbins' aunt, Mrs. Martha (Betts) Graves, lived next south, and her uncle, John Betts, next north of her.

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND MARY ROBBINS.

- 18 JOHN,³ b. May 5, 1676; d. Sept. 29, 1684.
- 19 JOSHUA, b. March 1, 1677-8; "Joshua Robbins, 2d, m. Feb. 10, 1704, Abigail, dau. of Lieut. Wm. Warner." (Joshua Robbins, 1st, called Capt. Joshua, was his uncle; there was also a Joshua Jr., son of Joshua 1st).
- 20 SAMUEL, b. June 7, 1680; m. Feb. 5, 1713, Lucy Wolcott, b. Oct. 16, 1688, dau. of Samuel and Judith (Appleton) Wolcott, and gr. dau. of the "Worshipfull Samuel Appleton" of Ipswich; d. about 1752.
- 21 JOHN, b. Oct. 2, 1684; d. Oct. 6, 1712.
- 22 RICHARD, b. June 8, 1687; m. Jan. 11, 1711-12, Martha, dau. of Sergt. John Curtiss; d. Feb. 7, 1738.

*The inventory contains a good supply of clothing, including seven hoods, mostly of silk, one with silver clasps; damask, crape, stuff and flowered gowns and petticoats; "allamode silk" and other silk scarfs; silk, lace, and other handkerchiefs; several fans; eighteen lace caps; gloves of various kinds; pieces of damask, crape, serge, lace, ribbon, etc. not made up; amber beads; Silver money £9; Bills of Credit £25 8s. 9d.; a Bible; two pair of spectacles; three sermon and other books; Furniture, bedding, linen, earthen ware, (including three "Holland Earthen platters"); pewter and brass (five brass kettles); cupboards and chests, etc. She evidently kept up an establishment of her own, with all the furniture, tools, provisions, and live stock needed, and about forty-six acres of land.

4. Samuel² Boreman (Samuel¹) of Wethersfield, born Oct. 28, 1648, married Feb. 8, 1682-3, SARAH STEELE, bapt. at Farmington, Dec. 29, 1656, daughter of Lieut. Samuel and Mary (Boosey) Steele,* of Farmington and Wethersfield. Samuel Boreman, Jr., is called on the Wethersfield records, "Clerke" Samuel Boreman, and Sergt. Samuel Boreman; also Samuel Boreman, cooper, and after his father's death, Samuel Boreman, Senior, to distinguish him from Samuel, son of his brother Isaac. His home in Wethersfield is shown by the following from the probate files: "Estate of Widow Mary

Sam^{ll} Boreman

* MR. JOHN¹ STEELE, one of the original proprietors of Hartford, came from the neighborhood of Braintree, Essex; m. at Fairstead, near Braintree (as lately found by Mr. F. F. Starr), RACHEL TALCOTT, sister of Mr. John Talcott, of Hartford; settled first at Newtown, now Cambridge; was one of the commissioners appointed by the General Court of Massachusetts, March 3, 1635-6, "to govern the people at Connecticut for the space of a year next coming." He was deputy very often from 1637 to 1657, and town clerk of Hartford till his removal to Farmington in 1645. He d. 1664-5. His son, LIEUT. SAMUEL² STEELE, b. 1626-7, m. MARY BOOSEY, dau. of Lieut. James Boosey of Wethersfield. He was deputy from Farmington from May, 1669, to May, 1677, afterwards removing to Wethersfield, which town he represented in the General Court, Oct., 1681. He d. in Wethersfield, Aug. 15, 1685, leaving two sons, of whom James received the house and lands in Wethersfield, and Ebenezer those in Farmington. Lieut. Steele's inventory amounted to £1182 12s. 10d. His dau. SARAH³ m. Samuel Boreman, Jr., as above.

Samuell Steel

LIEUT. JAMES BOOSEY, grandfather of Mrs. Boreman, was a leading settler of Wethersfield; deputy every year from April 11, 1639, to his death in 1649, and often entrusted by the court with important business, as in 1644, when "the Governor, Deputy, Capten Mason, Mr. Steele, Mr. Gaylard, and James Boosey" were appointed to treat with Mr. George Fenwick for the purchase of Saybrook, etc. He left property amounting to £983 8s. His name became extinct after the second generation, but his descendants are found among those of his three daughters, who married respectively, Samuel Steele, John Pratt, and Nathaniel Stanley, names well known in early Connecticut history. Lieut. Boosey's widow, Alice, married James Wakeley.

Boreman, Nov. 25, 1684. It was agreed by the several children that Samuel Boreman should have the housing and home lott which belonged to the estate, he paying each of those who have an interest in the same as above, respectively their sums out of said housing and home lott in country pay in four years from the date hereof." The place alluded to was the south half of his father's home lot of three acres on the west side of Broad street, running back to the main street, on the south side of Fletcher's Lane, with the buildings on it. The widow, who had just died, had evidently lived in that part of the homestead, while Samuel, who was married two years before, had hitherto occupied the north half, which he bought of his brother Jonathan, (to whom it was set off,) Dec. 1, 1682, two months before his marriage. Lieut. Steele, father of Mrs. Boreman, had removed from Farmington to Wethersfield only two or three years before she was married, and lived also on Broad street, a short distance north of her new home. It was, perhaps, for the sake of being near his wife's relatives, that Samuel Jr. settled in Wethersfield instead of Rocky Hill, as he would seem to have at first intended, for he already owned considerable land in that quarter of the town, with a house on part of it. Jonathan took this land in exchange for his share of the homestead, and thus probably came to be the one to settle in Rocky Hill.

Samuel Boreman, Jr., owned in 1672, twelve acres in the South Field, and at various times purchased land in the Great Plain, in the West Field and elsewhere; he had, besides, several pieces in the division of the estates of his father and two brothers. The Indian grant of 200 acres, three miles east of the Great River, which fell to him from his father, he sold in 1686 to John Robbins, his brother-in-law. The following grant from the town has to do probably in part with his special business as cooper :

Oct. 25, 1677, at a town meeting, "liberty was granted Eman'll Buck, John Rilly, Sam'll Borman, and Joseph Rilly to build a saw-mill with sufficient ponding, and also 20 acres of land to each of them forever, and to be about Pipe Stave Swamp,* allwise provided the said parties make no sale of bord or timber to any other town without the consent of Wethersfield townsmen; and to sell bords at home at five shillings p^r hundred, and slet work answerable by the rate of proportion, and at the mill at foure shillings p^r hundred, bords and slit work answerable; and at the end of 12 years the Saw Mill to seass, if the Town see cause, sawing of any timber that groeth on the Comon; and the Mill to bee up and fit to worke at or before the last of September next insueing the date hereof."

Oct. 12, 1719, one year before his death, he bought of Daniel Warner, his son-in-law, for £70, two acres of land near the lower end of Broad Street, "with a mansion house," bounded east on Broad Street, etc. This was the land mentioned in his will, on which was built another Boardman house, destined to be the home of five generations of his family.

Samuel Borman was chosen one of the two surveyors of highways in 1679; "Sergt. Samll Borman," one of the two collectors for 1683; one of a committee to lay out a highway to Fearful Swamp in 1687; one of the listers in 1693; one of the surveyors in 1694. "Clark Samll Borman," had a share in the second division of land on the west side of the river, and a 52-acre lot in Newington. He died Dec. 23, 1720, "aged 72 y. 2 mo. wanting 2 days." His widow died Jan. 23, 1732-3.

WILL OF SAMUEL² BOREMAN, MADE DEC. 20, 1720.

WILL OF MRS. SARAH (STEELE) BOREMAN.

In the name of God Amen, I Sarah Boardman of Wethersfield, in the county of Hartford, in the Colony of Connecticut, in New England, Widow and Rellict of Mr. Samuel Boardman, late of Wethersfield, deceased, being very aged, yet in health and of sound understanding and memory, for which I acknowledge the goodness of God, and not knowing how soon it may please God to call me to depart this life. I do now make and ordain this to be my last Will and Testament, hereby revoking all and every Will by me heretofore made. And first of all I give and bequeath my soul into the hands of God that gave it, hoping through y^e meritts of y^e Lord Jesus Christ, my faithfull Redeemer, to reseive the forgiveness of all my sins and an everlasting inheritance among those that are sanctified by faith in him.

And as to the portion of household goods and stock that it hath pleased God to bless me with, I give and dispose of it in maner following. And first my will is that all my debts both lawful and honest shall be paid by my executor hereafter named.

1st Whereas it pleased my husband of happy memory to endow me with £6 a year to be paid to me annually by my two sons (David and Joseph) in equal proportions, I do give unto my said sons what of the said £6 a year remains unpaid to me by them. And whereas my said husband was pleased (by his last will) to give to me £70 to be paid to me out of his moveable estate to be att my dispose for ever, and some part of the said 70£ hath never yet been distributed to me, I do hereby give that part not distributed as aforesaid, unto my Two Sons David and Joseph Boardman in equall proportion forever.

Item I give to my daughter Abigail Boardman, wife to my son David, one pair of cobirons.

Item I give to my daughter Mary Boardman, wife to my son Joseph Boardman, one heifer now two years old: the remaining part of said 70£ aforesaid, with what I have gotten by my industry, I give to William Warner, Sarah Warner, and Hannah Warner, my grand children in equal proportion, and I do hereby constitute and appoint my sons David and Joseph Boardman, and my daughter Mary Warner executors to this my last Will and Testament. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal in Wethersfield this 25 day of March, Anno Dom 1727, 8. Signed, sealed, published and declared in presence of

5. Joseph² Boreman (Samuel¹), born Mch. 12, 1650; died unmarried, 1676.

6. John² Boreman (Samuel¹), born June 12, 1653; died unmarried, 1676. Nothing certain is known of the fate of these two brothers, but from the fact that they both died in 1676, their inventories being taken on the same day, Feb. 27, 1676-7, it is supposed that they perished in King Philip's War. There were heavy drafts for soldiers at that time from all the towns, and of Samuel Boreman's large family of sons, none would be more likely to enter the service than these young men, then 22 and 25 years old. Having each, as appears from their inventories, a horse, and a gun, and sword, they may have been Troopers, a class of soldiers which was found very effective, and was much employed in the Indian wars. In the list of debts due to John appears £12. 6s. 9d. "due from the country," due, it can hardly be doubted, for military service.

Another reason for the truth of this conjecture is found in the following: The Hon. David⁵ Sherman Boardman, grandson of the Rev. Daniel,³ in his account* of the New Milford Boardmans (p. 388 of the Memoir of Mrs. Mary Anna Boardman), notes the tradition in that line that two brothers of the Wethersfield family "died unmarried in the army." This tradition is the more reliable from the fact that it seems stated independently of any suggestion furnished by the knowledge that Joseph and John both died in the time of King Philip's War. Hon. David Sherman Boardman had evidently never examined the Wethersfield records, for he calls the brothers, John and James, and shows no acquaintance with any Wethersfield ancestor farther back than Daniel Boardman, Rev. Daniel's father. The record and tra-

* We quote the account given in this memoir, said to have been taken from a manuscript left by Hon. David Sherman Boardman, to show how the history of the family was varied by tradition, proving thus the unreliability of such tradition when not supported by records. The first settlement of the family in Ipswich, and there being two of the name there (though they were not brothers, and did not probably come over together), are two other truths preserved in this tradition. Judge Boardman says :

"The ancestors of this family emigrated from England some time in the 17th century, and settled at Ipswich, in the county of Essex, Massachusetts. The writer of this remembers being informed by his father that there were two brothers who came over from England together, named Daniel and James. The New Milford branch of the family descended from Daniel. He resided and died at Ipswich, leaving four sons: Daniel, John, James, and Levi. John and James died unmarried, and, as it is said, in the army. Daniel and Levi removed from Ipswich to Connecticut; the former to Wethersfield, the latter to Glastonbury. Daniel married into the family of Wright in Wethersfield, and became the father of a numerous family there, most of whom lived to adult years and left families. The founder of the New Milford family was the Rev. Daniel Boardman, the second son of the Daniel who settled in Wethersfield."

dition thus corroborate each other. The Rev. Daniel Boardman was born only about ten years after the deaths of these young uncles of his, whose sad fate must have made a deep impression on their family ; in the retirement of the new settlement of New Milford, itself obliged to take special measures of defense against the Indians, he must certainly many times have told his children their story, which they, impressed in their turn, handed down to their descendants, the central fact remaining, though the names became in part forgotten.

Joseph and John may have been named after their father's cousins, Joseph and John Boreman of Claydon, who, from their being particularly mentioned in his sister's letter, would seem to have been regarded with special affection by Samuel Boreman. The two young men, as may be seen from their inventories, were already well started in life, and had each a considerable amount of property. The distribution of their estate to the eight brothers and sisters is dated Sept. 4, 1677, and is found in the Hartford Probate Files.

7. Sarah² Boreman (*Samuel*¹), born March 4, 1655-6, married THOMAS FITCH of Wethersfield. He had previously married Abigail, daughter of William Goodrich, the settler, by whom he had Thomas, born July 2, 1681, and Sibbil, born Nov. 2, 1684, who both died young, and the mother five days after the birth of the younger child. The father of Thomas was Mr. Samuel Fitch, many years a teacher in Hartford, and representing the town as Deputy to the General Court in 1654 and 1655. He married in 1650-51, Mrs. Mary Whiting, widow of the "Worshipful Mr. William Whiting," prominent among the early settlers of Hartford, who had died while in London on business in 1647. There were two children of this marriage; Samuel (removed to Milford, married Sarah Bryant, daughter of his stepfather, Mr. Alex. Bryant, and died 1690), and Thomas, born 1652, who settled in Wethersfield, and became the husband of Sarah Boreman. The father, Mr. Samuel Fitch, died in 1659, and his widow married for her third husband Mr. Alexander Bryant of Milford, as his second wife. She died at the house of her daughter, wife of Rev. Nathaniel Collins* of Middletown, and was buried there, July 8, 1673.

Mr. Thomas Fitch died intestate, Oct. 18, 1704. His inventory amounted to £111 3s. Some of its items were: Wearing apparrell 3*li*.-8s.; his Arms and a drum 50s.; Weavers and shoemakers tools 7s.; Great Bible 8s.; Psalm Book and old little Bible 2s.; 2 little books; a dwelling house with one acre of land, and 15 acres of Woodland. The dwelling-house was situated on the east side of the main street in Wethersfield, between the church and Fletcher's Lane. "Mr. Thomas Fitch" was chosen constable, 1679; rate-maker, 1685.

Oct. 4, 1714, "Sarah Fitch of Wethersfield, administratrix on the estate of Mr. Thomas Fitch, late of Wethersfield, deceased, exhibited the account of administration, whereby it appears that she hath paid for debts and subsistence of the family, and of a daughter that was some years sick, £90-6s.-

*Rev. Nathaniel Collins calls Thomas Fitch of Middletown his brother-in-law, June 23, 1673. (See Hinman's Gen. of the Puritans, p. 668.) Thomas must, therefore, have lived in that town in his earlier years.

3*d.*, and has received debts due £28-11*s.*-6*d.*" The sick daughter was "Martha Fitch, singlewoman," whose inventory, consisting mostly of wearing apparel, with mention of a "gilded Bible," was taken Sept. 3, 1713, by Samuel Wright and Daniel Bordman. Sept. 7, 1713, "Samuel Fitch, minor son of Mr. Thomas Fitch, late of Wethersfield," chose Col. William Whiting as guardian. Col. Whiting was son of his father's half brother, Rev. John Whiting, first pastor of the Second Church, Hartford.

Jan. 16, 1718, Samuel Fitch of Wethersfield sells to Joseph Hurlbut for £40, one acre, with an old house standing upon it, "excepting the thirds that belong to my mother in said lands," etc., bounded west on a highway, north on land of Deliverance Blin, south on heirs of Capt. Samuel Steel, deceased, and east on Benezer Hale. Joseph Hurlbut sold the place, then having also a shop on it, to Israel Bordman, January, 1722, who, the same year again sold it, "subject to Widow Sarah Fitch's thirds, she now living in Guilford."

CHILDREN OF THOMAS AND SARAH FITCH.

- 29 ABIGAIL,³ m. Abraham Kimberly. He was probably a nephew of Mrs. Abiah (Kimberly) Boreman, wife of Abigail's uncle Isaac. Fitch Kimberly, who died in Watertown, May 31, 1813, aged 77, was doubtless a descendant of this family. Fitch and Abraham Kimberly were soldiers in the French War, 1756, in the regiment of Col. Andrew Ward of Guilford, where they lived.
- 30 SIBBELL, m. April 27, 1704, Joseph Hurlbut. Their children recorded in Wethersfield are :
 - i. SIBILL, b. Nov. 4, 1705.
 - ii. CHARLES, b. Nov. 4, 1707.
 - iii. JOSEPH, b. June 10, 1710.
 - iv. JOSIAH, b. March 4, 1713.
 - v. SARAH, b. May 18, 1716.
 - vi. PHEBE, b. July 3, 1718.
 - vii. ABIGAIL, b. April 29, 1721 ; d. June 28, 1740.
 - viii. MARTHA, b. Oct. 27, 1723 ; m. March 10, 1748, Phineas Cole ; m. 2d, June 13, 1754, Jona. Bordman.
 - ix. FITCH, b. Feb. 27, 1726.
 - x. ELISHA, b. July 3, 1729.
- 31 MARTHA, d. unmarried, 1713.
- 32 SAMUEL, a minor in 1713, born before 1697.

8. Daniel² Boreman (Samuel¹), born Aug. 4, 1658, and no doubt named after his father's cousin of Claydon and Ipswich, married

Daniel Bordman

June 8, 1683, HANNAH WRIGHT, daughter of Samuel Wright of Wethersfield, and Mary, his wife, daughter of Deacon Richard Butler of Hartford. His first home in Wethersfield after his marriage is thus described: "Half an acre of land, being the front of Ensign Wright's home lott, with dwelling house standing thereon, and $\frac{1}{2}$ the barn there standing, which land abuts on the street east, land now in tenure of Samuel Wright Sen. west and north, and on lands of Isaac Boreman south." It was a corner of his father-in-law's home lot, "purchased in part, and in part had by gift of his father-in-law," on the west side of the main street in Wethersfield, a short distance below the church, and adjoining on the south the home lot of his oldest brother, Isaac. He lived here about two years, and sold it, April 15, 1685, to Samuel Wright, Jr., taking in exchange for it and two other pieces of land, 25 acres in the West Field. As Daniel Boreman's homestead, inherited by his children, was in that part of the town formerly called the West Field, it was undoubtedly on a part of this 25 acres that he built, about 1685, the house he afterwards lived in; the homestead descended to his son Timothy and his grandson Daniel, the latter of whom sold it, July 9, 1768, with $2\frac{1}{4}$ acres of land, to James Barret, and removed from Wethersfield to Dalton, then part of Pittsfield, Mass. This lot fronted on the "Path to the Mill," or, as it is now called, Mud Lane, the land running back up Wolcott Hill. This place, called the Selah Barrett place (Selah being son of James), is now (1894) the property of Johnson, Robbins & Co. The old house* now standing on it probably occupies

* This present house is of two stories in front, with a door in the center, the roof sloping behind to the top of the first story. It is of the kind commonly built at a period previous to the middle of the last century, and probably dates back to the time of Timothy Bordman's ownership, 1725 to 1753. It is quite likely that he erected it to replace the original dwelling built by his father about 1685.

nearly the site of the original one in which the first Daniel Boreman lived from 1685 to 1725. Daniel Boreman was chosen one of the fence viewers in 1684, one of the sheep masters in 1694, collector in 1696; later he was one of the school committee, one to procure a school master, selectman, and surveyor; also, in 1704, one of those appointed to fortify certain houses as forts.

He died Feb. 20, 1724-5, and his youngest son, Charles, then in his eighteenth year, died on the same day. Two months later, another son, Israel, who had just removed from Stamford to Wethersfield, died. That was the "year of y^e greate sicknesse," when very many deaths occurred in Hartford and the adjoining towns, and these three in the family of Daniel Boreman may very probably have been due to the same prevailing epidemic. His will, dated Feb. 13, 1724-25, mentions his wife Hannah, sons Richard, Daniel, Israel, Timothy, Joshua, Benjamin, Charles, and daughters Mabel Nichols, Hannah Abbey, Martha Churchill. The smallness of the bequests to some of his children is due to the fact that they had already received their portion by deed of gift, as will appear. The widow, Mrs. Hannah (Wright) Boreman, married for a second husband Mr. James Treat of Wethersfield, and died Feb. 25, 1746, aged 82. Her tombstone is found in the Burying Ground.* Mr. Treat's first wife was Prudence, daughter of Major John Chester, who had died May 25, 1727; it was their daughter, Abigail Treat, who had married in 1717 David Boardman, nephew of Daniel. Mr. James Treat died Feb. 18, 1742. The tradition that Daniel had the trade of a glazier, as did his son Israel after him, is confirmed by the tools in his inventory.

9. Lieut. Jonathan² Boreman (*Samuel*¹), born in Wethersfield, Feb. 4, 1660, married Oct. 22, 1685, MERCY HUBBERT,

Jonathan Boreman

 Hubbert* (Hubbard) of Hatfield, born in Hadley,
 Mass., Feb. 23,

1664. In the division of his father's estate, Jonathan had the north half of the house and home lot on Broad street, which he afterwards, Dec. 1, 1682, exchanged with his brother Samuel for land at Rocky Hill. He had also in the division of his brother Joseph's estate, 1677, 13½ acres more at Rocky Hill, to which he added by purchase, Dec. 12, 1690, a piece 19½ rods broad, bought of his brother Samuel on the west side of Rocky Hill, and 16½ acres bought of Ephraim Turner, March 30, 1694. He made his home in that part of the town, living probably in the very old and interesting house recently taken down, which stood north of the present North Schoolhouse on the west side of the highway from Hartford to Middletown, where his descendants continued to reside till recent years. Sergt. Jonathan Borman was commissioned by the General Court "Ensign of the Trainband in Wethersfield at the south end of the town," May, 1698, and Lieutenant of the same, May, 1703. Dr. Griswold, a well-known antiquarian of Rocky Hill, says that when in 1704 there were Indian disturbances up the valley of the Connecticut River, the town of Wethersfield ordered the fortification of some dwellings to which the inhabitants could flee for safety; one of these was the residence of Jonathan Deming in Rocky Hill; it was called Fort Deming. Lieut. Jonathan Boreman was one of three put in charge of it. He was chosen fence-viewer in 1697, on a committee for making a bridge, 1698, surveyor, 1700 and 1701, for seating the galleries in the meeting house, 1707, and on school committee the same year. He was selectman in 1702, and probably at other times, and seems to have been a man much relied upon in the management of town affairs.

*JOHN² HUBBARD was the son of George¹ Hubbard, a prominent early settler of Wethersfield, representing the town in the General Court as early as 1637, and several times afterwards. He removed to Milford in 1643, and to Guilford in 1650, where he was again a deputy after the union of the two colonies. John,² father of Mrs. Mercy Boreman, was made freeman, 1655, removed from Wethersfield to Hadley and afterwards to Hatfield, where he died before March, 1706.

Lieut. Jonathan died Sept. 21, 1712,* in his 52d year.

WILL OF LIEUT. JONATHAN BOREMAN. (NUNCUPATIVE.)

The minutes of the last will and testament of Jonathan Boreman of Wethersfield. He gives 1st the half of all his estate, real and personal to his wife during her natural life, and 2nd all his improved lands and housing to his son Jonathan, and the other half of his personal estate, Jonathan paying to each of his youngest daughters as much as his daughter Mary Wright hath had, they arriving at 18 years of age, then to receive their portions, and Jonathan half of the personal estate to be improved for his learning and bringing up and the benefitt of his Lands for the same use.

3rd The Outlands, and all rights to any outlands to his three daughters to be equally divided among them; i. e, a lott of 10½ acres granted

* The year 1712 was one of much sickness and death in Connecticut. There is record of six deaths in the Boreman family in that year: Jonathan² and Nathaniel,² both living in Rocky Hill, aged respectively 52 and 49; John,³ son of John and Mary² (Boreman) Robbins, aged 28; John,³ son of Daniel² Boreman, aged 21; Abraham Williams, husband of Isaac's daughter Eunice, and Isaac, aged 20, son of Martha (Boreman) Crane. The following is from a note by Dr. Hoadly in the printed Colonial Records of Connecticut: "Cotton Mather preached a sermon at the Boston lecture, Jan. 24, 1711-12, 'occasioned by the raging of a mortal sickness in the Colony of Conn., and the many deaths of our brethren there,' in which he says, 'the mortality has remarkably fallen upon two sorts of persons; first, many useful men, men of some station and figure; secondly, many young and strong and hearty men, men likely to have lived many a day, have been carried off, and very suddenly too, with very little warning.'" to Andrew Attwood, 29½ acres granted to himself by Wethersfield in last division, right in land on back side of Rocky Hill, rights at Glassenbury, and undivided lands in Wetherfield.

10. Nathaniel² Boreman (*Samuel*¹), born in Wethersfield April 12, 1663, married April 30, 1707, ELIZABETH STRONG, born Feb. 20, 1670, daughter of Lieut. Return

Nathaniel Boreman

Strong of Windsor and his wife Sarah, who was daughter of Rev. John Warham of Windsor. Nathaniel Boreman† was one of the haywards for several years; also surveyor, and in 1695 fence-viewer for Rocky Hill. It was in this part of the town that he settled, living probably on the Boardman farm, which is still in possession of his descendants. His only son, Sergt. Nathaniel, in his will of 1776, speaks of the "Gardens

*Cyrus, Negro, son of George, Negro, alias George minor, servant, that is slave to Lieut. Jonathan Boreman, was born on the 23d of January, Anno Domini 1710-11. (Weth. Rec.)

†The name of Nathaniel Bowman occurs often about this time in Wethersfield Records, and is easily confounded with that of Nathaniel Boreman. The former was considerably the older of the two, and is supposed to have come from Watertown, Mass. He married Rebecca, daughter of Rev. Henry Smith of Wethersfield. A Nathaniel Bowman who died in Wethersfield in 1707, leaving his small estate to Samuel Buck, is conjectured to have been their son.

where the old house stood," probably the house of his father who died 64 years before. This farm is situated about one mile and a half west of the railroad station in Rocky Hill. Upon it is a very old red gambrel-roofed house, now standing in the fields, the road which formerly led past it having been changed. This was one of two houses on the same farm, belonging respectively to Nathaniel's two grandsons, Nathaniel and Return.

Nathaniel was married rather late in life, he being then 44 and his wife 37 years of age. They had but one child, Nathaniel, and the father died Nov. 29, 1712, while his son was yet an infant. He died probably from the same epidemic which is supposed to have caused the death of his brother Jonathan two months before. His widow, Mrs. Elizabeth (Strong) Boreman,* afterwards married as 2d wife William Warner, Jr., of Wethersfield, son of Dea. William and Hannah (Robbins) Warner, the latter a sister of John Robbins, husband of Mary Boreman. The record of this marriage is found on the margin of a leaf in an old book of sermons in possession of her descendants in the Boardman line; "Elizabeth bordman and william warner was married the sixt day of geniuary 1714."† By Mr. Warner she had a son William, born Dec. 4, 1717. "Mr. William Warner" was made "Captain of the trainband in the South Society or parish of Wethersfield" by the General Court, Oct. 11, 1722; he died before Dec. 17, 1726.

Nov. 1, 1726, "Nathaniel Bordman, a minor about 16 years of age, made choice of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Warner, to be his guardian." (Hartford Probate Records.)

* An error in the Strong Genealogy and in the Burnham Genealogy, since copied into the History of Ancient Windsor, makes Mrs. Boreman marry as 2d husband, Nov. 9, 1711, Thomas Burnham of Hartford, who is there said to have died May 12, 1726. As is seen from the above records, she was, Dec. 17, 1726, relict of Capt. William Warner, and her first husband did not die until Nov. 29, 1712. Elizabeth is also there erroneously called daughter of John Strong of Windsor.

† Should be probably 1715-16, as William Warner's first wife, Mary Crane, did not die till March 11, 1714-15.

Dec. 17, 1726, "Elizabeth Warner, relict of Capt. Will^m Warner deceased," buys land for her son Nathaniel Bordman. (Wethersfield Land Records.)

Daniel Boreman

II. Martha² Boreman (*Samuel*¹), born in Wethersfield, Aug. 12, 1666, married* as second wife about 1689, BENJAMIN CRANE JR. of Wethersfield, born March 1, 1656, son of Benjamin and Mary Crane. The first wife of Benjamin, Jr., was Mary Chapman, probably daughter, born Oct. 27, 1665, of Edward Chapman of Windsor (part now Simsbury), who died of wounds received in fighting the Indians, Dec. 19,

* Until very recently nothing was known of Martha after Oct. 28, 1687, when she was twenty-one years old and still unmarried. Her history has come to light only at the last moment, thanks to the discovery made by E. B. Crane, Esq. of Worcester. Wishing to learn the family name of a Martha who married Benjamin Crane, Jr., he found by consulting the Hartford Probate Records, that their son, Isaac Crane, in 1710, chose Lieut. Jonathan Boreman guardian. This led him to suspect a relationship to the Boremans, and on looking up their records, he saw that Lieut. Jonathan had a sister Martha born 1666. It further appeared from the Probate Records that the Widow Martha Crane married 2d, Samuel Terry of Enfield, and from the record of Mrs. Terry's death, that she too was born in 1666. This correspondence of name and age confirming the indication of relationship furnished by Lieut. Jona. Boreman's guardianship, gives us good reason for identifying Mrs. Martha Crane Terry as Martha Boreman. A mistake of Mr. Goodwin in his "Genealogical Notes," making Samuel Terry's second wife, Martha "Credan," instead of Crane, has much confused succeeding genealogists. The entry of her marriage in the Enfield town records reads, "Samuel Terry and Martha Crean were Joyned in Merag jenawary y^e 6, 1697-8," the loop in the old way of writing the letter e giving it much the appearance of a d.

1675. She was married, May 12, 1686, and died, April 5, 1687, aged 22.

By the death of Mr. Crane, which took place June 20, 1693, Martha was early left a widow with one infant son. She married second, at Wethersfield, Jan. 6, 1697-8, CAPT. SAMUEL TERRY of Enfield, Conn., son of Samuel and Ann (Lobdell) Terry of Springfield, where he was born, July 18, 1661. Mr. Terry had married 1st, in Springfield, May 17, 1682, Hannah, daughter of Miles Morgan, who died Jan. 17, 1696-7, after having borne him six children, four of whom, two sons and two daughters, survived her. Mr. Terry had removed from Springfield to Enfield about 1683. He was a farmer, held such offices as constable and selectman, was for several years ensign of the militia, and finally captain in 1716. The account of him in the Terry Genealogy says he was a man of exemplary piety, prominent in the church, and that he was styled gentleman in the public record of his appointment as administrator of his father's estate. Martha had by Mr. Terry five sons, besides a daughter who died in infancy, and became the ancestress of a large number of descendants of that name, among whom are included some of its most distinguished representatives. She was the great grandmother of General Nathaniel Terry, who came from Enfield to settle in Hartford, where he married in 1798 Catherine, daughter of Col. Jeremiah Wadsworth. He was a graduate of Yale, member of Congress, and of the Connecticut Constitutional Convention, Mayor of Hartford, etc., and numbered among his grandchildren the late well-known writer, Mrs. Rose Terry Cook, and Maj. Gen. Alfred H. Terry of the U. S. Army. Dea. Seth Terry, a lawyer and prominent citizen of Hartford, as well as many others of the name well-known in that city, were also Martha's descendants. She died in Enfield, May 29, 1743, in her 77th year, having survived about twelve years Mr. Terry, who died Jan. 2, 1730-31. Their gravestones stand together in Enfield Cemetery.

- 52 ISAAC, b. Aug. 19, 1692. He was between five and six years old when his mother married Mr. Terry, and must have grown up in Enfield. He owned the property in Wethersfield inherited from his father, and about the time when he was eighteen years old went there to live and take charge of it. It was then that he chose, May 1, 1710, Lieut. Jonathan Boreman of Wethersfield his guardian. When just past his twentieth year he died in Wethersfield, Sept. 15, 1712, leaving his estate by a nuncupative will to his Terry half brothers in Enfield. His inventory amounted to £225, 13s, 10d, and included a house and barn and lot of five and a half acres, besides other land, fifty acres of it in the West Division. That he had already begun to carry on his farm appears from his having a horse, swine, farming tools, Indian corn in the ear, and hay, flax, and wheat in the barn, and from his having done labor on the 50-acre lot, valued at £6, 10s, 00d. He died six days before his Uncle Jonathan, in whose home he was then doubtless living, both of them probably of the mortal sickness which raged that year in the Connecticut Colony. (See p. 205.)

12. Isaac³ Bordman, Jr. (Isaac,³ Samuel¹), of Wethersfield, born July 21, 1666, married Dec. 7, 1699, REBECCA BENTON, daughter of Widow Benton. The father of Rebecca was Edward Benton, originally, as is supposed, from Guilford, who died in Wethersfield, Feb. 20, 1698, and his widow Mary died there, Aug. 8, 1702. Estate £453 10s. (Hinman). Isaac, Jr., died May 9, 1719, three days before his father, at the age of 53. He had been for many years an invalid. Among the articles in his inventory are, a "Weavers Loom," £3 3s. 6d.; pair of spectacles, 1s.; Bible, 6s. 8d.; several small books, 7s.; 2 "Stocks of Beas," etc. His land was valued at £134 5s. His four sons were further provided for by their grandfather, Isaac, Sen., who gave them by a deed signed on the day of his death, May 12, 1719, a homestead and several pieces of land, with the life use of a part to their mother, Rebecca.

13. Samuel³ Bordman (Isaac,² Samuel¹) of Wethersfield and Middletown, Conn., was born in Wethersfield, July 7, 1668, and married Nov. 5, 1696, MEHITABEL CADWELL, daughter of Thomas Cadwell of Hartford, born Jan. 12, 1679-80. Her mother was Elizabeth, daughter of Dea. Edward Stebbins, a man of importance among the first settlers of Hartford. Nov. 17, 1697, Samuel had a deed from his father of a house-lot of 3½ acres, with 2½ acres of swamp, the former described as lying on the road to Capt. Chester's mill, with the highway on the west ; this was his homestead while he lived in Wethersfield ; it was in the quarter of the town known as South Hill, on the east side of the road and near the mill. The births of Samuel's twelve children are all recorded in Wethersfield, where he resided till about 1719. Oct. 5, 1719, Samuel Bordman of Wethersfield sold to Elisha Williams,* for £135, home-lot of 3½ acres, with house and barn, bounded west by a highway, etc. ; also, 19 acres in Newington. About one month before, Sept. 9, 1719, he had bought 287 acres in Middletown, on the east side of the Great River, now Portland, and he probably removed thither not long after. Nov. 8, 1725, he made a deed of gift to his son Moses of 50 acres, and to his son Stephen of 35 acres, both on the east side of the river. His death, Sept. 6, 1732, is recorded in Middletown. April, 1733, administration on the estate of Samuel Bordman of Middletown was granted to Stephen Bordman, who, with Lieut. Thomas Cadwell, gave bonds. The names of his children appear in a deed of March 11, 1733-4, in Middletown records, where Stephen and Moses Bordman sell to "their brothers and sisters, Richard Goodrich and his wife Mehitable, Samuel Stocking and Abia, his wife, Janna Wilcox and wife Rachel, John House and wife Deborah, Anne, Sarah, Elizabeth, Abigail and Thankful Bordman," with mention of their brother Jonathan, "all heirs to Samuel Bordman deceased of Middletown," east side of the river.

Aug. 5, 1740, Samuel Stocking was appointed guardian to Jonathan, minor son of Samuel Bordman, deceased, of Middletown.

14. Thomas³ Bordman (Isaac,² *Samuel*¹) of Wethersfield, born there Nov. 14, 1671, married MARY CHITTENDEN. The record of his marriage is, "Thomas Borman and Mary, daughter of Nath¹¹ Chillinton of Guilford, married May 1699, towards the latter end of the month." Nathaniel Chittenden, the father of Mrs. Bordman, was son of Lieut. William Chittenden, one of the first settlers in Guilford, and the principal military man of the plantation, of which he was a magistrate, and often Deputy to the General Court. He married a sister of the wife of Rev. Henry Whitfield of Guilford. (Chittenden Genealogy.) Thomas Bordman lived with his father, Isaac, on his homestead on the west side of Wethersfield Main street, below the church, which the latter, in 1718, the year preceding his death, deeded with other land to Thomas and his son Thomas after him, reserving the use of one-half for himself and wife. After the death of Mrs. Mary (Chittenden) Bordman, Thomas married, Oct. 15, 1718, SARAH, widow of Abraham Kilborn, who died Oct. 17, 1719, and he married the third time, Dec. 24, 1729, HANNAH, widow of William Butler.

Jan. 14, 1736-7, Thomas Bordman, Sr., deeded to Thomas Bordman, Jr., his property, with the stipulation that Thomas, Jr., should pay to his sister Prudence £10, and to his sister Mary, £30. Having thus disposed of his estate by deed of gift, no probate record in regard to it occurs, and the date of his death is unknown.

 - vi. MARTHA, b. Aug. 21, 1742.

15. Sarah³ Bordman (Isaac,² Samuel¹), born at Wethersfield, 1673,* married LIEUT. SAMUEL FRARY, born April 15, 1674, son of Ensign Eliezer Frary of Hatfield, Mass., whose wife was daughter of Sergeant Isaac Graves of Hatfield. Samuel Frary settled in Middletown, Conn. He and his wife and son, Joseph, were buried in the old yard at Middletown Upper Houses, now Cromwell. Mrs. Sarah Frary's tombstone, a table monument, reads: "Here lieth the Body of Sarah wife of Lev^t Sam^l Frary who died March y^e 1, 1733 (1734) in y^e 61st year of her age." Left. Samuel Frary † died Aug. 1, 1762, aged 88. The will of Samuel Frary, made April 11, 1761, proved Sept. 13, 1762, gives to his son Joseph all his land, husbandry tools and farrier's books, negro woman Peggy, and her two daughters, Rhoda and Tammy; to daughter Sarah Hale, the remainder.

* The births of Sarah and her next younger sister, Abiah, are omitted in the Wethersfield Town Records of Isaac Boreman's children, but their names appear in the distribution of their father's estate, where Sarah Frary is called the eldest daughter, and Abiah, the second. As Sarah must thus have been next younger than her brother, Thomas, born 1671, we have her date of birth, 1673, corresponding to her age on her tombstone. For later descendants of Sarah, see No. 981.

† After the death of Sarah, Lieut. Frary married, 2d, Mary —. She was a member of the Cromwell Church before 1736, and died Oct. 4, 1741. He married, 3d, Esther —, who was received to the church in Cromwell from the North Church in New Haven, June, 1742, and died Feb. 4, 1753. He married, 4th, Nov. 1, 1663, Abigail Sumner, who probably died before 1761, as she is not mentioned in his will.

17. Eunice³ Bordman (Isaac,² Samuel¹), born June 29, 1682, married Dec. 24, 1702, ABRAHAM WILLIAMS of Wethersfield. He seems to have been one of the victims of the sickness prevailing in 1711-12, which carried off so many of the Boardman family. His inventory, taken Jan. 17, 1711-12, amounted to £130-14s.-06. His youngest child was born after his death.

The will of Daniel Warner, made March 24, 1750, witnessed by Joseph Boardman, Ebenezer Belding, and Elisha Williams, Jr., gives his wife Mary use of house and garden and one third of the land, with one negro man, "called Pop." To son William, the house he now lives in, both my barns and cow house and yards, with other lands, and two negroes, named Charles and Jabez. To his daughter Sarah, several pieces of land, and negroes named Cato and Betty. The will of Mrs. Mary Warner, dated May 29, 1765, gives to her daughter, Sarah Webster, negro man servant named Popp,* two yoke of oxen, a horse, and all her wearing apparel; to her grandson, William Warner, she gives two-thirds of the remainder of her estate, and to her grandson, Christopher Warner, one-third.

Elisha was the first one from Southington to enter Yale College, which he did in 1734, and graduated in 1738. He studied theology, and was settled in Canaan, Conn., as its first minister, in 1740, remaining there till 1752. He afterwards returned to Southington, where he died Jan. 29, 1788.

26. David³ Bordman (Samuel² Samuel¹), of Wethersfield, born June 1, 1692; married Dec. 6, 1717, ABIGAIL TREAT, born Dec. 1, 1692, daughter of Mr. James Treat, Jr., and Prudence his wife, daughter of Maj. John Chester. It was the father of Abigail Treat who, after the death of her mother in 1717, married the widow of Daniel Bordman, her husband's uncle. David Bordman lived in the old home of his father and grandfather, corner of Broad Street and Fletcher's Lane. As he had no children, he left the place to his nephew, Samuel Bordman, afterwards the merchant, one of the two sons of his only brother, Joseph. He died about 1760, his will being probated July 1st of that year. By an agreement of the widow Abigail with her brother-in-law, Joseph Bordman, she, for a certain sum to be paid her by him annually during her life, gave up her right of dower in the estate, reserving the use of one room, in case she wished to live in the house. As this agreement was dated Apr. 15, 1760, when Samuel, the heir to the property, was only fifteen, it is probable that Levi, Samuel's older brother, who was married the next year, made the house his home for some years, it being in the meantime "new modelled," as shown in the will of their father, Cornet Joseph.

WILL OF DAVID BORDMAN OF WETHERSFIELD
SEPT. 19, 1752.

To wife all my moveable estate, except what I shall give to my cousin Samuel Wells,* and use and improvement of my dwelling house and barn and home lot during her natural life and of 2 acres in the plain, and all my meadowland.

To my cousin Samuel Boardman, my dwelling house and home lot containing 2½ acres, butted east, west, and north by highways, and south on land of Ebenezer Kilborn, except improvement of same to my wife.

To my sister Mary Warner, 2 acres in the Wet Swamp.

To brother Joseph Boardman, 15 acres in West field, 5 acres Rocky Hill, also my half of a lot granted by the town to my honored father, 1693, bounded south by line between Middletown and Wethersfield. To brother Joseph all the remainder.

To cousin Samuel Welles, a mare and colt, 2 Steers, one cow and calf, all my sheep, and all my husbandry tools. Brother Joseph Boardman and Oliver Treat, executors.

27. Cornet Joseph³ Bordman (Samuel,² Samuel¹), born in Wethersfield, Apr. 6, 1695, married MARY BELDING, daughter of Joseph Belding, Feb. 17, 1726. Cornet Joseph lived in the house begun for him in 1719 by his father, Samuel, Jr., at the southwest end of Broad Street, which remained standing until 1857. He was a man of substance,* and prominent in the affairs of Wethersfield. He was one of the selectmen in 1755, when the French prisoners quartered in the town were under his charge, with Nicholas Ayrault and Samuel Curtis. He was commissioned Quartermaster of the Troop of Horse, 6th Reg't, May 11, 1749, and Cornet† in the same regiment in 1751, by the General Court. He was Deputy from Wethersfield to the General Court, Oct., 1754, January, 1755, March, 1755, October, 1759, and May, 1760.

* Cousin here in the sense of nephew. Samuel Wells was a nephew of Mrs. Bordman. He was the eldest son of her sister, Jerusha Treat, who married Wait Welles of Wethersfield, her cousin, son of Capt. Thomas and Jerusha (Treat) Welles. Samuel was born Mch. 14, 1707, and died, Nov. 12, 1757, some two or three years before his uncle, David Bordman, who had probably partially adopted him. Some years before, he had given him land by deed.

His wife died Apr. 30, 1769, aged 66. Cornet Joseph died Jan. 19, 1771. His will was made Mch. 13, 1769, just before the death of his wife, whom he survived about five years.

WILL OF CORNET JOSEPH BOARDMAN, MCH. 13, 1769.

To faithfull wife Mary, my Negro maid Venus, and one third of my moveable estate to be used and disposed of as she pleases ; also one third of my lands during her life.

To son Levi, southeastward part of my land laid out in the division of 1752, south east of the country road ; 2 acres of my West field lot east of highway ; 1 acre in Great Plain, and 1 acre at lower end of Great Plain ; this to be given to Levi, and not to be reckoned in division of land between my two sons. Also to Levi the House lot on which I now dwell, and the buildings thereon, reserving the use of my wife's part.

I give to my son Samuel Boardman all the right I have in or to the home lot on which my Hon^d Father, Mr. Samuel Boardman lived and died (which my brother David Boardman gave to my said son Samuel) together with the buildings on said lot, all which buildings were erected and finished by me except the dwelling house which my brother left, which is new covered and new modelled, which alterations, additions and new buildings have all been done by me for my son Samuel since my brothers decease at great expense ; and the rest of my lands except what is before given, I give to my sons Levi and Samuel in such proportions as that in computing and reconing each sons homestead with his other lands, each sons share shall be equal in value to the other. Also I give my son Samuel one horse, one ox, and one cow.

I give to my daughters in addition to what they have already received, in order to make their portions as near equal as may be, the following sums :

hitabel, daughter of John Smith of the same town. Richard received by a deed of his father Daniel, dated March 23, 1710-11, two pieces of land in Cow Plain, containing respectively 14 acres and 6 acres, the latter with a dwelling-house and barn on it. Cow Plain was the early name of Newington where Richard Bordman lived and died; his gravestone, with that of his wife, son, and grandson, are in the churchyard there. He was a prominent man in the place. Dec. 24, 1712, he was one of those who petitioned that Newington should be made a parish distinct from Wethersfield. He was appointed on town committees for various purposes, such as repairing the meeting house, collecting the minister's rates, building the minister a house, selecting and laying out a burying ground in Newington; his name is also found as one of the school committee, prudential committee, etc. He was possessed of considerable property, which he disposed of by deed of gift to his children. Sept. 28, 1753, he deeds to his son Gamaliel several pieces of land, including that of 21 acres on which he (Richard) now dwells, also a piece on which Gamaliel now dwells, excepting out of this, one and a half acres given to his servant Peter. Also to Gamaliel his cane, sword, belt, cart, plough, etc. Gamaliel, who was his only son, died two years before his father.

* In the Wethersfield Church Records is the baptism of Tamar, slave of Cornet Joseph Boardman, Sept. 20, 1761.

Lieut. Richard Bordman appears to have been a slave owner very early in the last century. In Timlow's Southington it is said, "The first man of whom I find any trace as being held in bondage in Southington was Peter Tusco, a Spanish Indian." He was the slave of Rev. William Burnham, who freed him July 13, 1738, and who had "bought him of Lieut. Richard Bordman many years ago." Peter died March 11, 1767, leaving quite a property by will. A stone marks his grave. He was probably the "servant Peter" of Richard Bordman, mentioned above. He had also a slave named London or Lunon, whom he sold Sept. 30, 1725, for £60, to Thomas Seymour. This negro was afterwards sold to Col. Chester, and is said to have been elected negro governor of Connecticut.

By a deed of gift, Oct. 28, 1754, to his son-in-law John Parmeley of Saybrook, and another of March, 1755, to Martin Kellogg and wife, he provided for his two daughters, Sarah Parmeley and Mary Kellogg. Richard Bordman was commissioned by the General Court, Ensign of the first trainband in Newington Oct. 13, 1726, and Lieutenant of the same, May 13, 1736.

It is in the record of the family of Richard Bordman that the letter d is first added to the original name Borman in the town records of births, marriages, and deaths. It does not follow that this family was responsible for the change, which had probably already begun to be made, and only happened to appear in the first instance in their case.

Lieut. Richard Bordman died in Newington Aug. 7, 1756 (Ch. Rec.); 1755, in his 71st year (Gravestone). His widow died Dec. 28, 1768 (Ch. Rec.); 1769, in her 86th year (Gravestone).

34. Rev. Daniel³ Bordman (Daniel,² *Samuel*¹) of New Milford, Conn., was born in Wethersfield July 12, 1687. He was a graduate of Yale College in the class of 1709. The college was then in its infancy, having been founded but eight years before. Though located then nominally at Saybrook, the students were kept at Killingworth, the home of Rector Pierson till his death in 1707; then a trustee, residing in Milford, discharged the duties of a rector as well as he could without removing, and the senior class was with him in Milford, while the other students resided in Saybrook under tutors.* Daniel Bordman would seem therefore to have pursued his studies mostly in Killingworth and Saybrook. In his class, which numbered nine, were two other young men from Wethersfield; Nathaniel Burnham, born 1690, son of William Burnham of Wethersfield, and brother of Rev. William Burnham, the first minister of Kensington. He married Mehitabel, daughter of Major John Chester, and became an influential citizen of the town of Wethersfield, representing it many times in the General Court, and often appointed to take charge of important business, both for the town and colony. The other classmate from Wethersfield was Josiah Deming, born 1688, son of Ebenezer and Sarah Deming, and grandson of John and Honor (Treat) Deming. He lived in Newington, studied theology and preached, but was never ordained.

Immediately after his graduation Daniel Bordman took charge of the Hopkins Grammar School in Hadley, Mass., where he continued eight months. He then studied theology, and when the dozen families of New Milford desired early in 1712 to have regular preaching, he was sent to them. He was not, however, ordained until Nov. 21, 1716, the people up to that time apparently not having felt themselves able to give him a suitable settlement. He was provided with a house "forty feet in length, and twenty one in breadth, and two stories high, and fourteen feet between joints;" also with a well and a barn, the whole being largely built by volunteer work. He also received in all three rights of land, amounting to 1,100 acres. As he sold almost none, this, with a number of purchases and his share in the several divisions, made him at the time of his death one of the largest land-holders in the town.*

Hinman says of him that "he gave tone and character to the new settlement by his devotion and active service." He was eminently successful in gaining the confidence of the Indians, many of whom lived in New Milford and its vicinity. Dr. Benjamin Trumbull, in his History of Connecticut, says of New Milford that it "was the principal seat of the Indians in the county of Litchfield. The seat of the chief sachem was near the Great Falls (in the Housatonic River at New Milford). His name was Wehononaug, a man of uncommon powers of mind, sober and regular in his life, who took much pains to suppress the vices of the Indians. When the English were first acquainted with him, he was supposed to command about 2,000 warriors; the whole number of Indians might have been 1,000." The palace of Wehononaug at Great Falls, where he commonly resided, was, according to tradition, "constructed of barks, with the smooth side inward, on which were pictures of all known species of beasts, birds, fishes, and insects, drawn by an artist sent to him by a friendly prince from a great distance." In addition to his earnest labors among his people, Mr. Bordman devoted himself to the work of converting these Indians, and it was no doubt his influence over their sachem which produced in part the good results mentioned by Dr. Trumbull. He visited Wehononaug, or Werauhamaug as he is also called, in his bark palace during his last illness, and at the time of his death, and left a manuscript account of his conversations with the sachem.

Rev. Daniel Bordman was twice married; first, Feb. 26, 1716-17, to HANNAH WHEELER of Milford, who bore him one daughter and died June 20, 1719. The record by his own hand in his Family Bible reads:

"My daughter Hannah was born, Jan. 12th day, about sunsetting Anno Christi 1717-8 (this was on the Lord's day) and was baptized the Sabbath following, at New Milford.

My well-beloved, tender companion, and yoke-fellow departed this life, June 20, New Milford, Anno Christi 1719, on a Sabbath morning, at the break of day."

He married second, Nov. 1, 1720, MRS. JERUSHA SEELYE, born June, 1693, of Stratfield, now Bridgeport, the widow of Mr. Ebenezer Seelye, and one of the nine daughters of Dea. David Sherman of Stratford. His record in his family Bible goes on as follows:

“ My daughter Penelope was born, Dec. 26, 1721, upon Tuesday, at the sunrising, at New Milford ; baptized the Lord's day following.

“ My daughter Tamar was born March 26th, 1723, on a Monday at or about midnight, baptized the next Sabbath following at New Milford.

“ My daughter Mercy was born, Feb. 9th day, at or about 8 o'clock at night, in the year 1725 ; baptized the next Sabbath following at New Milford.

“ My son Sherman was born, Aug. 2 day, at the break of the day Anno 1728, upon Friday ; baptized 11th of August.

“ My daughter Jerusha was born May 4th, about 10 of the clock at night 1731 ; baptized the Sabbath following, the 9th day.

“ Ebenezer Seelye was born, Nov. 5, 1717, at Stratfield.”

The last named was Mrs. Bordman's only child by her first husband. He was brought up and educated by Mr. Bordman, and afterward settled in the adjoining town of Kent.

Mr. Bordman * died of consumption, Aug. 25, 1744, aged 57. “ Mrs. Bordman, or Madam Bordman, as she was respectfully styled, was, on the death of her husband, left with a family of three unmarried daughters, and a son about sixteen years of age ; but being a woman of uncommon firmness and mental energy, she, by the aid of her youthful son, so managed as to maintain herself and family in a manner respectable for those days, from the productions of the farm left by her husband, now her only support. She continued to occupy the house built for him when first settled (situated on the brow of the hill at the north end of the town street, with the homestead about it) for fourteen or fifteen years, and until her son, who had been previously married, had built a house on the principal farm about two and a half miles from the center of the village, to which, her daughters having all been previously married, she removed with him, and there resided in his family during the remainder of her life.” † She died Aug. 30, 1777, in the 85th year of her age.

* Rev. Daniel through life spelt his name Bordman.

The births of two of their children, Hannah and Jeremiah, are in Wethersfield Records. They removed afterwards to New Milford, where Mabel's next older brother was then the settled minister; further account of them is taken from the history of that town: "John Griswold came from Wethersfield to New Milford, 1716, a relative of Jacob and David Griswold, who had preceded him to that town. He built a mill at what is now Lanesville, according to agreement, probably in 1717, but had not received payment when, by some fatal illness, he suddenly passed away, Dec. 24, 1719, leaving a family of young children, one born after his decease." His widow afterwards married JOSIAH NICHOLS of Danbury, and had, perhaps, other children.

38. Martha³ Bordman (Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), born in Wethersfield, Dec. 19, 1695, married June 26, 1717, SAMUEL CHURCHILL of Newington, son of Joseph and Mary (Touzey) Churchill. They lived at the south end of the present town of Newington, on land inherited from their emigrant ancestor, Josias Churchill, which is still in possession of the family. Samuel Churchill was a leading man in the parish of Newington, his name frequently occurring in its annals. His tombstone and that of his wife are to be seen in its burying ground. "Ensign" Samuel Churchill died July 21, 1767, and Martha, his widow, died Dec. 14, 1780. (Weth. Rec.)

39. Israel³ Bordman (Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Wethersfield and Stamford, Conn., born in Wethersfield, Oct. 6, 1697, married ELIZABETH, probably daughter of Jacob Gibbs of Windsor, born Aug. 26, 1697. The next older sister of Elizabeth Gibbs, named Abigail, had married in 1714 Leonard Dix of Wethersfield, who lived on Wolcott Hill, his farm nearly adjoining that of Daniel Bordman. The father, Jacob Gibbs, being then already for some time dead, Elizabeth may have been living before her marriage with her sister in Wethersfield.

Israel Bordman

Israel at first settled in Newington, on land deeded to him by his father, Dec. 26, 1721, twenty acres, with house, barn, and orchard, lying next west of the home lot of his oldest brother, Richard, and bounded south by the highway. He had also from his father six acres of pasture in the same section of the town. Early in 1722, he sold all his property in Newington, and removed to Stamford, Conn., where he was admitted an inhabitant Dec. 18, 1722. He had already in the beginning of that year bought twenty-three acres in Stamford, with dwelling house and barn, to which property he added, by purchasing in August an adjoining tract of swamp, and later, in Feb., 1722-3, he bought of Rip van Dam and Robert Lurting of New York four other pieces of land, containing in all 105½ acres. He remained in Stamford but three years. April 6, 1725, he sold his homestead and other land* for £523 to Samuel Bryant of Newtown, Fairfield County, Conn. He must have returned immediately after this to Wethersfield, for his signature is found among those of his brothers in an agreement made April 15, 1725, at a meeting of the heirs of Daniel Bordman, who had died the previous February 20th. (See p. 203.) Nine days after, April 24, 1725, he died at Wethersfield, perhaps from the same disease which is supposed to have caused the deaths, both on the same day two months before, of his father and youngest brother, Charles.

Israel left three young children, Olive, not yet seven, and Elisha, less than five years old, who had both been born in Newington, and Israel, an infant of five weeks, born in Stamford. The widow Elizabeth was appointed administratrix of the estate, an inventory of which was taken by Jacob Griswold and Josiah Belding. The personal property amounted to £78; the real estate was represented by bonds amounting to £483, due from Samuel Bryant, to whom the Stamford property had been sold; total, £561. Israel Bordman, like his father, Daniel, had the trade of a glazier; among the items in his inventory are, "a glas dimond," £2; Lead and Glass 5s.

Oct. 21, 1726, a year and a half after her husband's death, the widow Elizabeth bought a farm of 34 acres in Wethersfield, with house, barn, and orchard, lying near the lower end of Wolcott Hill Road, and on both sides of it. It adjoined on the north the farm of Leonard Dix, whose wife was Elizabeth's sister, and on the south, the rear of Daniel Bordman's home lot, then in possession of Elizabeth's brother-in-law, Timothy Bordman, and these two brothers-in-law were the witnesses of the deed she received of the place. Very shortly after, Elizabeth made over this property by deed of gift to her three children, Olive, Elisha, and Israel, reserving the use of one-third of it during her life. About three years later she bought for her children fourteen acres more in the same quarter. This was on May 30, 1729. Aug. 4, 1730, we find Elizabeth the wife of Thomas Waterbury of Stamford, when she, with other heirs of Jacob Gibbs of Windsor, sells land in Windsor to her brother, Jacob Gibbs. "Thomas Waterbury's wife died, Sept. 18, 1730," and his daughter (probably by Elizabeth) "died July 23, 1732." (Stamford Records.) Thomas Waterbury had married previously Elizabeth Holly, by whom he had two children; after the death of his second wife, Elizabeth Gibbs, he married Hannah (Finch), widow of Joseph Hoyt, by whom he had five more children.

* There is a reservation in this sale which illustrates the mining mania which prevailed in New England in the early part of the 18th century; to one of the deeds is added: "excepting and retaining two parts in three of all the mines and minerals in above, that is or may hereafter appear." The land was situated "near Elbow Plaine, east of Noroton River."

The family of Israel Boardman next appears, Jan. 15, 1730-31, in the Hartford Probate Records, when "Jacob Gibbs of Windsor was appointed Guardian to two of the children of Israel Boardman, late of Wethersfield, viz.: Olive Boardman, aged 12 years, and Elisha Boardman, aged 9 years." Jacob Gibbs and his wife Mary are afterwards found in Wethersfield, where the births of four of their children are recorded, 1737-1747. What disposition was made of the five-year-old Israel has not so far been found; it is supposed that he was brought up by relatives in Stamford. After he became of age, he appears in the following deed in Wethersfield records :

Aug. 26, 1746, I, Israel Boardman of Stamford, in the County of Fairfield, Conn., for £500 in bills of credit, old tenor, received of my brother Elisha Boardman of Wethersfield, have released to said Elisha all right I have to land in Wethersfield, containing etc. (here follows a description of the property on Wolcott Hill, deeded to her children in 1726, by their mother Elizabeth.)

41. Timothy³ Bordman (Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Wethersfield, born July 20, 1700, married Dec. 21, 1721, HANNAH CRANE, born Nov. 24, 1702, daughter of Israel Crane and Lydia his wife, daughter of James Wright.* He received by the will of his father, Daniel, the homestead with thirteen acres of land, besides land at Newington and elsewhere. In this homestead he continued to live, and brought up there a large family of children, whose descendants have filled numerous places of usefulness, and have been to an uncommon degree an honor to the name of their family. The names and later residences of his children appear in a deed to Daniel Boardman, their brother, Jan. 17, 1769, from Charles and Seth Boardman of Wethersfield, Timothy Boardman and Jonathan Brigden, and Elizabeth his wife, all of Middletown, Jonathan Dickinson and Hannah his wife of Wethersfield, Simeon Judd and Damaris his wife of Farmington, and John Boardman of Spencertown, in county of Berkshire, Mass., of all right to their hon'd father Timothy Boardman's home lot and dwelling house.

Timothy and his next younger brother Joshua, with others in Wethersfield, in 1732 purchased rights to large tracts of land in Maine, originally bought of the Indians by John Brown, from whose descendants they obtained their title. Active measures to establish these claims were taken at various times by those interested, but, for the reason that they were founded on Indian grants, they were not allowed.

* James Wright, son of Thomas,¹ was the principal owner of Wright's Island in the Connecticut River, which by the changing of the river's course has since ceased to be an island.

The tradition, however, that wealth might at some time be expected to come from this source, was handed down from generation to generation of the various lines of descendants, and the knowledge of such a family tradition has in some instances been of use in helping to prove a common descent. Mr. Timothy Bordman died in Wethersfield, Dec. 27, 1753; his widow died Feb. 20, 1780, aged 80, at the home of her son Daniel in Pittsfield, now Dalton, Mass. She was a woman of ardent piety. Her grandchildren retained a vivid recollection of the hymns and verses of the Bible they used to hear her repeat after retiring.

42. Joshua³ Bordman (Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Sheffield, Mass., born in Wethersfield Nov. 18, 1702; married Feb. 14, 1724-5, SARAH ceived his house and half his land at Litchfield, and half his land at New Milford, his younger brother Benjamin receiving the other half. The land at Litchfield is thus described in the inventory of Daniel Bordman's estate: "A house lot, 15 acres, and small house on it £41, 10s.; 1st division of 20 acres and labor on it £22; 4-acre lot £6; 1st 60-acre lot with labor done on it £35; 2d 60-acre lot £28; land yet undivided £100." There were also on the place some farming tools, an axe and a gun. Joshua, who was in his 23d year when his father died, had probably already gone to Litchfield, and had begun to clear up and cultivate the land. In 1723, he was one of the committee to build the West Fort in Litchfield. Joshua and Benjamin were both of Litchfield, Feb. 2, 1726-7, when they with the other heirs sold their right in the homestead at Wethersfield to their brother Timothy, and on the same date they divided their land in Litchfield in an agreement recorded there, which was witnessed by Timothy, showing that he was then temporarily in the town. Joshua remained in Litchfield, where he has a number of sales and purchases of land recorded, until about 1731, in which year, July 17th, he calls himself "of Ousatonnock," in the county of Hampshire, and again, Oct. 11, 1732, "of Housatonnock, south township" (incorporated as Sheffield in 1733). At length, July 17, 1733, he sells all his remaining land in Litchfield, including his home lot, 13½ acres, described as on the east side of a narrow lane, and then calls himself, "late of Ousatonnock, now of Wethersfield." As Joshua became a settler in Sheffield, where he had two whole rights granted him in the second division, his being of Wethersfield in 1733 is explained by the fact that on account of difficulties as to boundaries between Massachusetts and New York, there was trouble with the Dutch, and the proprietors delayed making settlements; it was not till 1733 and 1734 that their titles, some of them purchased ten or more years before, were recorded and confirmed. (See History of Great Barrington, which was "Housattonnock" Upper Township.) Joshua's two rights formed an extensive holding, portions of which he sold from time to time by deeds which are recorded at Springfield.

"Joshua Bordman and Sarah Stockwell* were marred to each other upon the 14th day of february in the year of our Lord, 1724-5, by Mr. Timothy Collons pasture of the church at Litchfield."

"Elizabeth Bordman Daughter to Joshua Bordman and Sarah his Wife was born the tenth day of November in the year of our Lord 1725." (Litchfield Rec.)

This is all that is known of Joshua's family, except as it appears in his will, for the records of Sheffield, both church and town, are almost entirely wanting for that period. Sarah Stockwell is supposed to have been the mother of either four or five of the eight children of whom mention is found, while another wife, Amy, was mother of the remainder. Joshua Bordman's will is in the Probate Files at Pittsfield, Mass. It was made Dec. 22, 1760, and proved July 30, 1761. The witnesses were Phinehas Smith, Jared Goodrich, Samuel Higley. It provides first for his wife Amy, to whom he gives the improvement of half his home lot of 100 acres with the house and barn, all which is afterwards to belong to his son Elijah, not then of age. He speaks of having already

*QUINTON STOCKWELL of Hatfield, m. ABIGAIL. He was taken by the Indians at Deerfield, Sept. 19, 1677, and with several others carried to Canada, getting back the next year. His "suffering story" is told at length by Increase Mather in "Remarkable Providences." He removed in 1678 to Branford, and afterwards settled in 1692 in Suffield, Conn., where he died Jan. 22, 1715. His widow Abigail died there, May 5, 1730. Mr. Hezekiah Sheldon, in his Documentary History of Suffield, says of him, that he was an esteemed and respected inhabitant of the town, serving in many local offices. He had a son John, b. Oct. 8, 1676, at Deerfield, who m. Aug. 12, 1702, Elizabeth Weller at Suffield, where the births of eight of their children are recorded. Elizabeth died in 1716, and he m. 2d, Mindwell Old. by deed of gift given a portion to his son Daniel, but adds to it certain other lands. His son Joshua is to have the other half of the home lot, and meadow land on both sides of the river, eight acres on the west side of the main road, etc. He gives portions to his daughters, Elizabeth Whitney, Olive Fox, and Rosanna, Mary, and Hannah Bordman. Daniel is to have his negro man, and the will closes by saying: "as to my other lands on the mountain, or my low neck Right or my lands att the Esterd, my will is that if ever any of them be recovered, that they should be equally divided among all my children." The "lands att the Esterd" refers to his claim to the lands in Maine which he had purchased with his brother Timothy, some mention of which has been made in connection with the latter; "my other lands on the mountain," etc., relates probably to the difficulties as to titles of the early proprietors before mentioned, some of which continued to be a matter of controversy for many years, and even to the present day.

Joshua's inventory was taken Sept. 17, 1761, by Aaron Root, Jared Goodrich, and William Coit. Some of the items are as follows:

Household goods, clothing, etc., including a Great Bible and other books, £76, 15s., 10d.; a Negro man named Toney; Sundry notes, one of Thomas Whitney (his son-in-law), for £9, 15s.; neats' leather, 22s., 10d.; One sign for an Inn holder, 15s.; cows, oxen, swine, 18 sheep, 5 Guns, 2 Pistols, 3 Powder horns, 100 acres of homestead and meadow adjoining; House and Barn; 24 acres east of River; 40 acres swamp; 12 acres on west side of town street; 90 acres of land and undivided land. The value of the land, and the total value of his estate are not given in the inventory.

Oct. 1, 1761, Jonathan Holcomb and Daniel Bordman, both of Sheffield, give bonds as guardians of Mary and Hannah Bordman, under fourteen, children and heirs of Joshua Bordman, late of Sheffield, deceased.

The following deeds relate to Joshua's heirs: Dec. 5, 1772, Ama Boardman, widow, Daniel Boardman, Yeoman, Jonathan Holcomb, Yeoman, Michael Holcomb, Yeoman, Joshua Boardman, Yeoman, Josiah Fox, Yeoman, and wife

Olive, Elisha Smith, Yeoman, and wife Mary, and Benjamin Cowles, Yeoman, and wife Hannah, sell to Ephraim Case of Sheffield 39 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres in that town.

July 20, 1774, Daniel Bordman, Yeoman, Jonathon Holcomb, Yeoman, Joshua Bordman, Yeoman, Olive Fox, widow, Elisha Smith, Yeoman, and Mary his wife, all of Sheffield, sell to Benjamin Cowles, Jr., of Sheffield, Yeoman, all the real estate which descended from Joshua Bordman, late deceased, to Elijah Bordman, late deceased, and which the said Elijah was at any time possessed of during his life; also the land which would have descended to said Elijah as one of the heirs of said Joshua, deceased, after the death of Ama Bordman, the said Joshua's widow and relict, etc. Sept. 23, 1783, "the above-named Olive Fox, now Olive Taylor," acknowledged this deed; in a deed of Nov. 18, 1777, she was Olive Hugg, wife of William Hugg of Canaan.

The name of the widow Amy is discovered on evidence found in the preceding deeds. She was Amy, born 1703, daughter of Capt. Richard Case*

of Concord, Mass. She married first, Dec. 4, 1729, Jonathan Holcomb, Jr., of Simsbury, born Nov. 25, 1701, by whom she had children, Jonathan, born Jan. 20, 1731, Michael, July 11, 1733, Pliny, Aug. 19, 1735. Jonathan died June 30, 1737, and Amy afterwards married Joshua Bordman, and was the mother of several of his younger children, including Elijah, who is left certain property in his father's will as "partener with his mother." Elijah dying without issue in 1771, Jonathan and Michael Holcomb appear with the heirs of Joshua Bordman in the above deeds, as entitled to a portion of their

RICHARD CASE—made captain of the South Company in Simsbury, May, 1716; Deputy from Simsbury, May, 1722; in active service in the Indian troubles in Connecticut, heading a scouting party sent to Litchfield, June 4, 1724, where they continued to rendezvous till October. half-brother Elijah's share of his father's estate. The following from Hartford Probate Records bears on the same subject:

Jonathan Holcomb of Symsbury, a minor about 14, son of Jonathan Holcomb of Symsbury, deceased, chose Mr. Joshua Boardman of Sheffield, in Hampshire Co., Guardian, Nov. 7, 1746. This was probably after the marriage of Joshua to the widow Amy, and helps to fix its date approximately.

The widow Amy survived her husband more than thirty years, dying about 1792, when she must have been 89 years old. Administration on her estate was granted May 1, 1792, to Benjamin Cowles, Jr., Elisha Smith (her son-in-law), and Azariah Root. Her sickness seems to have been long, for there are three doctor's bills included in her administration account, the first of which begins June 25, 1790, and contains a long list of drugs amounting to £8 14s. "Amey Bordman's" signature in the Probate Records at Pittsfield is in a remarkably beautiful and delicate hand, which would do honor to any lady of the present day.

* A personal search of records at Litchfield, Springfield, Pittsfield, and Great Barrington, as well as at Sheffield, has furnished the only material for the account of Joshua here given. It is in regard to Joshua that Mr. Hinman's account makes two of its most important mistakes. It is there said that he settled in Springfield, and that he was father of Rev. Benjamin Boardman.

Since compiling these records in regard to Joshua and his family, I have had the good fortune to discover living descendants of his son Joshua at Napoli, N. Y., knowledge of whom came just in time for insertion in the Genealogy. These had no information as to the origin of their family.

43. Benjamin³ Bordman (Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Sharon, Conn., was born in Wethersfield, March 10, 1705-6. By the will of his father, he had half of his lands in Litchfield and New Milford, the other half being given to his brother Joshua. Benjamin was not quite 19 years old when his father died, but he probably went early with Joshua to Litchfield to assist in clearing the land. As soon as he became of age, the two brothers made an agreement as to dividing the land, which is dated Feb. 2, 1726-7, and recorded in Litchfield. Joshua, who was then already married, took the home lot and buildings, and Benjamin later bought for himself, Dec. 9, 1728, another home lot of 16 acres, described as being on the north side of the Meeting-House Street. As he already owned 20 acres north of this house lot, he had thus a piece of 36 acres in the center of the town, a corner lot, as it was bounded by a highway on the west as well as on the south. He had also one of the 60-acre divisions, one of the first 100-acre divisions, and a right in the lands yet undivided. He remained in Litchfield, continuing at intervals to buy and sell various pieces of land, till 1736, in which year, March 30, he bought of John King of Suffield a right of 460 acres in Sheffield, where his brother Joshua had already settled. Benjamin lived but about two years in Sheffield, the birth of his oldest child, Olive, July 19, 1736, being recorded there, while that of his next child, Amos, July 16, 1739, is on record as having taken place at Sharon, to which place he must have removed shortly before, as 1739 is the date of its first settlement. Sedgwick, in his History of Sharon, says that "he settled where Benjamin Hollister, Esq., now lives," a place situated about one and a quarter miles north of the village. This he sold to James Warren in 1744. He had bought, Dec. 31, 1742, of William Goodrich of Sharon, 40 acres, or one-quarter of a whole right, lying on the west border of Mudge Pond, an unfortunate name for a beautiful lake north of the village, about one mile long, and half a mile wide. It was here that Benjamin again built and, with his only son Thaddeus, had his home. There was something of a settlement in that region, where the Goodrich family of various names, William, Samuel, Elnathan, David, Jared, Isaac, were Benjamin's nearest neighbors. He owned for a time, in partnership with Philip Livingstone, Esq., of New York city, the Lord of Livingstone Manor, and others, a right of land in Sharon, and his name frequently occurs in the records as buying and selling land. Apr. 24, 1764, he made a deed of gift of land to his son Thaddeus, followed in 1771 and 1773 by two others, all of land in the region of Mudge Pond. March 30, 1786, when Benjamin had passed his 80th year, he and Thaddeus sold to Frederic Lord of Hartford, for £380, all their property in Sharon, consisting of a farm of 40 acres near Mudge Pond where they lived, on which were two dwelling-houses, a log-house and a barn, and another piece, of 100 acres, also bounded east by Mudge Pond. A piece of two acres, with house and orchard, in the same vicinity, was also a part of their property. The History of Sharon says that they afterwards moved West, which meant at that time only into New York State, where Thaddeus is found to have been residing, March, 1791, in Harpersfield, Otsego County. The father, Benjamin, probably did not, at his advanced age, long survive his removal.

The wife of Benjamin, whose family name is not given in Sharon records, was DEBORAH GOODRICH,* as appears from a note in the family Bible of her great grandson, David

* Deborah was born, probably in Wethersfield, June 8, 1707, and was the oldest child of William Goodrich, an early settler of Litchfield, later for a short time of Sheffield, and afterwards, in 1738, the first settler of Sharon, Conn., his residence in all these four towns being, as may be observed, contemporary with that of Benjamin Bordman. William Goodrich was born in Wethersfield, July 2, 1686, and was the son of William and Grace (Riley) Goodrich, the latter, a daughter of John and Grace

Goodrich Boardman. They were probably married about 1735, and she died in Sharon, Sept. 17, 1755. As Benjamin was then but 50 years old, and had three young children, he may have married again, but there is no record of such marriage, and as late as 1773 Thaddeus is spoken of as his only son. The only other son who lived to grow up, Amos, had died at the age of twenty in the French war. The birth of Thaddeus, as given in the Sharon records, is plainly an error, as it is there set down as July 22, 1749, while that of Charles, the youngest son, is Oct. 14th of the same year. Judging from the date, 1764, of Thaddeus' first deed of gift from his father, when he would naturally be supposed to be

Riley. His grandfather was William Goodrich, an early settler of Wethersfield, whose wife Sarah was daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Marvin of Hartford. He married, May 14, 1706, Margaret Orvis of Farmington. When the township of Sharon was sold in October, 1738, he bought two rights there, and while the other purchasers, after selecting their lots, returned home, to come back again in the spring, Mr. Goodrich brought his family from Sheffield with him, built a hut near the outlet of Mudge Pond, and there spent the winter (a very severe one), with no neighbors, except Indians, nearer than the Dutch settlement at Leedsville. He went to mill on foot during the winter, once to New Milford, and once to Red Hook, N. Y., on snow shoes, carrying his wheat on his back. He died, March 31, 1743, aged 56. His will is the first recorded in the then new Probate Registry at Litchfield. Its preamble, which has the sound of being original, and not the formula then customary, is quoted by Gen. Sedgwick, from whose History of Sharon these facts are mostly taken, as evidence of his sincere piety ; after speaking of the uncertainty of life, as a reason for making his will, he says : " Wherefore, committing my body to the dust from whence it was taken, and my soul to the bosom of my dear Lord Jesus Christ, hoping and believing that he will raise me up with all his saints at the glorious morning of the resurrection, I give " etc. He had sons, Samuel, Jared, William, Elnathan, David, Elisha, Solomon. Their descendants have been very numerous. His wife Margaret survived him about seven years, and one tombstone marks their grave, bearing this epitaph :

" Here lie the husband and the wife
Interred beneath this double tomb ;
This double witness may suffice
To prove that death will be our doom."

at least twenty-one, his birth would be about 1743, between that of Amos and Olive, where there is an interval of nearly seven years, and that date of birth is, therefore, quite probably the correct one.

44. Charles³ Bordman (Daniel² Samuel¹), born at Wethersfield, June 13, 1707; died Feb. 20, 1724-5, in his eighteenth year, and on the same day as his father. In the will of Daniel Bordman, made seven days before his death, Charles was given "the other half of my home lot, the west end of it," inventoried as 13 acres, value £156, its front being towards the west, on Wolcott Hill road. Charles had also "three acres and an half in ye South field and ten acres in Newington." The distribution of his estate to his brothers and sisters is dated April 16, 1725, when, as appears from an agreement signed by them on the day preceding, they were all assembled at the paternal home. The estate amounted to £241 10s. Of this, Richard took his share in land at Newington; (Rev.) Daniel, in the South field pasture; Israel, in Newington, with a small piece in the home lot (which looks as if he had intended to settle again in Newington); the others all had part in the home lot, and Feb. 2, 1726-7, "Joshua and Benjamin Bordman of Litchfield in the County of Hartford, Samuel Churchill and Martha his wife of Wethersfield, Josiah Nichols and Mabell his wife of Danbury, County of Fairfield, John Abby and Hannah his wife of Enfield, Hampshire County, Mass.," sell to Timothy Bordman, their brother, all right in the home lot of Daniel Bordman of Wethersfield, which they had by distribution of the estate of their brother Charles.

The untimely death of Charles, combined no doubt with his lovable personal qualities, made him the object of very tender remembrance in his family, as is shown by the fact that his name was given to the children and grandchildren of several of his brothers and sisters, in the various branches of whose families it has been perpetuated to the present day.

45. Mercy³ Bordman (Jonathan,² Samuel¹), born in Wethersfield, in Stepney Parish, now Rocky Hill, July 4, 1689; married July 4, 1706, JOHN WRIGHT, born in Wethersfield, May 19, 1679, son of Joseph and Mary Wright.

47. Jonathan³ Bordman (Jonathan,² Samuel¹), of Rocky Hill, second of the name, and known, like his father, as Lieut. Jonathan, was born May 16, 1697. He married, June 30, 1725, MABEL HOLMES, daughter of Jonas and Sarah Holmes, born May 20, 1693. At the death of his father Jonathan was less than sixteen years old. By his father's will he had been left, in addition to house and lands, "half the personal estate to be improved for his learning and bringing up, and the benefitt of his lands for the same use." Dr. Griswold of Rocky Hill says that the records of Stepney Parish indicate that for many years, from about 1716 on, Jonathan Bordman was the pedagogue of that settlement at the south end of the old town of Wethersfield. The first schoolhouse, erected in 1712, was nearly opposite his house. The homestead that he received from his father, had, according to the inventory, two dwelling-houses on it ; one of these was afterwards moved and made to adjoin the other, so that the two, though entirely separate, were under the same roof, and thus formed the curious old double house, which continued in the family through several generations, and was only lately pulled down. Jonathan's first wife, Mabel, died Nov. 15, 1741, and he married 2d, March 10, 1743, ELIZABETH BECKLEY. He died Dec. 25, 1775, "of old age." (Ch. Rec.) His widow, Elizabeth, died Aug. 30, 1776, of dysentery. (Ch. Rec.) The amount of his estate was £390 10s. 3d.

Mr. Goodrich was son of Col. David and Hannah (Wright) Goodrich ; he was forty-six years deacon in the Rocky Hill church. He died July 15, 1785, aged 91, and Mrs. Hepzibah, his widow, died Dec. 9, 1785, in her 84th year. (Gravestones in Rocky Hill.)

50. Sergt. Nathaniel³ Bordman (Nathaniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Rocky Hill, born Feb. 19, 1711-12, married Feb. 28, 1733, RUTH PARKER, born in Saybrook, Conn., Sept. 23, 1707, the daughter of Joseph and Ruth (Williams) Parker. Nathaniel's father died when he was nine months old, in 1712, a year of much fatal sickness, making provision among other things, in a hastily drawn-up will of three days before, that his wife should bring up his son "to good learning." The widowed mother married, two or three years after, Capt. William Warner, by whom she had a son William Warner, born Dec. 4, 1717, and she is found again a widow in 1726. Sergt. Nathaniel's home was the farm, one and a half miles west of the center of Rocky Hill, probably that of his father before him, now called the Boardman Holmes farm, and spoken of in connection with Nathaniel, Sen.

Sergt. Nathaniel died "of Pleurisy" May 12, 1776, eight days after the death of his eldest son, Nathaniel, by the same disease. His widow, Mrs. Ruth (Parker)† Bordman, died May 7, 1790, aged 84.

59. Isaac⁴ Bordman (Isaac,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Bolton, Conn., was born at Wethersfield Sept. 11, 1700, and there the birth of one child to him, and his wife ELIZABETH, is recorded in 1725. He soon after removed to Bolton, Conn., where the records show that he bought land, 16 acres of Joseph Churchill, Jan. 19, 1726-7; 25 acres of Edward Rose, March 29, 1729; 15 acres of Jonathan Strong, Nov. 7, 1727; and 20 acres in Coventry, adjoining his Bolton land, July 17, 1732. He could hardly have finished the buildings erected on this land, when he was visited with a great calamity, as appears from the following extract from the doings of the governor and council at a meeting held in Hartford, May 19, 1727-8:

"Whereas it is made evident to this board that by the sudden and awful providence of God by fire, great part of the estate of Isaac Boardman, late of Wethersfield, and now of Bolton, was consumed, whereby he is rendered a suitable object of charity; It is therefore recommended to the several churches and congregations in the towns of Wethersfield and Bolton, to contribute to the relief of said Boardman; and that this brief, craving the contribution, be read in the said congregations by the pastors of said churches, and what shall be gathered deposited in the hands of the deacons of said churches, for the said Boardman's relief."

The expression, "sudden and awful providence of God by fire," seems to imply that the calamity was caused by lightning. Such an appeal to the generosity of the community appears not to have been unusual at that early day, especially when, as would seem to have been the case here, the need was caused by what was considered a direct providence of God.

May 2, 1755, Isaac made a deed of gift to his only son Ichabod of half his farm, "lying partly in Bolton, and partly in Coventry, about 80 acres." Elizabeth Bordman, probably the wife of Isaac, was admitted to the church in Bolton Feb. 12, 1744. Isaac's death, "of Gravel," April 20, 1766, is in the church records.

The will of Isaac Boardman of Bolton, in the County of Hartford, dated April 17, 1766, the day of his death, gives to wife Elizabeth, "the whole of my estate in Bolton, viz: all my lands and the buildings and orchard, and all my stock and all my moveable estate whatsoever to be at her own dispose, she to pay as legacies to my grandchildren, viz: Ichabod Boardman's children 5s. each, and to my daughter Elizabeth Riley 20s., and I make my wife Elizabeth and Jonathan Skinner of Bolton executors."

60. Edward⁴ Bordman (Isaac,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Westfield Society, Middletown, was born in Wethersfield, Nov. 6, 1702, and married, Jan. 30, 1726-7, DOROTHY SMITH, daughter of Benjamin and Hannah Smith of Glastonbury, and granddaughter of Richard Smith of the same town. Edward first settled in Glastonbury, where the births of his children are recorded. While living here, he taught school in 1732 in the parish of Eastbury. He removed, about 1740 to Middletown, to the northwest part of the town, called Westfield, where his next younger brother, Josiah, had already settled. Here he bought in 1740, 1742, and 1743, three tracts of land "next Farmington bounds," about 100 acres in all. He died April 28, 1772, aged 70, in Middletown, and was the first person buried in the old graveyard in Westfield Society. His widow died in the family of her son, Elizur, in Sandisfield, Mass., Dec. 21, 1777, aged 74.

He married, Aug. 5, 1734, RACHEL COLE, and settled in Middletown (Westfield Society), where the records of his family are found. Nov. 29, 1727, Samuel Galpin of Kensington Parish, Middletown, sold to Josiah Bordman of the same parish, one-half of 100 acres of land in the northwest quarter of Middletown. This was Josiah's farm, and that of his brother Edward lay next it. Josiah and Rachel, his wife, are found in a list of members of the Kensington Church, which was within easier reach of their home than that of Middletown. By deed of gift, dated Aug. 12, 1766, Josiah made over land to each of his three sons, Nathaniel, Josiah, Jr., and Joseph; and Feb. 26, 1777, to his son Nathan. According to the inscription on his gravestone in the old burying-ground in Westfield Society, Josiah died Jan. 29, 1781, aged 76, and "Rachael, the pious consort of Josiah Bordman, died Feb. 29, 1782, aged 70."

He was of Middletown, March 17, 1731-2, and later settled in Farmington, in a part of the town afterwards Southington. His home here was about six or eight miles west of those of his brothers, Edward and Josiah, in the northwest part of Middletown. The following account of Ephraim is taken from Timlow's Southington: "He married Oct. 15, 1734, MEHITABEL COLE, daughter of John and Mehitabel (Loomis) Cole, who was born July 5, 1708, in Kensington. He built in the meadow, just south of where Gad Andrews lives, and appears to have been the first settler on the Shuttle Meadow or Blue Hills Division. He was one of four members of the First Society of Farmington, living six or eight miles from Farmington Church, who petitioned, April 27, 1752, to be set off to Kensington (which was "voted nay"). He was justice of the peace, died Jan. 2, 1761, and was buried in Kensington. His wife died Nov. 12, 1769."

74. Jonathan⁴ Bordman (Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Haddam, Conn., was born in East Middletown, Conn.,

Feb. 28, 1724-5. His father died before he was eight years old, and Samuel Stocking, his brother-in-law, was appointed, Aug. 5, 1740, his guardian. He was of Middletown, Jan. 19, 1745-6, when he sold land on the east side of the river, "where my father dwelt," after which he disappears from the records of the town. He settled in Haddam, where he bought the house and lot of Timothy White, March 25, 1746-7. This was situated on the northeast side of the county road, "one quarter of a mile below the meeting-house in Haddam," which then stood some distance north of its present site. This place he sold, June 14, 1750, to Izrahiah Wetmore of Norwich, when it is described as having a "Smith Shop" on it. Sept. 20th of the same year, he bought of Jeremiah Hubbard two pieces of land near the mouth of the Higganum River, in the north part of Haddam, with half a warehouse and half a wharf, called Brainerd's wharf. It was in this neighborhood that he built a house and afterwards resided, and his son Luther, and grandson Watson L., owned it after him, the former describing it in a deed of 1816, as being on the east side of Middletown turnpike, near Capt. John Brainerd's, adding, "said house was the mansion house of my father Jonathan Boardman." A number of sales and purchases of land by him are found in the town records, one of which contained half a grist-mill "on the southernmost branch of Heogenamps River," called Skinner's mill.

Jonathan married about 1748, ZERUIAH, whose family name has not been found. The two were admitted to full communion May, 1760; seven children are recorded to them, the births of two in the town records, the baptisms of the others in those of the church. Jonathan married, 2d, the widow SARAH SMITH, Jan. 3, 1764. She was daughter, born Apr. 2, 1723, of Simon Smith, Jr., as appears from the will of Simon, Jan., 1772; she is said by Dr. Field to have been mother of Jonathan Smith by her first husband, and had probably others also. She had a daughter by her marriage with Mr. Boardman. He married, 3d (see White Geneal- ogy), widow CHLOE (WHITE) GRISWOLD, bapt. Feb. 19, 1738, daughter of Elisha and Ann (Field) White of Killingworth, and widow of Capt. Walter Price Griswold of Killingworth, a shipmaster in the foreign trade, by whom she had one son and four daughters. She married, 3d, after the death of Mr. Bordman, Capt. Daniel Hand of Guilford, who died Oct. 16, 1816, aged 84. She died Nov. 28, 1821, aged 84. The compiler of the White Gen. says she had by Mr. Bordman a son, Samuel, who lived at South Farms, now Morris, formerly part of Litchfield. As Mr. Bordman had by his first wife a son Samuel, who was no doubt the Revolutionary soldier of that name from Haddam, and left a son Samuel who was of Litchfield, in 1822, the statement that the latter was son of the third wife can only be accounted for on the supposition that the first Samuel died before the birth of the second, which is not improbable. Mr. Kellogg, the compiler of the White Gen., was remarkable for his accuracy, and may very likely have had evidence of the fact he stated, which is unknown to the writer.

Jonathan Bordman died probably early in 1790. Administration on his estate was granted to the widow Chloe, April 5, 1790. His inventory amounted to £172 12s. 9d., including a dwelling-house, barn, and shop, with three acres adjoining, 36 acres on the "Punset Road," a Sunday House,* one half a grist mill, etc.

* As there were no fires in the meeting-houses in early days, families who came to church from a distance resorted to the expedient of building small houses of one room near the church, called Sabba'day houses, which added greatly to the comfort of Sabbath worship, especially in the winter. These sometimes consisted of two stories, the lower one for the horses. The single apartment was simply furnished with chairs or benches, and a table, with perhaps a Bible and some religious books. There was a large fireplace, and conveniences for preparing a simple meal at noon-time. Those families able to keep a Sabba'day house, drove there on Sunday morning, and warmed themselves, after their cold ride, by a hot fire before going to the church, returning again for rest and refreshment in the intermission between services. (History of Cromwell, Conn., by Rev. M. S. Dudley.)

76. Thomas⁴ Bordman (Thomas,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Wethersfield, Conn., born there Oct. 19, 1707; married MARTHA, whose family name has not been found. He lived on the homestead of his grandfather Isaac, and his father Thomas. He died in 1757, and left no children. His widow is supposed to be the Martha Boardman who married, Mch. 24, 1768, as second wife, Thomas Brigden of Wethersfield, who, by his will of Feb., 1781, left her all the estate she had at the time of their intermarriage, and the north half of his house on the east side of High street, formerly that of Mr. Charles Bulkley. He had a daughter Grace, and a son Michael Brigden, and other children.

The widow Martha was appointed administratrix of her husband, Thomas Bordman's estate, which, after deducting her thirds, was divided to the sisters, Prudence Bordman, "alias Miller," and Mary Fox; Prudence Miller appears to have been dead in 1758, when the probate record says, her heirs are "supposed to belong to North or South Carolina." There was considerable delay in finishing the settlement, and the account was not closed till Feb. 29, 1772.

The inventory of Thomas Bordman, late of Wethersfield, was taken by Jonathan Belding, Isaac Riley, and Elisha Griswold, Oct. 28, 1757. Some of its items are :

3½ acres Home lot with buildings £130; 4 acres Great Plain £32; 4 acres Great meadow £32; 10 acres pasture in West Swamp £80; 55 acres in Stepney Parish, called pumpkin-town, £155; 15 acres, 21 rds in late division of commons, Tier No. 17, £45; 1 R. 16 rds. in last division of commons, Tier No. 18, £1 8s.; Gun, Sword and belt; Large Bible 4s.; do 10d.; Stoddard's Safety of appearing &c 1s. 3d.; Sound beleaver 1s.; psalm book 9d.; 2 small old books 6d.; Wigg 2s.; Wigg box 9d.; chest with Draws 14s.; one ditto with one draw 7s.; 1 Guilded trunk 2s. 6d.; 124 lbs Tobacco 15s. The amount of the whole was £588 5s. 11d.

Mary⁴ Bordman (Joseph,³ Samuel,² *Samuel*¹), born in Wethersfield, Mch. 3, 1727; married Dec. 17, 1747, HEZEKIAH WELLES, born Dec. 9, 1725, son of Robert and Sarah (Wolcott) Welles. He was Captain of a company raised in Wethersfield in the Revolution, who were at Boston, Jan. to Mch., 1776. He was also Captain of a company who turned out to repel the enemy at New Haven, July 5, 1779, and Captain of a company in the 6th Regiment in 1780. Capt. Hezekiah Welles died Jan. 1, 1804, aged 78; Mary, his wife, died May 23, 1786, aged 60. (Gravestones in Wethersfield.)

90. Sarah⁴ Bordman (Joseph,³ Samuel,² Samuel¹), born in Wethersfield, Feb. 4, 1731, married Nov. 24, 1748, CAPT. CRAFTS WRIGHT, born in Wethersfield, March 25, 1727, son of Timothy and Sarah (Walker) Wright, and grandson of Samuel and Rebecca (Crafts) Wright. Their home was on the east side of High Street, which after Capt. Wright's death was sold, March 14, 1772, to Seth Boardman, son of Timothy, by John and Sarah Robbins. Capt. Wright was a mariner, like many in Wethersfield at that early day, and a master of vessels. He died May 4, 1766, aged 40. The inventory of his estate, taken Aug. 9, 1766, amounted to £752, 7s. 2d. His widow afterwards married, Jan. 10, 1770, as second wife, JOHN ROBBINS, ESQ., of Rocky Hill, born Jan. 1, 1716, the son of Richard and Martha (Curtis) Robbins, and grandson of John and Mary (Bordman) Robbins, the two being thus second cousins. The first wife of Squire Robbins was Martha, daughter of Capt. Jacob Williams, by whom he had a family of eleven children. The eighth of these, Martha Robbins, born March 30, 1754, married April 16, 1772, John Wright, the oldest son of Mrs. Sarah Boardman (Wright) Robbins by her first husband, Capt. Crafts Wright. Mrs. Robbins died Feb. 10, 1784, and Squire Robbins married 3d, Nov. 25, 1784, Mary, daughter of Rev. Daniel Russell. Squire Robbins was a very wealthy man in his day; he built in 1767 (date on the building), the large brick house in the north part of Rocky Hill on the road to Hartford. He represented his town a number of years in the State Legislature, and died about 1798.

CHILDREN OF CAPT. CRAFTS AND SARAH WRIGHT.

- 281 JOHN⁵ (Capt.), b. July 8, 1749; m. April 16, 1772, Martha Robbins.
 Capt. John Wright was a man of great energy and activity. He was associated with his uncles, Levi and Samuel Bordman, and others in trade, and in the building and ownership of vessels in Wethersfield, in some of which he sailed as master. When the Sloop Ann, of which he was afterwards captain, was built, Capt. Wright went in his sleigh to Canaan for the iron used in her construction, a trip of six days. He was, during the Revolution, commander of vessels employed both in trade and in privateering, and his name is found with other Wethersfield men in Capt. Chester Wells' Company, Gen. Erastus Wolcott's Brigade, which was sent to serve six weeks at Peekskill; his time of service was from April 10th to May 22, 1777. He died Sept. 13, 1786, in his 38th year. After his death, his widow, Martha, married in 1788, Mr. James Adams, merchant, who died Aug. 19, 1792. His gravestone stands by the side of that of Capt. Wright in the Wethersfield church yard. "Mrs. Martha Adams, wife of James Adams, died May 18th, 1791, aged 37." (Gravestone at Rocky Hill.) John and Martha Wright had five children, Crafts, Nancy, James, Sally, and John, who just before their father's death were baptized at Wethersfield, Sept. 3, 1786, "in consequence of their mother's being admitted to full communion."

93. Levi⁴ Bordman (Joseph,³ Samuel,² Samuel¹), of Wethersfield, born there May 6, 1739, married April 23, 1761,

ESTHER BORDMAN, born Dec. 22, 1743, daughter of Gamaliel and Sarah (Sherman) Bordman of Newington, and granddaughter of Richard Bordman, one of the first settlers in that part of the town. Levi was a prominent man of his day in Wethersfield. He was chosen selectman in December, 1773, 1774, 1775. He was one of the selectmen who certified to the list or muster roll of Capt. John Chester's Company of 115 men who started for Boston at the Lexington alarm. This company drew pay for six days' service and 1807 miles horse hire. The Boardmans in this company were Samuel, Elijah, Return, and Samuel 2d. Levi received by the will of his father his homestead at the southwest end of Broad Street, where he passed his life, and died March 22, 1782, at the age of 43. Esther, his widow, afterwards married, Nov. 11, 1784, William Warner, and died Sept. 1, 1797, aged 54.

Levi Bordman

Only two of Mr. Levi Bordman's five children, Levi and Joseph Simeon, survived him. His inventory amounted to £1,023, 15s., 3d. It included more than 100 acres of land, also a number of books, some of them Greek and Latin, which indicate that he was a man of education. The "old Tavern Sign" found among the items, leads to the conjecture that he at one time kept a public house, possibly in the home of his Uncle David, on the south corner of Broad Street and Fletcher's Lane, which is known to have been afterwards used for such a purpose, and where Levi is supposed to have lived for a few years after his marriage. That he at one time took into his family youths who were being educated, appears from the following: an old account book of the school, then occupying the schoolhouse which stood in the center of Broad Street, shows the number of weeks of attendance of each child set down against the parent's name. The account of Levi Bordman under date of March 21, 1778, is Josiah S. Hart, 26 weeks.

Will Belemy, 15 weeks.

The last is the youngest son of the famous Dr. Joseph Bellamy of Bethlehem, the great theologian of his time in Connecticut. A letter written by him to this son is preserved in the Boardman family.*

The Family Record of Levi Bordman as set down by himself is as follows :

* William Bellamy was not yet eight years old when he came to Wethersfield, having been born June 28, 1770. He married, but died in early life, leaving one or more sons. Mr. Hinman says he was the pet of his father.

95. Samuel⁴ Bordman (Joseph,³ Samuel,² Samuel¹), of Wethersfield, the merchant, born Dec. 4, 1744, married Dec. 14, 1769, ANNE WRIGHT, probably daughter, born Feb. 7, 1746, of Elizur and Sarah (Goodwin) Samuel Bordman

Wright. She had two children, and died May 27, 1774, of small-pox. Mr. Bordman married second, Dec. 7, 1775, NAOMI BUTLER, born Aug. 10, 1752, daughter of Capt.

Samuel and Naomi Butler. Samuel, by the will of his uncle David Bordman, who had no children, was given the old Boardman homestead, corner of Broad Street and Fletcher's Lane, which had been the home of three generations of his family before him. The first Samuel had bought the place in 1659 of Nathaniel Dickinson, and for all that appears, his descendants so far had lived in the original house; but changes were now made in it, as we learn from the will of Cornet Joseph in 1769; "I give to my son Samuel Boardman all the right I have in or to the house lot on which my Hon^d Father, Mr. Samuel Boardman lived and died (which my brother David Boardman gave to my said son Samuel) together with all the buildings on said lot, all which buildings were erected and finished by me, except the dwelling house which my brother left, which is new covered and new modeled, which alterations, additions, and new buildings have all been done by me for my son Samuel since my brother's decease at great expense."

Samuel became a merchant; he, with his brother Levi, owned, either partly or wholly, a number of vessels, and carried on a large business with merchants in New York and with the West Indies. His "Store" was the building on the north corner of Broad Street and Fletcher's Lane, now used as a warehouse. Judge Adams says of it: "This famous store was noted for its extensive trade, even to distant towns in Connecticut and in Massachusetts, not only during the term of its ownership by Samuel Boardman, but down to the time when it was still occupied by the late Joseph Hale, Sr., about 50 years ago."

Mr. Bordman was one of those who went from Wethersfield in the Lexington alarm. He, in company with Daniel Hinsdale, built, in 1775, saltpeter works in Wethersfield under the firm name of Samuel Boardman & Co., and made large quantities of it for the Revolutionary War. The works stood at the foot of Broad street, about in front of the old Simeon Hale house.

In the troubles before and during the Revolution, Mr. Bordman's business became very much involved, and, in 1774, he conveyed his homestead to Corsa & Bull, wholesale merchants in New York city, probably in part payment for what he owed them. The property afterwards passed through various hands, parts of it at the west end being sold off separately, till, in 1816, the dwelling-house and remaining land were bought by Hezekiah Crane, and from that time on this interesting, picturesque, and ancient Boardman mansion, which had been in the family 115 years, was conducted as a tavern, known as Crane's Tavern so long as it endured. On the 17th of March, 1827, the hostelry, stables, bowling alley, etc., were entirely consumed by fire, the work of an incendiary, and nothing but the old well remains to mark very nearly the site it occupied.

From notes by Judge Adams, who speaks of Samuel Bordman as "one of the most enterprising merchants Wethersfield ever saw," it appears that the sloop *Ann was built for him at Stepney (Rocky Hill) in 1773, by John Ames at a cost of £513 4s. 9d. His brother Levi owned one-eighth interest in the sloop, and their nephew, John Wright, assisted in building her and became her master. The vessel ran to Dominica and other West India ports carrying cattle. Capt. Levi Bordman was at one time her master. Just after completing the Ann, Samuel Bordman built a schooner, the Speedwell, in which Capt. John Wright, his nephew, became part owner, and afterwards commanded it. Samuel Bordman was also an owner in the schooner Rosemary, and probably other vessels still.

His sons all followed the sea, and all found in it an early grave. His son Samuel died at sea in 1794, aged 18 years. Another son, Capt. Belden Bordman, was master of the sloop Polly of 67 tons, a large one for those days. In 1791 he was master of a vessel lying in New York laden with onions; in 1794 he was mate of a vessel running from New York to New Providence; in 1797, master of the brig Mary running to Bilboa. In 1799 he was master of the schooner William, purchased expressly for him, in the Surinam trade. On the 16 day of May in that year he sailed from that port for New York, and neither he nor his crew were ever heard of more. The third son of Merchant Samuel, Capt. Butler Boardman, was a sea captain at the age of 23, when, in the year 1803, he had a vessel in the Surinam port of Berbice. In 1804 he was in the port of Newbern, N. C., having sailed from New York. He died at sea, August, 1806, aged 26 years.

Samuel Bordman's dwelling, after leaving the old homestead on Broad street, was on the east side of High street, at its upper end, in the part called "the common," where he died, Aug. 8, 1812, aged 78, "of cholera Morbus." His wife, Mrs. Naomi Bordman, died Jan. 26, 1826, aged 73.

Gamaliel received from his father, in 1753, a deed of the place where he lived, as well as one of his father's own homestead, subject to a life interest. Gamaliel died one year after this, Sept. 17, 1754, at the age of 43, two years before the death of his father. His widow, Sarah (Sherman) Bordman, married Aug. 31, 1759, Samuel Wolcott, son of "the Worshipful Samuel Wolcott" and Abigail, his wife, daughter of Rev. Nathaniel Collins of Middletown. Samuel and Sarah Wolcott had a daughter, Prudence, baptized in Newington, April 24, 1763. Mrs. Wolcott died March 6, 1794, aged 78. (Family Rec. of Joseph S. Boardman.)

104. Dea. Sherman⁴ Bordman (Daniel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), called also Capt. Bordman, of New Milford, was born there Aug. 2, 1728. He married Dec. 4, 1755, SARAH BOSTWICK, born Aug. 28, 1730, eldest daughter of Nathaniel Bostwick, Esq., of New Milford, who was a son of John Bostwick, one of the settlers of that town. Dea. Sherman Bordman was one of the most influential men of New Milford, and was active for more than fifty years in various offices and positions of trust. He was elected twenty-one times a Representative to the General Assembly; was chosen deacon of the church, April, 1779, holding the office till his death; he was also captain for a time in the militia. He was one of the best men of his generation, held in the highest esteem by all his fellow-citizens. He possessed a large estate, inherited in part from his father, standing for many years highest on the tax list of New Milford. He died July 19, 1814, aged 86. His widow died Oct. 17, 1818, aged 88.

128. Elisha ⁴ Bordman (Israel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Wethersfield, born there July 20, 1720, married Aug. 2, 1739, HANNAH DIX, his cousin, born Nov. 14, 1719, daughter of Leonard and Abigail (Gibbs) Dix of Wethersfield. The home of Elisha was the homestead bought by his widowed mother in 1726, and shortly after deeded to her children. It lay on both sides of the Wolcott Hill road near its lower end, adjoining on the south the rear of their uncle Timothy Bordman's farm, and on the north, that of their other uncle, Leonard Dix. This home-lot was bought in 1842 by Davis Morris and Oliver Wolcott, when it passed out of the Bordman ownership. Elisha died about 1754, administration on his estate being granted March 5th of that year. His widow afterwards married Elizur Wright.

129. Capt. Israel⁴ Bordman (Israel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Stamford, Conn., and Pensacola, Florida, was born in Stamford, Mch. 19, 1724-5. Soon after his birth the family removed from Stamford to their old home in Wethersfield, where the father almost immediately after died, the infant Israel being then but five weeks old. The widowed mother invested the avails of the Stamford property, sold just before their removal, in a house and lands in Wethersfield, which she secured to her children by a deed. About 1729, she married Thomas Waterbury of Stamford, and died Sept. 18, 1730, thus leaving her three children orphans. The two older, Olive, aged 12, and Elisha, aged 9, were assigned to the guardianship of their uncle, Jacob Gibbs, and were without doubt brought up in Wethersfield. Israel, then only five years of age, probably remained with relatives, of whom he had at least one in Stamford, his mother's sister, Mary Gibbs, being of that town in a deed of 1730. It must have been from his home here, on the shores of Long Island Sound, that he early began to follow the sea, but this part of his history is, as yet, only conjecture. All trace of him from the time of his mother's death till he became of age is lost. In the year 1746 he was 21 years old, and August 26th of that year he again appears in Wethersfield records, calling himself "Israel Boardman of Stanford," and sells to his "brother Elisha Boardman of Wethersfield," all his right to land in Wethersfield, describing in the deed the homestead on Wolcott Hill.

Capt. Israel was twice married, and most of his family record is found in Stamford. His first wife was MARY BLACKMAN, daughter of Josiah Blackman of Stamford, whom he married March 13, 1745-6. She died after giving birth to two children, only one of whom, Olive, survived. He married 2d, at Wethersfield, Mch. 19, 1752, SYBIL WARRINER, born in Springfield, Mass., Oct. 27, 1731, the daughter of Jonathan and Mercy (Burnham) Warriner * of Springfield.

The name of Israel Bordman is found in a list of church members in full communion in Stamford, dated Dec. 31, 1746. His home there, bought Mch. 22, 1744-5, is described in the deeds as 2½ acres, with an orchard, dwelling-house, and small barn, lying east of Noroton River. He appears several times in Stamford records in connection with the sale of lands belonging to his deceased wife Mary, one of the heirs of Josiah Blackman. He sold his homestead Dec. 8, 1762, but continued for a while longer to be of Stamford, as shown by an advertisement found in a New Haven paper of Jan. 5, 1764: "Just imported from Dublin in the Brig Darby a parcel of Irish servants, both men and women, to be sold * cheap by Israel Bordman at Stamford." † His last appearance in Stamford records is March 13, 1765, when, "for a valuable consideration," he quitclaims to William King of Stamford all right to certain pieces of land laid out to the heirs of Mary Blackman, late wife of Israel Bordman. Wil-

* It seems hardly necessary to explain that the buying of such servants consisted in paying a certain amount for their expenses incurred in coming over, in return for which they were bound to render service to the purchaser for a specified time; and yet, this advertisement has been found quoted more than once, in all seriousness, among records illustrating slavery in the New England colonies, as if white, free-born British subjects could be openly bought and sold here in the last century. This act of the servant who wished to improve his condition by emigrating, was entirely voluntary; he had the advantage of obtaining his passage with no outlay of money, and at the end of the service given in payment, he was on an equal footing with others in the new country, and free to seek his own fortune.

† Prof. Levermore, in his "Republic of New Haven," makes allusion to the facts here mentioned in the following extract, p. 204: "During 1764, the colonies waited to see what was in store for them, and encouraged each other in peaceful resistance, while Grenville elaborated new schemes of taxation and repression, and prepared the Stamp Act. Upon the threshold of the struggle, there is an interesting record of an event in the world of commerce. Mr. Trowbridge relates that the brig Derby of Derby arrived from Dublin with twenty-two tons of coals and thirty-eight Irish servants, probably the earliest importation of each article. What became of the coals cannot be told; possibly that was a luckless consignment; but Israel Boardman of Stamford advertised, Jan. 5, 1764, 'a parcel of Irish servants, both men and women, just imported from Dublin in the brig Derby, and to be sold cheap.'"

The particulars in regard to the Brig Derby's cargo were taken from the records of the New Haven Custom House by Mr. Trowbridge, who says that "of Derby" must refer to the town of that name in Connecticut, where many vessels were owned.

liam King married Olive, only surviving child of Capt. Israel by his first wife.

The subsequent history of Capt. Israel Bordman is a matter of not remote tradition. He was the owner, either wholly or partly, of the ship he commanded, which he sailed between his home and the old country. On some of these voyages his family went with him, and after one of them his daughter Mary seems to have been left in England, where she married and passed the remainder of her life. Early a member in full communion of the church at Stamford, he was a man of Christian principles, and had also strict Puritan ideas, which he was in the habit of enforcing on shipboard. His widow used often to tell how he would take the cards with which he found the sailors playing, and throw them straight into the sea. His whole life shows him to have been a man of courage and decision, as well as of great enterprise, falling in these respects in no degree behind his emigrant great-grandfather, Samuel Boreman.

As has been said, Capt. Israel's last appearance in Stamford records was in the early part of 1765. This was the memorable year of the Stamp Act. The unjust taxes imposed by Parliament had then already seriously crippled the commerce of the colonies, whose indignation at this last act of oppression now led them unanimously to resolve to depend no more on British manufactures, but to use only such goods as could be made at home, a resolution to which they adhered, till all foreign trade was well nigh suspended. Capt. Israel's occupation was gone, and he, a man now just forty years of age, must take a new start in life.

Not long before these events, at the time of the Treaty of Paris, Feb. 10, 1763, when France gave up her North American possessions, Spain had also surrendered to England her Province of Florida. On its cession, the few Spanish inhabitants nearly all removed to Cuba, leaving the country open to emigration, to induce which a proclamation was issued by the English governor in the autumn of 1763, setting forth the advantages of the Province, its healthfulness, the productiveness of the soil, the mildness of the climate, which allowed two crops to be raised in a year, the variety of its fruits, and its great commercial advantages, combining ease of transportation with the best of harbors. Attracted by these representations,* emigrants arrived from Great Britain and from other parts of Europe; several of the English nobility settled plantations in different parts of the country. Pensacola was then already an old town, having been founded before 1696. It was the seat of the British provincial government, which gave it great advantages for trade, and in the estimation of its friends it promised to become a rival of New Orleans. Here Capt. Israel, having disposed of his vessel and other possessions in New England, bought a plantation, and removed thither with his family. This was for him a most unfortunate adventure.† The boasted health-

* The following quotation from a letter from London is found in the Connecticut Courant; it is dated June 25, 1764: "Among other beneficent regulations to be carried into execution by Gov. Johnson, on his arrival in Florida, care is to be taken to plant sufficient quantities of logwood trees, and as the Province of Florida lies nearly in the same parallel of latitude with China, Persia, Palestine, and other rich, fertile countries of the East, great expectations are formed from the proper culture of raw silk, wine, oil, drugs, and olive trees, with many other materials for manufacture, which we are at present obliged to purchase from our Southern neighbors." Another letter, dated London, Oct. 17, 1763, says: "15 bakers are now engaged to go over to Florida in the first embarkation for that settlement, which, it is now generally thought, will take place the latter end of next month. The settlers of Florida and Louisiana will have greatly the advantage of their predecessors, who went over upon the same plan to the northward (Nova Scotia). They will not have the dreadful frosts of New England and Nova Scotia to encounter, there being no winter so far to the southward. All manner of necessaries will be brought to their hands, and the men-of-war and transports will assist them till proper houses are built for them."

† The New London Gazette of July 7, 1767, says: "They write from West Florida of the 18th ult. that provisions of all kinds were excessively scarce, both at Mobile and Pensacola; the troops were all put to allowance, and if some provision vessel did not soon arrive, the consequences would be dreadful. They had nothing left but a few barrels of rice, that sold at 25 and 26 dollars. It would appear that the immense profits ex-fulness of the climate, at least in Pensacola, proved a delusion. It is said that excessive heat has sometimes produced there a severe fever, similar to the yellow fever, from which Englishmen have often suffered, and that this in 1765, the very year of Capt. Israel's emigration, proved very fatal to a regiment of soldiers sent out from England. Whether from this cause or some other, he died in the course of a few years after his arrival in the province, leaving his widow with a family of young children far from home in a strange country. There were troubles with the Indians,* also, which made their longer stay without a protector unsafe. The mother, therefore, returned to New England with her children, excepting Charles, one of the older of them, then perhaps fifteen or sixteen years of age, who stayed behind, having probably at that time begun to engage in some occupation. He never came back to the North, and was last heard from in New Orleans in 1800. Mrs. Bordman landed in Middletown on her return, and thence came to Wethersfield, where she had been married, and where she must have had relatives and friends. From that time till her death her pected at the Mediterranean, have drawn all the Yorkers, Philadelphians &c., that way, whereby the Floridians have been left without a barrel of flour, though they have plenty of dollars to purchase it with."

* "Letters from West Florida express some suspicion that the Choctaw and Creek Indians are about to make up their differences, and that their union will not be very favorable to the British interests in that part of the World." — New London Gazette of July 18, 1766.

When the resistance of the colonies to England began to demand more active measures for enforcing the rule of the home government, part of the military force was withdrawn from Pensacola to be used elsewhere, and the weakened condition of the province was taken advantage of by the Indians. Under date of Dec. 16, 1768, the Gazette says: "We have accounts from West Florida that the settlers there were in the greatest fear and distress at the removal of the fifteen companies from that province, as they lay surrounded by savages from whom they have no defense; that one of their planters had lost 30 head of cattle, supposed to be carried off by the Indians, and that they could not account for so singular a measure as the taking off of troops from a frontier province, to place them in an interior country."

home was in Wethersfield and Hartford. She passed the last years of her life in the family of her youngest son, William, in Hartford, where she died in 1810. The record of her burial in the old South Burying-Ground reads, "Dec. 8, 1810, Isabella Boardman, aged 78," Sybil being apparently considered an abbreviation of Isabella. The records of the South Church give, "Dec. 6, 1810, Wid: Sybil Boardman, Old age, 78 years."

He took a journey to Maine in 1796 for the purpose of looking after these lands, and as a preparatory step to taking legal proceedings to establish the owners' rights. A letter which he soon after wrote to his cousin, Elisha Boardman, postmaster at Wethersfield, telling of his experience on this journey, is printed in Vol. 25, p. 140, of the Genealogical Register. The letter is dated, Loonenburgh, Aug. 2, 1796. Loonenburgh (at one time called Esperanza) is on the Hudson river, opposite the town of Hudson; its present name is Athens.

Aug. 7, 1753, ABIGAIL STILLMAN, born March 2, 1733, daughter of Dea. John Stillman and Mary, his wife, daughter of the "Worshipful" Samuel Wolcott of Wethersfield, whose home was the old mansion where Gen. Washington was entertained, afterwards called the Webb house. Capt. Charles bought in Middletown, Aug. 3, 1753, four days before his marriage, "land in Middletown Town Plat, with new dwelling house frame on it." He sold this Nov. 21, 1758, then calling himself of Middletown, in which town he passed the first five years of his married life, perhaps associated in business with his brother, Timothy, who had already settled there. His daughters, Rhoda and Abigail, were baptized in Middletown. He afterwards removed to Wethersfield, where the births of all his children are on record. The great-grandson of Capt. Charles, Dr. John Boardman of Buffalo, N. Y., has in his possession the old family Bible, marked "Abigal Boardman Book"; "Charles Boardman Bible Cost in New York 34/ sterling, Dec. 28, 1764," which contains the family record, headed "The a count of my & my familey's age"; among the entries are, "My sun William sposed to be Lost at Sea Sept. 1775"; and "My sun Charles sposed to be Lost at Sea Octobr 1780."

Capt. Charles Bordman (so spelt in his record of his children) died in Wethersfield, Aug. 12, 1793, aged 68, and his widow died in Hartford, Aug. 3, 1818, aged 86. He was a mariner and was master of vessels engaged probably in the West India trade, of which he is supposed to have been, either partly or wholly, the owner. Besides the two sons before mentioned as lost at sea, each at the age of 19, a third son, Capt. George, was in early life also a mariner, and a commander of vessels.

135. Daniel⁴ Bordman (Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Dalton, Mass., born in Wethersfield, Sept. 29, 1732; married June 29, 1756, EUNICE BELDEN. He married second, June 9, 1762, SARAH FOOTE, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Collyer) Foote of Hartford and Simsbury, born in Simsbury in 1732. (Foote Gen.) Daniel inherited the homestead of his father Timothy and his grandfather Daniel, situated on the "Path to the Mill." This he sold June 9, 1768, to James Barret, and removed to Pittsfield, now Dalton, Mass. He lived in the part of the town called the "Ashuelot Equivalent," in the north of Dalton, where he owned a large tract of land, buying at one time (1769), 109 acres. The Pittsfield records say, "the Wife of Mr. Boardman died Jan. 1779, of Worms." This was Sarah Foote, the mother probably of all his children except the two older. "June, 1781, Mr. Boardman of Equivalent, and Mrs. ——— (name not found, but supposed to be Scott), were joyned in wedlock"; and again, "Sept., 1788, Daniel Boardman of Dalton, and MRS. MERCY OLDS were married." Mr. Bordman seems to have been active in taking measures to establish the land claims in Maine, inherited from his father. In the letter of his nephew, William Frazier, on that subject in 1796, he speaks of what "D. Boardman says " of their condition "the last time he was there, which is under 40 years ago," implying that Mr. Daniel Bordman had at least twice taken the journey from Wethersfield to Maine previous to 1760, no small undertaking in that remote day.

He died at Dalton, March 24, 1812, aged 83; his widow, Mercy, died April 25, 1827, aged 86. Mr. Bordman's will, dated June 3, 1797, proved June 2, 1812, makes provision for the maintenance of his wife Mercy, with legacies to his sons, Israel and Charles, and daughters, Anna and Olive, Mary and Sarah. From the fact that Anna and Olive had together certain articles, "that were their mother's," it is inferred that they were both children by the first wife, Eunice Belden, though no record of Olive's birth or baptism has been found. The residue of his estate, inventoried at $3,123.98, is given to his son Daniel.

136. John⁴ Bordman (Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Rensselaerville, N. Y., was born at Wethersfield, Aug. 6, 1735. He married about 1760, LYDIA DEAN, born in Groton, Conn., Oct. 12, 1746, daughter of John and Sarah (Douglas) Dean of Groton, who removed thence to Salisbury, Conn., Sheffield, Mass., and to Hillsdale, N. Y. Mr. John Dean, Lydia's father, was a son of John Dean of Lebanon and Groton, and a grandson of James Dean of Stonington. Sarah⁴ Douglas, her mother, was probably in the line of Samuel,³ William,² William¹ Douglas, the latter an early settler of New London. A brother of Mrs. Bordman was Judge James Dean of Utica, who was a noted man in his day, and the two were first cousins of Silas Deane, our ambassador to France in the Revolution, of whom Mrs. Bordman's youngest son was probably a namesake.

Mr. and Mrs. Bordman must have lived for a while in Sheffield, Mass., as the birth of Sarah, daughter of John and Lydia Bordman, is recorded there, Dec. 2, 1760. He was of Spencertown, Berkshire County, Mass., in a deed of Jan. 17, 1769, when he, with his brothers Charles and Seth of Wethersfield, and the other heirs, sell to their brother Daniel all right to the home lot of their father, Timothy Bordman. He was, in 1784, of Jericho, afterwards Hancock, Mass., as shown by a deed in Pittsfield records, where June 1, 1784, John Dean of Spencertown, N. Y., sells for £30 to John Bordman of Jericho, lot No. 3, with improvements, containing 118¼ acres. He was also called of Stephentown, Rensselaer County, N. Y., and finally settled in Rensselaerville, in that county. Mrs. Lydia (Dean) Bordman, who was the mother of his children, died in 1772. He married after her death, DEBORAH BUCK, and 3d, WIDOW EUNICE JONES. He died at Rensselaerville, April 26, 1817, aged 82.*

* John Bordman served in the French War, in Capt Whittlesey's Co., May 4th to Oct. 21, 1758. Whether he was this John, son of Timothy, or John, son of Jonathan of Rocky Hill, b. 1729, it is difficult to determine. The reasons in favor of each are about equal. He might have been also John, son of Gamaliel of Newington, who d. Jan. 7, 1759, in his 19th year

138. Seth⁴ Bordman (Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born at Wethersfield, April 21, 1742, married in Newington Feb. 6, 1772, ABIGAIL FOSDICK, probably daughter of Ezekiel and Abigail (Wright) Fosdick, born in Wethersfield, Sept. 10, 1745. Seth Bordman was of Spencertown, Albany County, N. Y., Oct. 11, 1765, when he received a mortgage deed of land. He bought, March 14, 1772, the house on the east side of High street, in Wethersfield, which had been that of Capt. Crafts Wright, deceased, who had married his cousin, Sarah Bordman. This he sold after two years. There is record in Wethersfield of but one of his children, a daughter, buried April 29, 1777, aged 13 months. He was a Revolutionary soldier in Capt. John Chester's company, Gen. Spencer's Regiment, at the Siege of Boston, May 9 to Dec. 17, 1775, and engaged at Bunker Hill; in the militia under Gen. Gates "to the northward," 1777; wounded at the battle of Stillwater, 1777, by having the thumb shot from his right hand. He became a pensioner in 1818, and his name is found as an invalid pensioner in a list of 1833-4. By trade he was a cordwainer; he seems to have lived for a while in Lenox, Mass., where he bought $6\frac{1}{4}$ acres July 21, 1786, and sold it March 26, 1788, calling himself in each case, "of Lenox." He and his wife Abigail were of Waterford, Erie County, Pa., in 1804, when they sold land in Wethersfield inherited from Abigail's brother, Samuel Fosdick. Seth died in Newington, Conn., Feb. 25, 1831, aged 89. Hinman says that he lived in Attica in 1809, and in Canandaigua in 1811; that he had children, Seth, Simeon, and Mary Ann; Mary Ann married in Canandaigua; another daughter married C. V. Boughton of East Bloomfield, N. Y., and another, Mr. McKinsey of the same place; also that one son went to Sandusky.

139. Olive⁴ Bordman (Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Wethersfield, Nov. 3, 1745, married Nov. 10, 1768, THEODORE LEE of New Britain, born Sept. 26, 1743, son of Col. Isaac Lee, a very prominent man of that town. He is alluded to in Mrs. Willard's poem, "Stealing the Bride," part of which may be found quoted in the Burnham Genealogy. Theodore Lee's mother was the bride. She was Tabitha Norton, born 1718, daughter of Isaac Norton of Kensington. Theodore Lee settled in Torrington, Conn., as a farmer. The name of his wife Olive was a very common one among Daniel Bordman's descendants; four of his six sons who had families, had each a daughter Olive, and in the next generation there were several more of the name.

140. Elizabeth⁴ Bordman (Joshua,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Litchfield, Conn., Nov. 10, 1725, married THOMAS WHITNEY,* son of William and Mary (Whitemore) Whitney, born in Killingly, Conn., Feb. 28, 1727-8. Mr. Whitney was of Canaan, Conn., 1750, and of Claverack, in the County of Albany, N. Y., in 1761, and finally settled at Nobletown, now Hillsdale, N. Y., where he took an active part under the lead of Robert Noble in a strife between the authorities of Massachusetts and those of New York, relating to the jurisdiction of certain lands in Livingstone Manor. On the 26th of June, 1766, the sheriff and posse proceeded to Noble's house to arrest him and other persons named in the warrant, and when near Noble's house the two parties came in collision. A firing by both parties instantly followed, and Cornelius Ten Broeck, one of the posse, and "Tom Whitney" one of the rioters, were both shot and died on the spot. (See proclamation of Gov. Sir Henry Moore of 3d of July following in Documentary History of New York, Vol. 3, p. 830-832.) Thomas Whitney's gravestone in North Hillsdale, in a burying ground established by the Patroon Van Rensselaer, reads: "In memory of Lieutenant Thomas Whitney who died June 26, 1767 (should be 1766) in his 38th year." The widow Elizabeth is said to have died at the house of her son Joshua in Chenango, N. Y., before 1793, and to have been buried on the farm where he lived, now in the city of Binghamton.

* The account of Thomas Whitney has been taken in great part from the papers of Dr. D. W. Patterson on the Whitney family in Massachusetts; the name of Thomas' wife was unknown at the time they were written, but is now supplied from the facts appearing in Joshua Bordman's will and inventory.

Y., his farm there being within the limits of the present city of Binghamton. He was a trader, and a man of unusual energy and enterprise, dealing in cattle, which he drove through the wilderness to Philadelphia, and there converted them into merchandise, which he transported home, part of the way in boats, and then carted over the hills to his home. He was chosen supervisor of the town of Union at its organization, April, 1791, and re-elected next year. His wife d. Aug. 17, 1793, and he himself d. 141. Lieut. Daniel⁴ Bordman (Joshua,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Sheffield, Mass., was born, probably in Litchfield, in 1727, before his father's removal to Sheffield. He married about 1750, SARAH, whose family name has not been found, and seven children are recorded to them in Sheffield. Of his two sons, Daniel and Joshua, it seems likely that Joshua died early, as he does not appear with the other heirs in 1799, when they sell land inherited from their mother, Sarah. Daniel Bordman was surveyor of highways in Sheffield at a date not given. In a list of officers of the 1st Berkshire Militia, Mark Hopkins, colonel, dated March 26, 1776, Daniel Bordman's name is found as first lieutenant of the 2d or "West Company" of Sheffield, John Spoor, captain. (Mass. Archives, Vol. 23, p. 253.) He and his brother Joshua also served four days in October, 1780, in Capt. Enoch Noble's Company, Col. John Ashley's Regiment, "going to the northward in the alarm when the Forts George and Anne were taken." Daniel Bordman died March 5, 1777*; the only probate record in regard to him is the granting of administration on his estate, Oct. 11, 1783, to Daniel Bordman, Yeoman, Jonathan Holcomb, and Moses Hubbard, Gent. His widow, Sarah, died July 5, 1800 (?). The heirs sold land inherited from her in the following deed, dated Jan. 12, 1799, of Daniel Bordman, Daniel Ashley, Abijah Peck, George Taylor, and Benjamin Cowles of the town of Greenfield, N. Y., by which they sell to Nathaniel Cowles of Sheffield land in Sheffield inherited from Sarah Boardman, late of Sheffield, widow. The deed is signed by Benjamin and Rosanna Cowles, George Taylor and wife Rhoda, Abijah Peck and wife Hulda, Daniel Boardman, Electa Boardman. Among the witnesses are Daniel Boardman and Sabina Boardman; as the signatures and the names in the deed do not all agree, there is some difficulty in identifying each of the persons mentioned. Daniel Ashley would seem to have been the husband of a deceased daughter of Lieut. Daniel.

In memory of Mrs. Sarah, wife of Lieut. Daniel Bordman, who died July 5, 1800, in the 70th year of her age. (Gravestones in Sheffield, copied by Miss M. K. Talcott.) There is evidently an error in the latter date of death, as shown by the widow Sarah's being spoken of as already deceased, Jan. 12, 1799.

142. Joshua⁴ Bordman (Joshua,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Sheffield, Mass., and Otisco, N. Y., was born in Sheffield, probably about 1739. He married, Feb. 6, 1762, DOROTHY CASE. He resided in Sheffield till about 1790, afterwards removing to Freehold, a town in Greene Co., N. Y., some miles southwest of Albany. In Greenfield, the next town northeast, some of the children of his brother Daniel were living in 1799, and in Rensselaerville, the town next north, was the family of his cousin, John Bordman, son of his uncle Timothy of Wethersfield. But one child, Sarah, born 1763, is recorded to Joshua and Dorothy in Sheffield, though the others must have been born there also. He was of Otisco, Onondaga Co., N. Y., July 1, 1816, when he sold land in Sheffield, the deed witnessed by his sons, Richard and Elijah Bordman. He died in Otisco about 1820; there is some reason for thinking that his wife Dorothy died not long before his removal from Sheffield.

Joshua Bordman of Sheffield was a private June 13, 1776, in Col. Mark Hopkins's Regiment. He served from Aug. 21 to Oct. 21, 1777, in Capt. Enoch Noble's Company, Col. John Ashley's regiment from Berkshire Co. His name is found in a pay-roll of that regiment from July 6th to 27th, his captain being then Jeremiah Hickoks. The record says, "Lieut. Hickok marched at the request of Maj.-Gen. Schuyler in defence of the United States to Kingsburg, July 6, 1777." Again he is found, together with his brother Daniel, in Col. John Ashley's regiment in a pay-roll for "services in going to the northward in the alarm when the Forts George and Anne were taken in Oct. 1780," each serving four days.

150. Thaddeus⁴ Bordman (Benjamin,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Sharon, Conn., and Harpersfield, N. Y., born in Sharon, July 22, 174(3?), married REBECCA SMITH. Thaddeus, who was the only son of Benjamin who lived to be of age, resided probably in one of two houses on their farm on the west side of Mudge Pond, parts of which he received by deeds of gift from his father in 1764, 1771, and 1773. In the spring of 1786, Thaddeus and his father sold their property in Sharon to Frederic Lord of Hartford, and removed from the town, probably to Harpersfield, Otsego County, N. Y. (now in Delaware County), where Thaddeus was living in 1791. Though the latter must have been married long before leaving Sharon, no record of the marriage or of his family is found there. His family Bible is in the possession of his great granddaughter, Mrs. Jane Boardman Phelps of Knoxville, Iowa. It contains these valuable entries:

He had married first Jemima ———, who died in Wallingford, Sept. 12, 1772, aged 33, having had three children who had died in infancy. Mr. Yale is said to have served in both the French and Revolutionary Wars. (See Yale Gen.) He died in Sharon, Jan. 27, 1820. His widow died Feb. 29, 1824.

June 13, 1754, his second cousin, the widow MARTHA (HURLBUT) COLE of Newington, born Oct. 27, 1723, the daughter of Joseph Hurlbut and Sybil Fitch, the latter a daughter of Mr. Thomas Fitch and Sarah² Bordman. Martha's first husband, whom she married March 10, 1748, was Phinehas Cole of Newington, by whom she had Lucy, born Dec. 25, 1748 (m. 1st, April 21, 1771, David Lowry, and 2d, Nov. 4, 1791, Unni Robbins, Jr.), and Martha, born Aug. 19, 1750 (m. April 21, 1778, Elisha Hosford of Farmington, brother of Zerviah). Jonathan Bordman's home, the same as that of his father and grandfather, was in the north part of the village of Rocky Hill, on the highway from Hartford to Middletown. His wife died Sept. 13, 1776, of dysentery. He died in 1798. In the French war, Jonathan Bordman was sergeant in Capt. Josiah Buckingham's Company, Col. Elihu Chauncey's Reg., serving Sept. 8 to Oct. 28, 1755.

Elnathan is supposed to have lived a little north of his brother Jonathan, probably on part of the land inherited from their father. His wife died Sept. 26, 1805, in her 73d year, of consumption. 159. Capt. John⁴ Bordman (Fonathan,³ Fonathan,² *Samuel*¹), of Rocky Hill, Conn., was born there Dec. 5, 1729. From what is known of his subsequent history, it is inferred that he began at an early age to follow the sea, and he was, so far as appears, the first of the Boardman family at Wethersfield to devote himself exclusively to a seafaring life.* Capt. Israel Bordman of Stamford, and Capt. Charles Bordman of Wethersfield were each some four years his senior, but the former did not sail from Wethersfield, and the latter seems to have been at first more of a shipwright, like

* There are some reasons for supposing that Capt. John was the John Boardman who served in Capt. Whittlesey's Co., May 4 to Oct. 21, 1758, in the French War. This might also have been John, son of Timothy, b. 1735, or John, son of Gamaliel of Newington, who d. Jan. 7, 1759, aged 19.

his brother Timothy of Middletown, than a sailor. Capt. John became at length commander of vessels employed in the West India trade, in which both Wethersfield and the village of Rocky Hill were then largely engaged,* and must have led an adventurous life, of which, however, little record remains. An instance, illustrating what was more than once

* Wethersfield in early years carried on an extensive trade, both with towns on our own coast, and largely with foreign countries, especially with the West Indies. In consequence of its better landing-place, Rocky Hill became the principal shipping point, not only of Wethersfield itself, but it took the lead in that respect of most of the towns on the Connecticut River. Very many vessels were built and launched, both there and in Wethersfield, to be used in such commerce. The principal articles of export were pipe staves, lumber, grain, hay, brick, shingles, horses, cattle, swine, sheep, salt beef, pork, and fish, the cargo always including onions. In return for these would be brought back rum, sugar, molasses, salt, etc. An important evidence of this extensive trade is still to be seen in the large numbers of old warehouses now in existence, but used for other purposes. During the century or more when this large amount of business was carried on, Wethersfield was in a most thriving condition. It abounded in merchants; farmers had a profitable market for their crops and live stock; production of all sorts was greatly stimulated; craftsmen of various kinds were in great demand; the business of the shipwright was an important one, and the young men found occupation as seamen, very many of them naturally growing up to become such. There is hardly a family name in the town that has not more or less representatives among the seamen of its several generations during the latter half of the last century and the beginning of the present. Unfortunately it is only the masters of vessels who are named in such records as exist, and they oftenest without their Christian name; hundreds of others who sailed with them are lost to sight, except as they come to light by chance in the church records of Wethersfield and Rocky Hill, which are full of notices of the deaths of such as were lost at sea, or who perished by disease, often the yellow fever or small-pox, in some port of the West Indies or of our own coast.

Navigation in those days, before the use of steam, was attended with great difficulties. There were, for a long time, few or no light-houses, and probably few beacons or buoys along the coasts. The river was obstructed by bars, so that it was sometimes necessary to lighten a full laden vessel by removing part of her cargo, before they could be crossed. Judge Adams, from whose notes most of these facts are taken, tells of a vessel which in 1768 was thirteen days in going from Saybrook to Rocky Hill. Two round trips a year to the West Indies were all that could be accomplished; one captain succeeded once in making three during that time, and became of note in consequence.

his experience, is found in the Connecticut Courant of Nov. 3, 1772, under the head of news from Boston.

"Capt. Cornelius White arrived here from Cape Nichola Mole, in Lat. 39:30, Long. 69:35, came across a wreck which proved to be Captain John Boardman of Wethersfield, in Connecticut, who, together with his crew, Capt. White took off, and brought in with him."

He came at least once again into a similar situation, but without a rescuer, for on Sept. 25, 1780, he sailed for the last time on one of his voyages, having with him his son Ashbel, thirteen years of age, and his ship with its crew was never heard of more.

Capt. John is said to have lived in the north part of the curious double old Boardman house, while his son, Capt. Jason, occupied the south half. His children were by two mothers (dates of marriage not found), GRACE RILEY, born July 5, 1730, daughter of Stephen and Abigail (Holmes) Riley of Rocky Hill, who died Dec. 17, 1754, and ELIZABETH WARNER, daughter of Capt. Jonathan Warner, who died March 17, 1825, aged 87, of "influenza."

172. Nathaniel⁴ Bordman (Nathaniel,³ Nathaniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Rocky Hill, Conn., was born there Jan. 25, 1734. He married MABEL HOLMES, probably daughter of William and Hannah (Hale) Holmes, born Sept. 16, 1738. He died May 4, 1776, "of Pleurisy," the same disease as that which caused the death of his father eight days later. His widow died after about a year and a half, on Nov. 14, 1777, thus leaving orphans a family of eight children, the youngest an infant. The oldest son, then eighteen, and the oldest daughter, then sixteen years of age, took charge of the family, and brought up the younger children.

JESSE CHURCHILL of Newington, as second wife. Dea. Jesse was a son of Martha (Bordman) Churchill, daughter of Daniel² Bordman. They lived for a time in Bristol, Conn., but returned to Newington. Dea. Churchill's former wife was Jerusha Gaylord of Farmington, by whom he had seven children; of these, one, Rev. Jesse, married Hannah, daughter of Capt. Charles Bordman, and another, Martha, married Benajah Bordman, son of Israel of Newington. After the death of Sarah, Dea. Jesse married, June 15, 175. Return⁴ Bordman (Nathaniel,³ Nathaniel,² Samuel¹), of Rocky Hill, Conn., was born there Jan. 14, 1744-5, taking his name from that of his great grandfather, Return Strong of Windsor. He was never married. He lived on the farm inherited from his father and grandfather, in the curious old house still standing in the west part of Rocky Hill. He was one of the company from Wethersfield who started for Boston in the Lexington alarm. His death "from mortification" occurred Sept. 6, 1831, in his 87th year. He was the last survivor of his generation of Bordmans, great grandchildren of Samuel.¹ In his will he left bequests to his niece, Eunice Holmes, and to her two daughters, Sarah and Maria. All the remainder of his property he gave to her son, Allen Boardman Holmes, from whom the old farm of Nathaniel² Boardman takes its present name, the Boardman Holmes farm.

FIFTH GENERATION.

177. Ichabod⁵ Boardman (Isaac,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Bolton, Conn., and Halifax, Nova Scotia, was born in Wethersfield Oct. 25, 1725, and removed with his father and mother to Bolton, Conn., in 1726-7. He married, Sept. 24, 1753, MARY FENN of Farmington.

Ichabod Boardman was admitted to the church in Bolton June 16, 1754, and was made a freeman there Sept. 22, 1756. His marriage and the births of his children are recorded in Bolton, in whose records he last appears July 7, 1760. The next year he removed to Nova Scotia, joining in an emigration thither from Connecticut which took place about that time, the conditions of which are shown in the following extract taken from "The Cogswells in America":

"The township of Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, containing in the whole 100,000 acres, more or less, was granted July 21, 1761, to proprietors, chiefly from Connecticut. After the expulsion of the French in 1755, and during the last year of the reign of George II (1760), colonists were invited by royal proclamation to come and possess the land. Each proprietor was entitled to a right for himself and a half right for his family. Each right consisted of a town lot of three acres, a farm of forty acres, and seven hundred acres of wilderness land."

Among the names of 63 colonists* in the grant now on file in Cornwallis, that of Ichabod Boardman appears tenth on the list. He did not long survive his removal, being spoken of as deceased in the will of his father, April 17, 1766. As his wife nowhere appears in later records, she may also have died soon after their emigration. As appears from the probate records at Hartford, Jan. 30, 1776, "Josiah Boardman of Bolton, a minor aged 16 years, son of Ichabod Boardman of Halifax, deceased, made choice of Mr. Saul Alvord of Bolton to be his guardian."

* Among the papers of Rev. Eleazer Wheelock of Lebanon, Conn., is a petition sent by these colonists, asking him to procure a minister for them. Ichabod Boardman's is one of the leading names in the petition. (Information furnished by Rev. Wm. DeLoss Love of Hartford.)

179. Hannah⁵ Boardman (Edward,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), born in Glastonbury, Conn., Oct. 18, 1729, married in Middletown, whither the family had removed, Jan. 22, 1752, DAVID HIGBY of that town, born Sept. 20, 1726, bapt. April 16, 1727, the son of Edward and Rebecca (Wheeler) Higby, and a descendant of Edward Higby who, in 1665, had a grant of 300 acres in the western part of Middletown from the General Court. It was in this part of the town, called Westfield Society, that Mr. and Mrs. Higby lived. He died Feb. 1, 1793. (Middletown Rec.) Mrs. Higby died July 2, 1800, according to the record in the Family Bible of her nephew, Benjamin Jeduthan Boardman. The diary of Mrs. Higby's brother, Rev. Benjamin Boardman, kept while chaplain in the Rev. Army in camp near Boston in the summer of 1776, speaks of a visit from John Hilton Higby and his wife, probably a connection of this family.

180. Rev. Benjamin⁵ Boardman (Edward,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Middle Haddam and Hartford, Conn., was born in Glastonbury, Conn., Aug. 3, 1731. When he was nine years old he removed with his father's family to Middletown, Westfield Society. He studied at Yale College, where he graduated in 1758, and was tutor for two years. Jan. 5, 1762, he was ordained to the ministry in Middle Haddam, where he remained upwards of twenty-one years, being dismissed from his charge there in September, 1783. He was later, May 5, 1784, installed pastor of the South church in Hartford, where he remained six years, and was dismissed at his own request in 1790. He continued to reside in Hartford till the close of his life, his home there being a house, since taken down, on the east side of the lower part of Wethersfield Avenue. During his pastorate at Middle Haddam, at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War, he enlisted as chaplain in Gen. Comfort Sage's troop of horse from Middletown in the Lexington alarm. He was also chaplain in Col. Durkee's Connecticut Regiment in Washington's Army, and was with it at its station at Paulus Hook, now Jersey City, in September, when the enemy took New York. His diary, kept while he was with the army around Boston from July 31 to Nov. 12, 1775, is preserved, and has been printed in Vol. III, 2d series, of the Proceedings of the Mass. Hist. Society. He married at Cromwell, Conn., Feb. 11, 1762, the WIDOW ANN BOWERS, who had been first the widow of Mr. Stephen Hosmer, son of Rev. Stephen Hosmer, minister in East Haddam, and grandson of Dea. Stephen Hosmer of the South church in Hartford. Mr. Hosmer, born 1710, was a graduate in 1732 of Yale College; he was a merchant in East Haddam, and had married first, Susanna, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Bunce of Hartford, who died in 1738. He died in 1751, aged 41. The widow, Ann Hosmer, married next Rev. Benj. Bowers, first minister of Middle Haddam, born in Billerica, Mass., a graduate, 1733, of Harvard, who died May 11, 1761, aged 45, leaving several children by a former wife.

Mr. Boardman's portrait is in the rooms of the Conn. Historical Society, and has been reproduced in Dr. Parker's History of the Second church in Hartford, where an account of him and his connection with that church is given. The interesting story there told of his experience in the matter of the payment of his salary during the latter part of his pastorate at Middle Haddam, well illustrates the financial troubles of the Revolutionary period, from which he was not the only minister to suffer. He computed that the value of what he received in payment for the six years from 1777 to 1782, though amounting nominally to £570, was but £36 18s. real value. Mr. Boardman felt strongly the injustice of this, and vigorously remonstrated against it, but, as he himself at one time put it, he submitted with the better grace, "because my Heart was bound up in the cause of my Country, and was very anxious for its Salvation, and felt disposed to submit to Suffering with my fellow creatures to as great a degree as I could well bear."

Mr. Boardman was a man of strong body and loud voice, which gained him the name among the soldiers of the "Big Gun of the Gospel." The tradition is that while chaplain in the army he once made a prayer that was heard across the water at a distance of more than a mile. Many of his sermons are in the possession of descendants of his nephew and adopted son. They are written with great care, and are spoken of by Dr. Parker as showing good understanding and sound judgment. He had no children, but adopted Jeduthan, son of his brother Elizur, who then took the name of Benjamin Jeduthan, and became heir to his uncle's property, after the death of Mrs. Boardman. The will of Rev. Benjamin is dated Dec. 14, 1801; after provision for his wife and nephew, he ordered that his two negro servants, Sterling and Tom, should be set free after the death of himself and wife, Sterling to be paid $33 as a reward for his fidelity, and Tom $5. By a codicil, dated Jan. 9, 1802, he also provided that Sterling, who was then aged and infirm, should remain in his dwelling house during his life, as a reward for his fidelity.* Thomas Y. Seymour, Esq., and Benjamin J. Boardman were appointed executors. He died Feb. 12, 1802, in his 71st year. The amount of his inventory taken March 12, 1802, was $8,130. He was buried in the old Center churchyard, where his monument now stands. His widow lived to a great age, dying Dec. 17, 1809, aged 92.

* "Died in this town on Thursday morning last, Starling Boardman, a colored man, supposed to be between 110 and 115 years of age."—American Mercury of Monday, Feb. 13, 1832.

181. Elizur⁵ Boardman (Edward,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Sandisfield, Mass., was born in Glastonbury, Conn., May 31, 1738, from which town the family removed about 1740 to Westfield Society in Middletown. He married REBECCA SAGE, born Jan. 24, 1739-40, bapt. Feb. 8, 1739-40, daughter of Nathaniel Sage of Upper Houses, now Cromwell, who in his will of 1779 mentions his daughter, Rebecca Boardman. The wife of Nathaniel, and mother of Rebecca, was Rebecca Hart. Elizur Boardman and his wife were received into full communion with the church in Cromwell, Nov. 25, 1764. They removed later to Sandisfield, Mass., where the baptisms of their children are recorded. The will of Elizur Boardman of Sandisfield, yeoman, made July 12, 1783, and proved July 6, 1790, is in the Probate Records at Pittsfield. It gives his widow Rebecca the use of one-third of his real and personal estate, the side-saddle on which she usually rode, and the use of a horse and cow while his widow. The remainder of the estate, including a negro boy, Cæsar, is given to his sons, Edward and Benjamin Jeduthan. June 4, 1790, two days before his death, he signed a codicil providing for his daughter "Dimmis," who had been born since the will was made, giving her £40, to be paid her by her two brothers. His inventory, taken July 12, 1790, amounted to £348 2s. 11d. He died June 6, 1790, aged 52. His widow afterwards married Mr. Tuller (possibly Fuller), and died June 3, 1810, aged 68. (Family Bible.) Oct. 2, 1792, Elijah and Ozias Deming were appointed guardians of Edward and Benjamin Jeduthan Boardman, minor sons of Elizur Boardman of Sandisfield.

He married Dec. 18, 1766, HANNAH ROYS (called also Rice) of Wallingford, Conn. The births of their children are in Middletown records, where it is added, "Josiah Boardman sen'r, above said, died at Fairfield coming home from the Army Sept. 17, 1776." His widow married, Jan. 10, 1780, as 2d wife, Richard Lucas, born Nov. 16, 1731, by whom she had Huldah, born June 22, 1781. Mr. Lucas died in 1806. 193. Ruth⁵ Boardman (Ephraim,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), born in the part of Farmington now Southington, Aug. 19, 1737, married Oct. 15, 1761, HEZEKIAH WOODRUFF, born March 10, 1735, son of Samuel and Sarah (Mason) Woodruff of Farmington. Timlow, in his History of Southington, says that the family lived on what was known as the Truman Barnes place, and that Mr. Woodruff sold his property there in January, 1786, and removed to Colebrook, Conn. Mrs. Ruth (Boardman) Woodruff died Aug. 9, 1829.

194. Mary⁵ Boardman (Ephraim,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), born in what is now Southington, Conn., Sept. 25, 1739, married Jan. 14, 1759, JOAB HORSINGTON, son of John Horsington. They removed before 1768 to Vermont, as appears from a deed of Oct. 12, 1768, where Joab and Mary Horsington of Windsor, County of Cumberland, N. Y. (now in Vermont), sell to Ephraim Bordman of Farmington 7½ acres in the Shuttle Meadow division of Farmington. They have three children recorded in Southington. Joab Horsington was sergeant in the campaigns of 1758 and 1759 in the French War.

195. Ephraim⁵ Boardman (Ephraim,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Bristol, Conn., was born in the part of Farmington which is now Southington, Conn., in 1748. He lived in Bristol, probably in the parish of West Britain, afterwards, in 1806, incorporated as Burlington. His name occurs many times in Bristol records in connection with buying and selling land. Feb. 20, 1796, calling himself "of State of Connecticut, and County of Hartford," he sold "all the land he owned in Bristol," with dwelling-house. He probably about that time removed from the town.

The birth of Ephraim is not recorded, but his age appears from the Probate Record, Feb. 10, 1762; "Ephraim Boardman, a minor aged 14 years, son of Ephraim Boardman, late of Farmington, chose Joab Hossington of Farmington, Guardian." Though he is presumed to have married, and, perhaps, had children, no record of them has been found.

196. Stephen⁵ Boardman, Jr. (Stephen,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Bolton, Conn., was born in Middletown, east side of the river, Dec. 31, 1727. The family removed to Bolton when he was about sixteen years old. The name of his wife was ABIGAIL. She was admitted to the church in Bolton, Dec. 22, 1754. The births of their children are in the records of that town. "Stephen Boardman Jun. died Oct. 2, 1760, in 33rd year—died in the Army at Oswago after conquest of Montreal." (Bolton Rec.)

198. Capt. Nathaniel⁵ Boardman (Stephen,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Bolton, Conn., and Norwich, Vt., was born in East Middletown, Conn., March 14, 1731-2. He removed with his father's family about 1743 to Bolton, where he married May 29, 1758, ESTHER CARVER, daughter of Samuel and Esther Carver of Bolton, born there March 26, 1738. The wife Esther was admitted to the church, Aug. 29, 1759, and Nathaniel, June 30, 1771. The births or baptisms of their seven eldest children are in Bolton records, with the exception of that of Esther, which is in the church record in East Hartford, where Capt. Nathaniel lived about 1762. He removed from Bolton to Norwich, Vt., about 1777, taking his family and goods on horseback. His title of captain probably came from his holding that office in a militia company. During the French and Indian War he was a member of Capt. Noah Grant's Company from June 9 to Dec. 1, 1756, and is on record as at Fort William Henry Oct. 13, 1756. He was Corporal in Co. A, formed in Tolland, Conn., and vicinity in the campaign of 1758, Samuel Chapman of Tolland, Captain, and again, in 1759, he was a member of Capt. John Durkee's Company. After Capt. Nathaniel's removal to Vermont, he took an active part in Revolutionary service in that State, as appears from certificates furnished from Vermont records by Adjutant-General Peck, dated May 6, 1893, which are as follows: "From a return of the men's names, with account of the number of horses that went from Norwich under Capt. Timothy Bush, 'Capt. Boardman,' and Lt. Burton, to assist the Strafford people in their retreat, it appears that 'Capt. Nath^l Boardman' served two days in Aug., 1777. Also from a return of men and horses employed by Capt. Abel Marsh in carrying flour from Connecticut River to Batten Kill, for the use of the northern army, by order of Jacob Bagley, 13th Oct., 1777, we find that Nathaniel Boardman served three days. And from a pay-roll of Capt. Elisha Burton's Company, who marched by order of Col. Peter Olcott to headquarters at Royalton in Aug. last, 1780, it appears that Nathaniel Boardman served two days. Also from a pay-roll of Capt. Timothy Bush's Company, under the direction of Col. Peter Olcott at the time the enemy came to Royalton, Oct. 16, 1780, we find that Sergeant Boardman served three days." In this last record of service, his son Nathaniel,

Jr., is found with his father in the list of names. Capt. Nathaniel died in Norwich Nov. 11, 1814, in his 83d year. Esther, his widow, lived to the advanced age of 96 years and nearly 9 months, dying Dec. 19, 1834.

205. Samuel⁵ Boardman (Moses,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of East Middletown, now Portland, Conn., was born there June 25, 1728. He married Oct. 25, 1752, HANNAH HUBBARD. She died July 25, 1763, aged 38, and he married afterwards ELIZABETH, whose family name has not been found. The births of his three oldest children are recorded in Middletown, and the baptisms of most of them in the records of the church in Portland. Both Samuel and Elizabeth, his wife, were members in full communion of that church. He died April 30, 1787, aged 58; his gravestone, that of his wife, and those of some of their children, including that of Samuel who was a soldier in the Revolution, and died in 1777, were in the old graveyard above the Portland quarries, the stones of which are now removed. The widow Elizabeth died in East Middlebury, Vt., March 29, 1811, in her 76th year.

The will of Samuel Boardman of Chatham, made April 5, proved June 4, 1787, gives one-third of his estate to his wife Elizabeth, to his eldest son Moses part of the homestead with the buildings on it, and one-third of land in Norfolk; the remainder to the other sons, Amos and Joel, who are to pay legacies to his daughters, Hannah, wife of William Rogers, Ruth, wife of John Pickett, Silence, Elizabeth, and Lucy Boardman. Kinsman,* Aaron Wilcox; and wife Elizabeth, executors. The amount of the inventory, which included 112 acres of land, was £649, 7s, 1d. His house stood on the east side of a road running north and south, with a barn on the west side of the street, Aaron Wilcox owning next north, and Charles Goodrich next south.

206. Moses⁵ Boardman (Moses,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Middletown, Conn., born Aug. 31, 1730, married Jan. 31, 1750-1, MARGARET ALLIN, born Feb. 8, 1725-6, daughter of Samuel Allin, an early settler of Middletown, and Margaret Wetmore, his wife. The births of two children are recorded in Middletown. They afterwards settled in Bristol, Conn., then part of Farmington, where they may have had other children. Moses Boardman and Margaret, his wife, appear in Bristol land records as late as Aug. 28, 1801. The death in Burlington (once part of Bristol) of Mrs. Margaret Board-

* Among valuable records of Middletown Boardmans, furnished by Mr. F. F. Starr, is the following, taken probably from Portland church records:

“Silence Boardman married Nov. 22, 1784, Bethuel Goodrich; children:
HOWELL, bapt. Oct. 16, 1785.
LUCY, bapt. July 15, 1786.”

The names in these records all point to Silence, daughter of Samuel Boardman, as the mother of this family, but the mention of her as Silence Boardman in her father's will of April 5, 1787, would seem to forbid this supposition, although no other Silence is found to whom the record might apply. No record of her birth or baptism has been discovered.

man, aged 88, is found in the Middlesex Gazette of April 14, 1814.

Moses was corporal in Capt. Eliphalet Whittlesey's Company in Gen. Lyman's Regiment, enlisting March 26, 1757, and discharged Nov. 15, 1757. He served also in the campaign of 1758 from June 10th to September 30th, and again in 1761, from April 7th to December 2d, in both these years a member of Capt. Timothy Hierlihy's Company, First Connecticut Regiment.

261. Luther⁵ Boardman (Jonathan,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Higganum Society, Haddam, Conn., born in that town Dec. 3, 1749, married, October, 1774, ESTHER SMITH, who died June 9, 1813, aged 57. He married 2d, in May, 1814, MISS SALLY ELIOT of Killingworth, born June 17, 1775, daughter of Jared Eliot of Killingworth and his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Lord of Lyme. Mrs. Boardman was a descendant in the fifth generation of Rev. John¹ Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, through Rev. Joseph² of Guilford, Rev. Jared³ of Killingworth, and Jared⁴ of the same town. Luther lived in a house near the Higganum landing, and was the owner of considerable property lying on both sides of the Connecticut River. Judge Adams says that he was, in 1804, owner of the ship Eliza Ann, in company with George and Nathaniel Griswold, the former then of Hartford. He was Representative from Haddam in the General Assembly in 1806 and 1807. He left no children, and disposed of most of his property by deed to various relatives some time before his death. His will, made Oct. 11, 1823, six years before he died, provides for his wife Sally, to whom he gives, in addition to her share of his estate, certain linen, china, silver, and furniture which were hers when married. To Elderkin Boardman of Leyden, N. Y., son of his brother Jonathan, 17 acres of land in Leyden. To Watson L. Boardman, son of his brother Daniel, then deceased, $\frac{13}{36}$ of his estate, to brother Samuel $\frac{6}{36}$, and to Elizabeth A. Clark, daughter of James Clark, Jr., of Haddam, $\frac{4}{36}$. Wife Sally and Jonathan Huntington,* Esq., Executors. Mr. Boardman's gravestone, a slab of white marble with considerable carving, is between those of his two wives in Higganum burying-ground. He died, according to the inscription, Sept. 14, 1829, in his 80th year. "For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favor of the Lord," is at the foot. "Mrs. Sarah, Relict of Luther Boardman died April 14, 1846, aged 70 years. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints," is the inscription on the stone of the widow. Mr. Boardman was admitted to the church in Haddam, Sept. 18, 1814; his wife Sally joined it May 29th of the same year from the Killingworth church.

262. Sarah^b Boardman (Jonathan,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), born in Haddam, April 4, 1752, married Nov. 6, 1771, THOMAS HUBBARD, JR., of Haddam, son of Thomas and Hannah (Snow) Hubbard. Mr. Hubbard died June 6, 1803, aged 53. Mrs. Sarah, his widow, died June 14, 1829, aged 77.

263. Jonathan⁵ Boardman (Jonathan,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Leyden, Lewis Co., N. Y., was born in Haddam, where he was baptized April 14, 1754, by Rev. Grindal Rawson, minister at Hadlyme. He married ABIGAIL CLARK,* and they lived for some time in Haddam. The wife of Jonathan

* Miss Brainard, who has studied Haddam families, finds she was Abigail Clark Smith, b. April 28, 1757, daughter of David and Lydia (Cogswell) Smith, who were married July 1, 1756.

Boardman, Jr., was admitted to full communion in the church there in July, 1787, and the baptisms of four of their children are in its records. April 4, 1796, "Jonathan Boardman and Abigail Clark Boardman his wife," sell their homestead of 15 acres, with dwelling-house, barn, fruit trees, etc., at Candlewood Hill, on the highway from Haddam to Durham. About a month later Jonathan sells to his brother Luther his right in his father's estate, and they probably about that time left the town. He finally settled in Leyden, N. Y., then spoken of as the Black River Country, whither many families from Haddam emigrated, as recorded by Dr. Field. Jonathan was a Revolutionary soldier, enlisting at Haddam in 1777, and serving till Dec. 27, 1780, as a private in Capt. Charles Pond's Company, Col. Return J. Meigs' Regiment. He served principally in New Jersey, and was in the skirmish at Elizabethtown and others, as appears from his application for a pension in 1820, when his wife Abigail was still living. His name is found in the roll of Capt. Pond's Company as of Canaan, Conn., where he may have gone for a time. The time of his death is not known; an Abigail Boardman, who died in Haddam in 1823, aged 66, was probably his wife. Their three oldest children were baptized in Haddam, August, 1787; the fourth, Jason, in 1788.

267. Daniel⁵ Boardman (Jonathan,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), born in Haddam, where he was baptized July, 1762.

Very little is known of him. He was of Haddam June 22, 1804, when he sold to his brother Luther his right in his father's property. He was deceased at the date (Oct. 11, 1823) of his brother Luther's wills, who left a bequest to Watson L. Boardman, "son of my brother Daniel, deceased." He may have been the Daniel Boardman who was in a list of taxpayers in Cornwall, Conn., 1815-16.

269. Samuel⁵ Boardman (Jonathan,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Litchfield (part now called Morris), in July, 1822, when he sold to his brother Luther all right to the property of his father, Jonathan Boardman, in Haddam, the deed acknowledged at Haddam April 30, 1829. He married in Haddam, Oct. 23, 1806, SALLY PARMALEE. He is thought to have been the second son named Samuel, of Jonathan Boardman, the first Samuel having probably died before his birth, perhaps in the Revolutionary War in which he is known to have served. This is supposed to be the Samuel Boardman of Middletown Upper Houses (Cromwell), who advertised in the Middlesex Gazette, Jan. 27, 1814, a runaway apprentice, and again appears in the Gazette of July 30, 1815, in this notice: "Died in this town John Edwin, son of Mr. Samuel and Mrs. Sarah Boardman, aged 8 months." His marriage in 1806, with a young child in 1815, indicates a younger man than the first Samuel, who would have been 50 at the date of this marriage.

305. Levi⁵ Boardman (Levi,⁴ Joseph,³ Samuel,² *Samuel*¹), of Wethersfield, Conn., was born there Jan. 30, 1765, and married Sept. 2, 1790, ELIZABETH WARNER, born in Wethersfield, Nov. 22, 1773. Mr. Levi Boardman lived on the old homestead in Broad street, where he died May 20, 1808, aged 43. In the year 1816, his widow sold the old place to her husband's brother, Joseph Simeon, and removed with her sons, Henry and Levi, to Sheffield, Mass. She lived with her son Levi there until her death, which took place Jan. 5, 1858, at the age of 84. Mrs. Boardman, who was familiarly known as "Aunt Betsy," was a woman of great force of character, a wise counsellor, a loving Christian. She was greatly loved by her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, as well as by all others who knew her. She was one of the best of nurses in cases of sickness, and often was sent for by her neighbors on such occasions. Her presence in the sick room seemed to have in it a charm of healing and cheerfulness.

309. Joseph Simeon⁵ Boardman (Levi,⁴ Joseph,³ Samuel,² Samuel¹), of Wethersfield, was born there May 3, 1780, and mar-

1803, LUCINDA

CANFIELD of

Salisbury, Conn.,

Joseph S Boardman

born 1786, the daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Harrison) Canfield, and granddaughter of Rev. Jared Harrison, the first minister of Chester, Conn., whose wife was a daughter of Capt. Abraham Waterhouse of Saybrook. Mr. Boardman was by trade a cordwainer. He removed early in 1804 from Wethersfield to Lenox, Mass., where he engaged quite successfully for two years in the business of tanning leather. Late in 1805 he returned to Wethersfield, where he spent the remainder of his life, residing in his ancestral home on Broad street. He died, Nov. 13, 1827, in his 48th year, by being shipwrecked in Long Island Sound during a severe storm when all on board were lost. He was at the time supercargo on the sloop Eliza, David Moulthrop, captain, going from Wethersfield to New York with a cargo of onions. His body was washed ashore at Huntington, L. I., and he was buried in the cemetery at Wethersfield. His widow, Mrs. Lucinda (Canfield) Boardman, married, Sept. 19, 1832, Ezra L'Hommiedieu of Chester, Conn., and died there March 6, 1850, aged 64.

Joseph Simeon Boardman was a man of remarkably earnest Christian character and experience, which cannot be better shown than by some selections taken from his note book and private papers. He writes :

"I experienced religion at ten minutes past 6 o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, the 8th of June, 1816, and the next day, which was the Sabbath, was a happy day indeed to me." "Mrs. Boardman experienced religion on Wednesday the 12th of June, 1816, a few minutes before eight o'clock in the morning, after a weeks conviction in which her distress of mind was great." "Aug. 4, 1816; This day Mrs. Boardman and myself publicly gave ourselves to God, and made a profession of the Christian religion, and I hope and trust we shall ever find satisfaction in what we have done. Religion only is capable of giving that happiness which will remain when every earthly comfort fails." "This day, Sept. 29, 1816, we made a public dedication of our children to God in baptism, William, Hannah, and Joseph."

The following extracts are taken from the Articles of the Wethersfield Religious Society of Young Men, dated Jan. 1, 1817, and signed by fifteen of them. They are in Mr. Boardman's handwriting, and he was evidently one of their leading spirits :

"To meet once in two weeks or oftener, if desired, at which meetings all the members shall preside alternately agreeable to the order of their names.

"Those to be invited to become members who give evidence of true Christian piety ; members to be expected to attend all the meetings except when detained therefrom by indispensable duties.

"No one shall report abroad any of the transactions of the Society to the prejudice of any of its members, nor shall any illiberal remark be made respecting the performance of any.

"No one shall refuse to take an active part in the Society when called upon, unless he gives a satisfactory reason.

"Are any of the members at any time detained from meeting, they shall spend the evening or a part of it in secret devotion, that although separate in person, our prayers may unitedly ascend, etc.

"It is recommended to all the members that they improve their time in going to or from meeting in serious and pious conversation, such as becomes the Gospel of Christ.

Mr. Boardman lived but eleven years after his public profession of religion, but they were years of steadfast Christian service. Less than two years before his death, he drew up the following resolutions which are found in his private memorandum book, and are dated Jan. 1, 1826 :

“ When I look back on the precipice where I once stood, and into the pit from whence I have a hope to have been taken, how can I see my children and others standing on the same verge, and not be alarmed for them. They know not their danger, but if I am a child of God, I must know where I once stood, and where they now stand. O may I pray for them, for they will not pray for themselves. They have no love to God, they have no faith in Christ as their Redeemer, mediator, intercessor, or advocate with God the Father. They have no union to Christ, and of course can have no communion with him.

“ After some considerations on the above, I am induced to form some resolutions as a system or rule to regulate some part of my future time and conduct.

“ Resolution 1st: That from this time forward I will pray for my children at least once, or as many more times as convenient, on each future day of my life ; that God would send the spirit of all truth to convince them, etc.

“ Resolution 2nd: That my prayers shall ascend for the prosperity of Zion in this place, and that God would give success to a preached Gospel, bless our Pastor, etc.

“ Resolution 3rd: That I will pray for every family, or the residents of each house in this Society, separately, and to enable me more fully to facilitate this my resolution, I will write down all the houses, or the heads of each family.

“ Resolution 4th: That I will pray for such as are God’s children, that he will build them up in his most holy faith, etc.

“ Resolution 5th: That I will pray for such as are false professors, that God would undeceive them, and take away their refuges of lies, etc.

“ Resolution 6th: That I will pray for such as are in a state of nature, that God would show them by the light of his word that they are in a lost state, etc.

“ Resolution 7th: That my prayers shall not be confined to myself, to my children, to this place, or to this small part of the globe, but that they shall extend as far as Christ’s kingdom can or ever will extend, to heathen nations, and to the earth’s remotest bound.

“ Resolution 8th: That I firmly believe in the doctrine of grace, and that there are many in this place and throughout the world who are yet to become heirs of salvation, who were given to Christ in the counsels of eternity, in the covenant of Redemption, who now despise the mercy of our God, and trample on a Saviour's blood, and by the grace of God assisting me, may I be enabled to pray that I may be a co-worker with Jesus to advance his spiritual cause and kingdom in the world, and at last to hear those transporting words from my Redeemer and Judge, saying unto me, 'Come thou blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.'

"And now, thou God of all grace, thou triune Deity, enable me thine unworthy servant, who am but of yesterday, and know comparatively nothing, by the aid of thy grace and the influence of thy Spirit to put the above resolutions into effect.

"JOSEPH S. BOARDMAN"

Here follows a list of all the heads of families in Wethersfield, containing 183 names. As each one had been prayed for in turn, a cross had been put against the name, and it thus appears that at the time of Mr. Boardman's death he had made this special intercession for 135 of the families of his town.

Mr. Boardman's papers show him to have been very careful and accurate in his business habits. He was accustomed to set down in writing notes of all events of importance that concerned him, and he left in his ledger a full account of his line of descent from Samuel the first, at Ipswich, to his own family. His library consisted of fifteen books, all of which he had numbered, and the Bible was number 1.

362. Major Daniel⁵ Boardman (Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of New Milford, Conn., and New York city, was born in New Milford March 4, 1757. He prepared for college under the instruction of his uncle, Rev. Daniel Farrand of Canaan, graduated at Yale, 1781, and took the degree of A.M. in 1784. He engaged in mercantile business in New Milford, part of the time in company with his brother Elijah, till 1795, when he removed to New York city, and became a partner with Henry Hunt in the wholesale dry goods business. While in New Milford he was chosen captain of a military company there, and afterwards major of the regiment to which it belonged. He represented his native town in the General Assembly in 1790 and 1792. After his removal to New York, he became extensively interested in new lands, especially in the Southwestern States. He possessed also considerable real estate in New York city, where he died Nov. 3, 1833, in his 77th year. He was a large man, of strong frame and dignified appearance, and is said to have resembled his grandfather, Rev. Daniel Boardman. One of his grandsons, living in New York, Rev. William S. Boardman, possesses a superb full-length portrait of him by Earl. Major Daniel married Nov. 4, 1797, Miss HETTY MORE of New York.

* He was possibly the Sherman Boardman in Capt. Flood's Company from Alstead, N. H., Col. Benj. Bellows' Regiment, who served from Sept. 21 to Oct. 16, 1777, under Gen. Gates at Saratoga.

364. Hon. Elijah⁵ Boardman (Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of New Milford, born there March 7, 1760, married Sept. 25, 1792, MARY ANNA WHITING, daughter of Dr. William Whiting, a physician of Great Barrington, Mass., and his wife, Anna Mason, daughter of Jeremiah Mason of Franklin, Conn. Mr. Boardman was educated in New Milford under the tuition of Rev. Nathaniel Taylor. In 1776, at the age of sixteen, with the consent of his father, he enlisted for a year in Col. Charles Webb's regiment, Capt. Isaac Bostwick's company, which served about Boston and New York city. He was also with the militia on the Hudson River in the fall of 1777. After some training as a clerk with a prominent house in New Haven, he commenced business as a merchant in New Milford in 1781. In 1795 Mr. Boardman became a member of the Connecticut Land Company, and one of the purchasers of the Connecticut Western Reserve, now forming the northern part of the State of Ohio. His interest there comprised a large part of two townships, one of which was named after him, Boardman. Here he afterwards spent a considerable portion of each year, attending to his concerns, and finally died there Aug. 18, 1823. He possessed a large amount of property, standing second on the tax list of New Milford at the time of his death.

Mr. Boardman, about 1800, became quite prominent as a politician. He was elected six times a member of the lower house of the Connecticut Legislature, and was afterwards for several years State senator. In May, 1821, he was chosen to the Senate of the United States, of which he was a member at the time of his death. His widow survived him for many years, and died June 24, 1848, at the age of 80. She was a woman of remarkably lovely Christian character, as is shown in her memoir written by her son-in-law, Rev. J. F. Schroeder, D.D.

365. Esther⁵ Boardman (Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), born in New Milford, Jan. 29, 1762; married February 5, 1792, JONATHAN BURRALL, ESQ., of Canaan. Mr. Burrall was a graduate of Yale in 1781. He was first a merchant, and afterwards an iron manufacturer in Canaan, and frequently represented the town in the General Assembly. He died February, 1805, at the age of 46, of consumption. His widow married for her second husband MATTHEW MARVIN, ESQ., of Wilton, Conn. He was a successful merchant, and a man of much influence in the community in which he lived, frequently representing Wilton in the State Legislature. He died in June, 1842, aged 78. Mrs. Marvin had by her first husband one son, who died in infancy. By both her marriages she had stepchildren, and discharged her duties as a mother to them, so as to win their love, and secure for herself in her widowed old age their affectionate regard and filial attention. She lived to an advanced age, and died after 1850.

366. Hon. Homer⁵ Boardman (Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of New Milford, born there Oct. 10, 1764, married Nov. 14, 1787, AMARYLLIS WARNER, daughter of Capt. Elizur Warner of the United States Army. She died Sept. 26, 1839, aged 75. Hon. Homer Boardman died May 27, 1851, aged 86. The following account of him is taken from the History of New Milford: "He was all his life a farmer on the homestead at Boardman's Bridge. He possessed a remarkably noble personal figure, and was one of the finest appearing men of whom New Milford could ever boast. He possessed intellectual qualities of unusual symmetry and perfectness, but never sought political distinction nor official position. He was greatly respected, and honored with all the high positions of trust and office of his native town, being elected as Representative and State Senator, and an Elector of President and Vice-President of the United States in 1824." President Porter of Yale said of him, "He was one of the noblest specimens of manhood I have ever known." His beauty of person has been, it is said, inherited in large measure by many of his descendants.

368. Judge David Sherman⁵ Boardman (Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of New Milford, born Dec. 8, 1768; married May 18, 1806, CHARLOTTE TAYLOR, born March 20, 1782, daughter of Nathaniel Taylor, Esq., and granddaughter of Rev. Daniel Boardman's successor in the ministry at New Milford. He graduated at Yale College in 1793, studied law, was admitted to the Bar, and opened an office in his native town. He practiced for thirty-six years in Litchfield and Fairfield counties, and was afterwards appointed Chief Judge of the County Court for Litchfield County. He was for sixteen years Judge of Probate for the district of New Milford, Justice of the Peace for thirty-two years, and eight times chosen Representative to the General Assembly. In 1808 he was elected member of the Connecticut Society of Arts and Sciences, and was vice-president of the Connecticut Historical Society from its first establishment. The late President Porter of Yale College, who married a relative both of Judge Boardman and his wife, wrote a sketch of his life and character for the History of New Milford, from which the following is quoted: "It is impossible within the limits prescribed for this sketch, to give any adequate picture or impression of the personal excellence and beneficent influence of this truly noble, modest, and lovely man. It was the privilege of the writer to know him most intimately for the seven years of his own pastorate in New Milford, and subsequently to see him not infrequently till his death, and to observe his demeanor in a great variety of interesting scenes, and events of joy and sorrow, of public and private interest, when jubilant with irrepressible humor, or convulsed with personal or sympathetic grief. He knew him in the full possession of his sagacious intellect, and when groping in the shadow land, in which were blended the pictures of the past, the realities of the present, and the anticipations of the future life, and in all of them he was the same true-hearted, loving, and devout soul, doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with God. . . . His presence was always a benediction, his life was a blessing, and his memory a perpetual inspiration to more than two generations."

In his earlier married life, Judge Boardman was severely afflicted in the deaths of three children, of dysentery, within the short space of six weeks; when he had reached the age of 80, he lost the eldest of his two surviving sons, a man then in the prime of life, whose only son, a gallant soldier in the war of the Rebellion, lost his life in battle some months before the death of his venerable grandfather. Judge Boardman lived to the advanced age of 96, and died Dec. 2, 1864. His wife died July 22, 1846, aged 64.

380. Leonard⁵ Boardman (Elisha,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Wethersfield, born there Feb. 1, 1746, married Dec. 14, 1769, EXPERIENCE PELTON. His home was the farm at the south end of Wolcott Hill Road, which was bought by his grandmother, the widow of Israel Boardman. He died of a "chronic disorder," Nov. 9, 1807. He had no children and left by will all his property to his widow. She married Feb. 4, 1810, Jesse Dix, and died in 1830. By her will, dated Jan. 5, 1821, Mrs. Dix left a bequest of $100 to Leonard Boardman Talcott, son of Ansel Talcott, on account of his name. The remainder of her property she gave to Mrs. Emily, wife of Mr. Ansel Talcott. Mrs. Talcott, whose maiden name was Robbins, is still living (1895), in West Hartford, having some time since passed her 100th birthday. Leonard Boardman served as a soldier at various times during the Revolutionary War. He was a member of Capt. Chester Welles's Company in Brigadier-General Erastus Wolcott's Brigade, at Peekskill, March to June, 1777; of Capt. Elijah Wright's company, Col. Eno's Regiment, on the Hudson, for three months in 1778; also in Col. Canfield's Militia Regiment at West Point in 1781.

381. Ozias⁵ Boardman (Elisha,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Canaan, Conn., was born in Wethersfield, Apr. 16, 1749. He settled in Canaan, Litchfield County, Conn., where he married, Apr. 23, 1772, LYDIA HINSDALE. He died of small pox, Apr. 11, 1785, at the age of 36, in a pest house which was in sight of his home.* He had a short time before his death bought of his brother-in-law, Joseph (Moses?) Hinsdale, for $100, a right of land in Morristown, Vt. Mr. Hinsdale, who was a surveyor, having surveyed the northern part of Vermont, had selected land of excellent quality. The wife, Lydia, born in 1750, was now left, at the age of 35, a widow with four sons, besides one who was born 57 days after his father's death, and who lived but nineteen days. Her brother, Mr. Hinsdale, assisted her, and aided her in educating her boys, especially Elisha, the oldest. In the spring of 1793, the second son, Ozias, then nineteen years old, went up alone to the land in Morristown. Only three families had wintered there. He hired out to one Heard, about four miles away, but during the summer went on the land, and girdled the large trees. He returned to Canaan in November, and the next spring, with his brother William, then less than 19, returned to Morristown, and built a shanty on the land. In the spring of 1795, Elisha, with his mother and Alfred, the youngest brother, moved to Morristown. After the three older brothers were married, they gave their mother her choice with which of them she would live. She said, Elisha had too much public business, and could not attend well to his home affairs; William was a good son, but was careless, and would leave the bars down, exposing the crops; but Ozias always put up the bars, and so she decided to live with him. She was strictly Puritan in her habits; regarding the evening and the morning as the first day, she would always leave off working at sundown on Saturday, and resumed it at sundown on Sunday. She died Apr. 7, 1725, at the age of 75, at the house of her son Ozias in Morristown. She lies buried with her four sons in the old cemetery in that town.

385. Mary⁵ Boardman (Israel,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹) was born in Stamford, Conn., Feb. 1, 1753. It was probably after accompanying her father and family on one of his voyages to England, that she remained abroad, and there married and passed the rest of her life. She lived in Chelsea, on the Thames, now part of the west end of the city of London. Mary, or Polly, as she was called by her family, was twice married; first to Mr. COMYN (or Cummings), and second to Mr. JACOB. In 1790, in her 38th year, she was a widow, struggling to educate her two sons (by her first husband), of whom she writes to her brother, "I thank God he has enabled me to give them a tolerable education; they are very dutiful, and promise me that when they are able, I shall come and see you all; one is a clerk to a gentleman and the other is articulated to a lawyer." This letter was dated June 11, 1790, at Don Saltero's Coffee House, Chelsea, a very famous place in its day, and, till its removal in 1864, one of the curiosities of old London. It was by keeping this coffee house that Mrs. Polly Boardman (Comyn) Jacob was then trying to support and educate her children.

Don Saltero's Coffee House took its name from one Salter, who was originally in the employment of Sir Hans Sloane, who, by leaving to the English nation, at his death in 1753, his remarkable collection of books, manuscripts, objects in natural history, etc., became the founder of the British Museum. Salter established himself as a barber in 1695 in a house in Cheyne Walk, which stood on the site of the present No. 18. He had received from Sir Hans many curiosities for which there was no room in his house, some of them duplicates of curiosities of real value, and others of little worth, to which he had added some of his own invention. These were hung in great numbers on the walls and ceiling. He took in all the papers, and had musical instruments lying about, all to amuse his customers while awaiting their turn. His museum, barber's shop, reading-room, and coffee house, became quite the vogue, and was a favorite lounging place for men of quality. Some of his customers, who had been in service in Spain, dubbed him in fun, Don Saltero, which title he carried to his death. Don Saltero's is spoken of in the Tattler, in a description of a voyage to Chelsea. Richard Cromwell used often to come and sit there. Steele and Addison and their friends were frequent visitors to the coffee house, "where the Literati sit in council," and here once came, about 1724 or 5, as he tells in his autobiography, Dr. Franklin, then working as a printer in London. It became, later, a tavern, but its old sign, "Don Saltero's, 1695," in gold letters on a green board, remained swinging between beams in front, till the house was demolished in 1864.

As late as 1807, at the time of the auction sale, when the collection was dispersed, Charles Lamb speaks of it in a letter, saying he had offered to him by a fellow clerk in the India House all the ornaments of Don Saltero's smoking-room. It had not, therefore, lost all traces of its former character in 1790, when the daughter of Capt. Israel Boardman was its mistress. It is to be feared, however, that much of its popularity was by that time a thing of the past, for she complains of the difficulty she has in making her living there. Nothing more is known of her history since the letter here referred to. Chelsea forms now a fashionable quarter of the city of London, and Cheyne Walk (pronounced Chā-ny) is one of its pleasantest streets. Its houses, built only on one side, front the Thames, and the embankment here bordering it, which is laid out in gardens with flowers, shrubbery, and statues, and furnished with seats. It is in these gardens that Carlyle's statue is placed, for he lived in Cheyne Row, a street running at right angles to the river, and to Cheyne Walk. A picture of Don Saltero's Coffee House is to be found in the Century Magazine for November, 1886, in connection with an article on "Old Chelsea," by Dr. B. E. Martin, from which much of the above information is taken.

388. William⁵ Boardman (Israel,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Hartford, Conn., was born in Stamford, Conn., March 2, 1763. When he was quite young, his father, Capt. Israel Boardman, removed with his family to Pensacola, Florida, where he bought a plantation. The father died not long after his settlement there, and his widow and children soon returned to New England, making their home afterwards in Wethersfield and Hartford. William learned the trade of a mason, and was in after life a master mason. He assisted in the erection of some important buildings of his day in Hartford, such as the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, the old Courant Building, corner of Main and Pratt streets, and the Sigourney Mansion on Asylum Hill, afterwards the home of Hon. Julius Catlin. When he was sixteen years old, May 16, 1781, he entered the Revolutionary Army, and served six months in Capt. Samuel Granger's Company of Gen. David Waterbury's Brigade, which was ordered to defend the seacoast of Connecticut from Horseneck to New Haven, at that time threatened by the British. Mr. Boardman married, Mch. 27, 1785, JENNET CATLIN,* born Aug. 26, 1765, the youngest child

* THOMAS¹ CATLIN, born in England 1612, was of Hartford, Conn., about 1640, where he bought the house and lot of Jeremiah Adams, and afterwards that of Richard Lyman, which became his homestead,† situated on the south side of the present Buckingham street, about midway from Main to Washington street. He owned also many other pieces of land in Hartford, including grants from the town. He was chosen chimney viewer in 1647, '48, '53; surveyor, 1655; townsman, 1659; but his principal office was the important one of constable, to which he was elected in 1662, and each year afterwards until 1674, holding it thus for 13 years in succession. The position of constable was one of the most trustworthy in the early history of the colony. Prof. Johnston says of it in his History of Connecticut: "In the little town republics the ancient and honorable office of Constable was the connecting link between commonwealth and town. The constable published the commonwealth laws to his town, kept the 'publike peace' of the town and commonwealth, levied the town's share of the commonwealth taxation and went from 'house to howse' to notify the freemen of meetings of the General Court, and of the time and place of election of deputies thereto. 'The parish,' says Selden, 'makes the constable, and when the constable is made, he governs the parish.' He might even become the instrument of a legal revolution, in case the Governor and Magistrates refused to call the regular meetings of the General Court, or, on petition of the freemen, a special meeting. In that case, the constitution provided that the freemen were to instruct the constables to order elections of deputies, who were to constitute a General Court themselves, excluding the Governor and Magistrates." The election of a constable was the first step taken in the organization of a new town.

The name of Thomas Catlin's wife, brought with him probably from England, was MARY, by whom he had two daughters named Mary, the second born May 6, 1649, and a son John, born, as is supposed, in England. His wife died before 1675, and he married 2d, MARY, widow of Edward Elmore of Windsor, who had been killed by the Indians in King Philip's War in 1675. Mr. Thomas Catlin died in 1690, at the age of 78. He disposed of his property by deed of gift to his son John, dated Jan. 29, 1689-90, with a bequest to his granddaughter, Mary Burnam. The name, till the middle of the last century, or later, was commonly written Catling.

JOHN² CATLIN, born probably in England, was the owner of a large amount of land in Hartford, in company with his father, from whom he inherited the homestead in which he lived. He married July 27, 1665, MARY MARSHALL. She died Oct. 20, 1716. He died, probably, not long after. He was chimney viewer, 1669, townsman, 1695, '99, 1708. Their children were:

LIEUT. SAMUEL³ CATLIN of Hartford, born Nov. 4, 1672, married, Jan. 5, 1702-3, ELIZABETH NORTON of Farmington, daughter of John Norton and Ruth Moore, his wife, daughter of Dea. Isaac Moore. She died, Aug. 24, 1724, and Lieut. Catlin married, as 2d wife, May 13, 1725, SARAH NICHOLS, widow of William Webster and daughter of Cyprian Nichols, who survived him, and died at Wintonbury, now Bloomfield, Dec. 12, 1762, aged 85. Samuel Catlin was appointed Lieutenant of the South Side Company in Hartford by the General Court in Oct., 1725. He was townsman, 1718, 1732, 1738. Apr. 1, 1723, he was appointed on a committee with John Seymour and William Baker, for viewing, in conjunction with a committee from Windsor, the lands in Western Connecticut, now Litchfield County, with a view to settlement. He owned large rights of lands in that region on which four of his six sons afterwards settled. He built, about 1700, a house on land east of Rocky Hill, on the road to Farmington, which had been bought by his grandfather, Thomas Catlin. This was his own home, and that of his son Ebenezer, while his brother Benjamin lived in the old homestead in town, till his removal to Harwinton in 1738. The account book of Samuel Catlin, with entries from 1700 to 1725, is in the possession of the compiler. "Lieut. Samuel Catlin, the aged," was buried, Dec. 2, 1760, in the Center Church Yard.

friend through life, and who was eminently fitted to judge of her character, wrote of her, years after her death: "Your mother to my childish intelligence was an ideal saint. Her benevolent disposition and capacity for helping others were wonderful. How many times have I known of her going to the sick neighbor with medicine in her hand, or to relieve some one in trouble. To my young as well as mid-life ideas, she was one of the most remarkable characters and useful women I have ever known. I wonder if they (her grandchildren) suppose her to be the superior woman she was. The best of my young reading was borrowed from her — the Pilgrim's Progress, Vicar of Wakefield, and a few others." Mrs. Boardman's day was one when the conditions of life were far more akin to those of our earlier New England ancestors than to our own. Doctors were few and were far to seek in the country neighborhood where she had her home. Mrs. Boardman's skill in cases of illness made her the first to be called on when sickness threatened to become critical. She was a woman also of great presence of mind, as was shown in an instance remembered of her. One of her neighbors, in a fit of despondency, had attempted to take his life by cutting his throat. Mrs. Boardman, on hearing the news, lost no time in hurrying to the spot; she closed the wound, holding it so as to prevent the loss of blood till a doctor could be brought, and thus saved the man's life. One of the most frequent demands upon her in those days of large families, was for help at the birth of children; the skill which she acquired by her many experiences of this kind, led her afterwards, when she had become a widow, with children still young dependent upon her, gradually to adopt the practice of a midwife, in which she became in large request. She kept an accurate record of the children whose birth she attended, and the last year of her life she made a computation of the whole number, which amounted to 1,024 between the years 1815 and 1849, the yearly record being naturally largest during the middle of that period. After her husband's death, Mrs. Boardman, who felt strongly the importance of having her family where they could share in the advantages of the city, sold her homestead with most of her land, and removed to the center of the town, where she, a short time later, built a house, and passed the remainder of her long and useful life. She continued in full possession of all her faculties to the last, and died of old age, Dec. 14, 1849, in her 85th year. She was buried by the side of her daughter, Mrs. Goldthwaite, in the North Burying Ground.

399. Capt. George⁵ Boardman (Charles,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Wethersfield, Conn., and Schenectady, N. Y., was born in Wethersfield Nov. 22, 1762. He married Nov. 27, 1788, MARY HANMER, born Dec. 15, 1764, daughter of Francis and Rhoda (Boardman) Hanmer, and granddaughter of Cornet Joseph Boardman. Capt. George, like his father, and his two brothers who were lost at sea, was a mariner, being engaged in foreign trade. Records are lacking as to all the vessels which he commanded; he is known to have been master of the sloop Ann, 1801, sailing to St. Vincent, of the sloop Nancy and Susan, to St. Bartholomew in 1803,* and of the sloop Lucy in 1808. His children were all born in Wethersfield; he afterwards removed to Schenectady, N. Y., and died July 11, 1757, at the advanced age of 95 years. His wife died Feb. 6, 1829, in her 65th year.

An interesting picture of Capt. George, taken at the age of 94, and presented in a letter in his own handwriting "to my dear grandson, William P. Boardman," is in possession of the latter. All his five children who survived early childhood, lived like their father to a great age. One who remembers well his four daughters, writes of them: "Those four sisters were certainly as remarkable a group of sisters as I ever met, especially for their wonderful vitality and vigor, both mentally and physically, to extreme old age. But few young women have as keen interest in the literature of the day as Mrs. Hotchkiss, Mrs. Douglas, and Mrs. Eaton kept to the last of their lives."

400. Hannah⁵ Boardman (Charles,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Wethersfield July 24, 1765, married there, Nov. 22, 1786, JESSE CHURCHILL, JR., born March 18, 1757, son of Dea. Jesse and Jerusha (Gaylord) Churchill, and grandson of Ensign Samuel Churchill and Martha his wife, daughter of Daniel² Bordman. Dea. Jesse married for his 2d wife the widow Sarah (Boardman) Cady, daughter of Sergt. Nathaniel³ Bordman of Rocky Hill.

Jesse Churchill, Jr., became a Congregational minister and settled in Hubbardton, Vt. He removed from there about 1808 to Winfield, Herkimer Co., N. Y., where he passed the rest of his life. In the war of 1812 he served as chaplain in the army. Mrs. Churchill died in Hubbardton, Dec. 10, 1804, leaving a large family of young children, and Mr. Churchill married 2d, Aug. 7, 1807, Olive Tilden, born 1771, daughter of John Tilden, and aunt of Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, of Presidential celebrity. By this marriage there was born one child, Lucena Ann, Jan. 31, 1809, who married Sept. 10, 1834, Charles W. Hull of New Lebanon, N. Y. Their son, Mr. James W. Hull, is a prominent citizen of Pittsfield, Mass., president of the Berkshire Insurance Company. All the children of Rev. Jesse and Hannah were born in Hubbardton, Vt., except the eldest, who was born in Glastonbury, Conn.

402. John⁵ Boardman (Charles,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Albany, N. Y., born in Wethersfield Nov. 17, 1770, married there, Jan. 29, 1794, ABIGAIL GOODRICH of Wethersfield. He was apprenticed to a trade at 17, went the next year to Georgia, where he worked for two or three years, spent a winter in North Carolina when he was 21, and the next year, 1792, went to Albany, where he passed his life, and became a prominent citizen. He was elder in the First church there from 1805 to 1815, when the Second Presbyterian church was founded, in which he became ruling elder, Rev. William B. Sprague, D.D., being its pastor. He died, Aug. 19, 1853, at the age of 83. At his funeral on Sunday afternoon, August 21, Dr. Sprague preached a sermon on the text, "The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness," in which he paid a warm tribute to Mr. Boardman as a man and as a Christian. This sermon, as afterwards printed, had the following dedication: "To my Classmate and Friend, the Rev. George S. Boardman, this tribute to his father's precious memory is affectionately inscribed." Mr. Boardman carried on a large business in Albany as a builder.

Mrs. Smith was the mother of eleven children, and died Aug. 3, 1820, at the age of 48. Mr. Smith married, Dec. 19, 1821, Betsey Kingsbury of Hartford, by whom he had two children, both named Andrew Kingsbury, of whom the first died young. He married, after the death of his second wife, Lucy Morris, April 12, 1827, by whom he had two more children, Morris W. Smith, born 1827, and J. Trumbull Smith, born 1829. Dea. Norman Smith died in Hartford, May 20, 1860, aged 88. He was a most excellent Christian man, a deacon for many years in Dr. Bushnell's church in Hartford, and a prominent citizen. His large family of fourteen children, who lived to mature years, have been worthy successors of their father's name and character.

404. Dea. Timothy⁵ Boardman (Timothy,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of West Rutland, Vt., was born in Middletown, Jan. 20, 1754. He married Sept. 28, 1783, MARY WARD, daughter of Capt. Samuel Ward of Middletown. He was just twenty-one at the breaking out of the Revolution, and joined the army which invested Boston in 1775-1776. He was also called out to go with his regiment to Saratoga to oppose Burgoyne. He had learned from his father the carpenter's and cabinetmaker's trade, and worked with him in house building and in the finishing of vessels, many of which were built in Middletown. He enlisted on board the "State Man of War," Oliver Cromwell, a privateer built at Saybrook. In the list of names of those who enlisted on the same vessel, Jan. 26, 1777, is found that of Charles Bordman, "Marine," his cousin, son of his uncle, Capt. Charles Bordman of Wethersfield, then not quite 16 years old. Timothy, who was enrolled as "Carpenter Yoman," remained on the Oliver Cromwell for a considerable time, and April 11, 1778, he began keeping a Log-Book of his voyage, which has been preserved, and was a few years ago published, together with a sketch of its author, by his grandson, Dr. S. W. Boardman, now president of Maryville College, Maryville, Tenn. Of this Log-Book, Judge Adams remarks, that it records "what is probably the most accurate account ever given of the engagement between the Oliver Cromwell and the British man-of-war, Admiral Keppel, near St. Christopher, West Indies, which resulted in the capture of the latter." After various trying experiences in connection with later voyages to the Southern coast and the West Indies, in the course of which he was more than once captured by the British, suffered from malarial sickness, etc., he returned about 1780 to New England. Vermont was being then opened to emigration, and thither he made his way in 1781. In 1782 he bought a farm of 100 acres of heavily timbered land in Rutland, where he made a clearing, and, in 1783, erected a house, after which he returned to Middletown, married, and brought back his wife. Though obliged to contend with many difficulties incident to settlement in a new country, he succeeded by industry and frugality in securing a good home and a comfortable independence. He was made town clerk of Rutland and county surveyor, captain of the militia, clerk of the Congregational Church, and in time its deacon. He gave his children a good education for the time; several of them became officers in the church, and four of his grandsons entered the Christian ministry. Dea. Boardman's wife, "undoubtedly his equal in every respect, to whom much of his prosperity, usefulness, and good repute, as well as that of his family, was due," after a married life of fifty-three years and three months, died December, 1836. Her husband did not long survive her, and died in 1838, while on a visit to his children in Middlebury, Vt.

407. Oliver⁵ Boardman (Timothy,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Litchfield and Hartford, Conn., born in Middletown, Aug. 2, 1758, married May 1, 1781, SARAH DANFORTH, born Feb. 27, 1761, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Jacobs) Danforth. They went from Middletown immediately after marriage, and settled first in Litchfield, but after about 14 years removed to Hartford in August, 1795. Mr. Boardman's property in Litchfield, as described by himself in advertising it for sale, May 22, 1789, was an acre of land, with two-story house, well built, a tan-house, with shop in one end for currying leather, a bark-mill, and eight vats with a good supply of water. He says of it, "A workman at tanning and currying, especially, will find a large circuit of business in that way, as he will find none but himself that curries in that town, and for miles distant." This house, built in 1787, is still in good preservation. Litchfield was a place of much culture, the celebrated Law School being then located there, and it was in most respects a desirable residence, but there was much wine and toddy drunk there before the days when Dr. Beecher came to be pastor of the church, and it was to free his family from this influence that Mr. Boardman decided to leave his pleasant home and settle in Hartford. He died July 28, 1826, and his widow died Dec. 28, 1827. When he was just eighteen, Oliver Boardman joined the Revolutionary

Army, served on Long Island and at New York in the summer of 1776, and the next year was in the expedition against Burgoyne. During the latter period he kept a journal, which is now in the possession of the Connecticut Historical Society, to whom it was presented by his son, Thomas D. It contains an entry for each of his fifty-six days of service, September 2d to October 27th, carefully written with ink in a clear and well-formed hand, and is an interesting and valuable contribution to revolutionary records. As it is the intention of the society to publish this journal, only brief extracts are given from it here. It begins :

“Middletown Sept 2, 1777, Set out on a March in Capt. Blague's Company of Militia to Join General Arnold's Division in the Northern Army.

“We marched away about Noon. I Bought a dinner at the New-fields, where we made a little halt, for 1/.

“We marched forward to Great Swamp. I got Supper Lodging & Breakfast for 1/6.

“3rd, March'd Great Swamp to Farmington. Bought a Dinner for 1/.1.”

So the journey continued through “West Britton” (now Burlington), Litchfield, Cornwall, Canaan, Sheffield, Noble-town (now Hillsdale, N. Y.), Center Hook Mills, Greenbush, Albany, to Beeman's Heights, where they joined Gen. Arnold and pitched their tents. He had various interesting experiences, which he each day sets down, recording also the results of the different engagements. He was in the two battles of Stillwater, and was in his place in the American ranks as they stood on the right and left while Burgoyne's army passed between, in token of surrender, concerning which he says :

“It was a glorious sight to see the haughty Brittons march out & Surrender their arms to an Army which but a little before they despis'd & called poltroons; they however before the Surrender were convinced of their error, having in two engagements previous seen the greatest bravery that was ever displayed; . . . they acknowledge the Spirit and bravery of our officers & men & do not hesitate to say that the idea held up to them of the Americans was false.”

October 20th, he writes: "I was one of Fifty that was call'd out of the Reg^{nt} to Guard 128 Prisoners of War to Hartford." He makes an entry on each day of the journey back, which followed nearly the same route as that by which they came. Sunday, October 26th, they marched from Simsbury to Hartford, and delivered 123 prisoners to the sheriff — "five of them Left us on the March."

"Monday 27. This afternoon I marched Home."

At the close of the journal he added, probably later in life, some account of his experience the previous year in the army, when he was in Capt. Matthew Talcott's Regiment at New York and on Long Island. He was present at the battle of Long Island, and in the retreat to New York, where he was taken sick and discharged to recover his health. In the year 1780, in May, he was called out again for six months to join the army on the North River.

Mary⁵ Boardman (Timothy,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Middletown, April 29, 1762, married Jan. 16, 1790, EBENEZER FROTHINGHAM, born Jan. 14, 1758, son of Ebenezer and Deborah (Paine) Frothingham. Mr. Frothingham had been a teacher in Middletown, where he was much respected. They removed to Marietta, Ohio, where she died the next spring, May 25, 1790, and her husband, in October of the same year, was killed while in the wilderness with Gen. Harmar in Ohio, in whose command he held the office of Lieutenant.

411. Dea. Joseph⁵ Boardman (Timothy,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Middletown, Conn., was born there Oct. 13, 1767. He married Sept. 26, 1798, ANNA MEIGS, daughter of Capt. Giles Meigs of Middletown (son of Return and Elizabeth (Hamlin) Meigs), another of whose daughters, Mehitabel, was the wife of Rev. Dr. Noah Porter of Farmington, and mother of President Porter of Yale College. Capt. Giles Meigs was brother of the distinguished Revolutionary officer, Col. Return Jonathan Meigs. Another brother, Josiah, was Commissioner in the General Land Office, and still another, John, was a Major in the Revolutionary Army, and had charge afterwards of the Cherokee Agency. Mr. Boardman was chosen deacon of the Congregational Church in Middletown, May 16, 1812. He died Sept. 26, 1846, aged 79. Mrs. Boardman died Dec. 12, 1826, aged 47.

JOSEPH WASHBURN, who became pastor of the church in Farmington, Conn., where he was ordained May 7, 1795. President Porter, in his Historical Discourse on the 100th anniversary of the erection of Farmington Church, says of him: "Mr. Washburn came among the people, a messenger of peace and blessing, a man of quiet dignity and winning ways, who united all hearts. His winning manners and saintly elevation brought many accessions to the church, and a great and lasting blessing to the community." He was taken with pulmonary consumption, brought on, as was supposed, by his intense labors in the service of his people, and while taking a journey South, by the advice of his physician, for the benefit of milder air, he died Dec. 25, 1805, at the age of 39, on his passage from Norfolk to Charleston, and was buried at sea. His widow afterwards married Dea. Elijah Porter of Farmington, who died Sept. 2, 1845, aged 84. Mrs. Sarah Boardman (Washburn) Porter, died in New York, July 2, 1847, aged 77.

444. Huldah⁵ Boardman (Daniel,⁴ Joshua,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), was born in Sheffield, Mass., Dec. 25, 1753. In a deed of Jan. 12, 1799, she was the wife of ABIJAH PECK of Greenfield, Albany County, N. Y., who was, according to the Peck Genealogy, a descendant in the 5th generation of Dea. Paul Peck of Hartford, and a son of Abijah and Elizabeth (Galpin) Peck of Berlin, Conn., where he was born July 11, 1747. He married Lucy Percival, Huldah Boardman, and Mrs. Abigail Owen, and died at the residence of his grandson, Joseph L. Peck, in Cayuga County, N. Y., May 18, 1828. Six of his children, Warren, Joseph, Lucy, Abijah, Anise, and Sally, are given in the Peck Genealogy, with the date of birth (Dec. 30, 1786) of Warren only. It does not appear which, if any of them, were children by Huldah Boardman. Warren Peck's name is among the witnesses of the above deed.

448. Daniel⁵ Boardman (Daniel,⁴ Joshua,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), was born in Sheffield, Mass., Sept. 3, 1762. He removed afterwards to New York State as is shown by the following deeds: Feb. 11, 1789, "Daniel Boardman of Cambridge, County of Albany, N. Y., Trader," sells for £100 to Nathaniel Cowles of Sheffield, two pieces of land in Sheffield of $57\frac{3}{4}$ and $18\frac{1}{3}$ acres respectively, one of them bounded north on Hosea Boardman's land, Hosea being meant for Joshua.

Again, Jan. 12, 1799, Daniel, with the other heirs, then of Greenfield, Albany County, N. Y., sells to the same Nathaniel Cowles, right to land "inherited from Sarah Boardman, late of Sheffield, widow." The name of Daniel Boardman and Electa Boardman follow each other among the signers of this deed, and among the witnesses are Daniel Boardman and Sabina Boardman, probably his children.

453. Richard⁵ Boardman (Foshua,⁴ Foshua,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Napoli, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., born in Sheffield, Mass., Mch. 10, 1769, married 1st, MERIBA HOPKINS, sister of his brother Timothy's wife. He married 2d, LUCY ALLCOCKS, born Sept. 7, 1769. He died at Napoli, June 11, 1846. Mrs. Lucy Boardman died Feb. 13, 1845.

461. Amos⁵ Boardman (Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Sharon, Conn., and Ripley County, Indiana, born in Sharon, Conn., July 23, 1767, married, Mch. 20, 1792, ZADIA MARCHANT of Sharon (Church Rec.). They lived in Harpersfield, Otsego County, N. Y., Feb. 27, 1795, when they sold property in Sharon inherited from Zadia's father, who was Amos Marchant of Newtown, Conn., where he married Eunice Sherman; removed to Sharon, 1773, built there a fine brick house, and died of small pox Dec. 19, 1784, aged 62. Amos and Zadia, according to Dr. D. W. Patterson, also lived at Seneca Falls. Two children of this marriage have been found. It is remembered by an old resident of Sharon that two sisters named Boardman were of the same household as David Gay, who had married Keziah Marchant, sister of Zadia, and lived about a mile east of Sharon village; doubtless they were children of Amos and Zadia, David Gay being their uncle by marriage.

Amos married second, SILVIA NOBLE, born in Sheffield, Mass., Nov. 27, 1779, the sister of his brother Charles' wife.

They lived in the town of Hector, Cayuga Co., N. Y., where their four older children were probably born. They removed before 1811 to Dearborn County, Indiana, near Wilmington, and thence to Ripley Co., where Amos died Aug. 24, 1839. Sylvia, his widow, died April 6, 1840. (Fam. Bible Rec., see No. 150.)

462. Charles⁵ Boardman (Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Sheffield, Mass., born May 22, 1770, in Sharon, Conn., married Sept. 26, 1793, RUTH NOBLE, born Dec. 17, 1777, daughter of Ezekiel and Esther (Turner) Noble of Sheffield. Charles seems to have been already the owner of property in Sheffield, when, June 5, 1803, he made his first recorded purchase of land there described as being "near the south east corner of said Boardman's dwelling." He calls himself in his deeds "Nailer," or maker of nails, and he dealt quite largely in real estate, appearing often in the land records. He seems to have lived at one time in Egremont, a town in the near neighborhood of Sheffield. In 1838, when 68 years old, he and his wife removed to the township of Delaware, Ripley Co., Indiana, in the southeast part of the State not far from the Ohio River. Their sons, Amos and Ezra, went with them, and died there in 1842 and 1853, and their father, Charles, died there also Dec. 14, 1851. Ruth, the wife and mother, returned in 1853 to Sheffield, where some of her children were living, and died May 28, 1862. The emigration of the family to Indiana is explained by the fact that the family of Charles' brother Amos, who had married a sister of Ruth, were already settled there, and apparently prospering.

465. David⁵ Boardman (Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Marion County, Ind., born in Sharon, Conn., Sept. 4, 1781, married SARAH POWELL, daughter of Benjamin and Rachel Powell. When a young man he removed from his home in New York State to Indiana, and settled in Dearborn County, in the southeastern corner of the State, on the Ohio River. His three brothers, Simon, Amos, and Charles, followed him later, in the order named, to the same region. Here David married, and lived for over twenty years, then removing north, in 1832, to Marion County, where he settled about nine miles north of Indianapolis. He died there in the fall of 1850. His widow lived to her eighty-fifth year, dying Nov. 13, 1877. All their children except the youngest were born in Dearborn County. The year 1850, when typhoid fever and other kindred diseases were prevalent in the region of their home, proved very fatal in this family; fourteen of its members died in the fall of that year.

477. Elijah⁵ Boardman (Elnathan,⁴ Fonathan,³ Fonathan,² *Samuel*¹), of Hartford, Conn., was born in Rocky Hill in 1756, and married Sept. 16, 1781, MERCY NOTT. Their children were all baptized in Rocky Hill. He settled afterwards in Hartford, where he became keeper of the jail, then situated on the present site of The Case, Lockwood & Brainard building, corner of Pearl and Trumbull Streets. A part of this large edifice, which was called the City Hall, had been for some time occupied as a tavern, under the name of the City Hall Tavern, and of this Mr. Boardman became the landlord in the spring of 1800, and continued to be so till his death, eight years later, combining with this business the care of prisoners in a separate part of the building. Both these positions which he filled were honorable in the estimation of the community, and Mr. Boardman was a much-respected citizen of the town. He was an attendant of Christ Church (Episcopal), where his name appears as the holder of a pew in the center, fourth from the pulpit, in 1805. He died Sept. 4, 1808, aged 52, at Hartford, and his widow died in Wallingford, Conn., Feb. 23, 1838, aged 85. Both were buried in the graveyard at Rocky Hill.

The name of Elijah Boardman appears among those who marched from Wethersfield at the Lexington alarm; whether this was Elijah, now under consideration, or another, is uncertain, but he it certainly must have been, who under the name of Elijah Boardman, 2d, (to distinguish him from an Elijah 1st, of Newington, born four years earlier, who was in the same company,) served from July 10 to Dec. 18, 1775, at Roxbury, in Gen. Spencer's Brigade, at the siege of Boston. He next appears in a list of American prisoners paroled or exchanged in 1776, 200 of whom arrived from New York at Milford, Jan. 1, 1777; of these, twenty died on the passage, and twenty within a week after landing. Among those from Connecticut was Elijah Boardman of Wethersfield, "now lying sick at Milford." He again enlisted April 22, 1777, for three years, being corporal till Nov. 20, 1777, and then promoted to sergeant. He belonged to Col. Samuel B. Webb's regiment, and was discharged Dec. 31, 1781. He is identified as the son of Elnathan Boardman, by his order for the payment to the latter of money due, now on file at the State House, which is dated July 12, 1780, and signed Elijah Boardman, Sergeant. The following notice of him is in the American Mercury of Thursday, Sept. 8, 1808:

"Died in this city on Sunday morning last, Mr. Elijah Boardman, aged 51. Mr. Boardman served with reputation as an officer during our Revolutionary War. In that memorable struggle for liberty, he was taken prisoner by the British, and confined on board the Jersey prison ship, from which time till his death he never saw a well day. His illness has ever been attributed to the barbarity of his treatment while a prisoner. He has for several years past been keeper of the gaol in this city, and has uniformly treated the prisoners committed to his charge with all the tenderness humanity could dictate to a generous mind. His funeral was attended on Monday last by his Masonic Brethren of this and the adjacent towns."

Little is known by his descendants of John Boardman's history; he is thought by them to have died quite early in life. Martha married, Aug. 7, 1795, John Adams, whose death at the age of 50 is recorded as occurring on the same day. Mrs. Martha Adams married April 8, 1802, John Goodrich, whose former wife, Mary, had died Dec. 13, 1798, at the age of 52. "Martha, wife of John Goodrich, died April 30, 1830, aged 78." (Gravestone in Wethersfield.) The church record adds that she died of old age. "John Goodrich died Dec. 23, 1830, aged 86, of Lung Fever." (Church Record.)

486. Capt. Jason⁵ Boardman (John,⁴ Jonathan,³ Jonathan,² *Samuel*¹), of Rocky Hill, Conn., born there Jan. 16, 1762, married July 7, 1784, HEPZIBAH CURTIS, daughter of Dea. Thomas and Dorothy (Bulkley) Curtis of Rocky Hill, and granddaughter of Jonathan and Hepzibah (Hastings) Curtis, the latter being daughter of Dr. Thomas Hastings of Hatfield, Mass. Capt. Jason, who was 18 years old when his father was lost at sea, succeeded him on the old homestead, and as a sailor and sea captain, and later became prominent as a ship-builder and ship-owner. He is said to have owned a line of packets which sailed regularly from the Connecticut River to Richmond, Va., his sons, Capt. Ashbel and Capt. John, being masters on some of these vessels, making thus three successive generations of sea captains. He was also connected with vessels in the West India trade. Mrs. Boardman died Jan. 4, 1807, "of Fever," at the age of 50, and Capt. Jason married 2d, Jan. 3, 1808, LYDIA DEMING, by whom he had four children. She died Feb. 11, 1842, of apoplexy, aged 65. Capt. Jason died Feb. 6, 1844, aged 83, cause of death "indefinite." He is remembered as a man of fine appearance and of dignified and courteous manners.

487. Mehitabel⁵ Boardman (John,⁴ Jonathan,³ Jonathan,² Samuel¹), born in Rocky Hill Aug. 21, 1763, married May 29, 1791, CAPT. POWNAL DEMING,* born in Lyme, Conn., Sept. 30, 1749, son of David and Mehitabel (Champion) Deming. His former wife, Abigail Hubbell of New Fairfield, had died in Rocky Hill, Feb. 23, 1785, at the age of 19, leaving a son, Eleazer Hubbell Deming. Capt. Deming was a Lieutenant and forage master in the Revolutionary Army; he served through the war, and held a Captain's commission at the close. He was one of the members of the Order of the Cincinnati in Connecticut. He was a merchant in Hartford, where he advertises in 1790 a good assortment of European goods, informing his old customers that he has moved into the store lately occupied by Messrs. Asa and Daniel Hopkins. He died very suddenly, April 13, 1795, aged 45. He was buried in the old Center Church yard in Hartford, where his gravestone and that of his oldest child are to be seen. His widow, Mehitabel, married April 2, 1799, as second wife, MAJOR LUTHER COLTON of Longmeadow, Mass., whose oldest son, Sabin Colton, afterwards married his stepmother's niece, Rhoda Boardman. Major Colton died Oct. 14, 1803.

504. Isaac⁶ Boardman (Ichabod,⁵ Isaac,⁴ Isaac³, Isaac,² Samuel¹), was born in Bolton, Conn., Jan. 21, 1756. His father emigrated in 1761 to Nova Scotia, where he soon died. The family appear to have afterwards returned to Bolton, and little is known of their subsequent history. Isaac was probably the Revolutionary soldier who was in Capt. H. Wells' Company at Boston, January to March, 1776. He is called "of Wethersfield," Sept. 4, 1777, when he enlisted for three years in Capt. Crane's Company, Col. Crane's Artillery. He died Jan. 15, 1779, before his term of service was ended. Administration on his estate was granted March 17, 1779, to Camp Adams of Wethersfield. His inventory consisted of "1 Gun, 38s.; A Castor Hatt 18s. hard money; 369 Continental dollars, valued at £110, 14s."

506. Josiah⁶ Boardman (Ichabod,⁵ Isaac,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), born in Bolton, Conn., Oct. 1759, appears last in the records of that town November, 1781, when he sells his share in land there inherited from his father Ichabod, and his grandfather Isaac, probably removing after that time from Bolton. In a list of Settlers on the Holland Purchase, in the extreme west of New York State, in 1804, is found the name of Josiah Boardman in Tier 9, Range 1 (now the town of Warsaw, Wyoming Co.), who is probably this Josiah, son of Ichabod. He served three years in the Revolutionary Army, in Capt. Savage's Company, Col. Sherburn's Regiment; enlisting April 20, 1777, he was transferred to S. B. Webb's Regiment May 1, 1780, and discharged June 20, 1780.

509. Edward⁶ Boardman (Elizur,⁵ Edward,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹) of Sandisfield, Mass., 'born Dec. 8, 1778, married —, and had two or more children.

- 1012 REBECCA, b. —; m. Jan. 4, 1832, Peter S. Thatcher of Hartford; had several children, of whom one son, Edward Boardman, d. Sept. 13, 1833, aged one year, and a daughter, Mary Rebecca, was bapt. Nov. 29, 1840. (So. Ch. Rec.)

510. Capt. Benjamin Jeduthan⁶ Boardman (Elizur,⁵ Edward,⁴ Isaac,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Hartford, Conn., was born in Sandisfield, Mass., where he was baptized Feb. 10, 1782. His name was originally Jeduthan, taken from Jeduthan Smith of Glastonbury, the uncle of his father, but being adopted by his uncle, the Rev. Benjamin Boardman of Hartford, Benjamin was added to it. Capt. Boardman inherited the property of his uncle on Wethersfield Avenue, where he occupied himself as a farmer, a business in which he excelled, as appears from his taking in October, 1820, as a prize from the Hartford County Agricultural Society, a "silver cup of the value of $40 for the best cultivated farm;" and again in October, 1829, a prize of $6 for the best ploughing. He was an active member of the Governor's Horse Guards, in which he held the position of Quartermaster, and the rank of Captain. Two of his sons and one of his grandsons were afterwards Majors during 44 years of the existence of this now venerable organization. Capt. Boardman was an important and useful member of the South church, of which his uncle had been pastor. He married, in 1803, SALLY CLARK, daughter of Jonathan Clark of Tolland, Conn. She survived him, married Mr. Horace Latimer of Hartford, and died Feb. 14, 1846, at the age of 60. Capt. Boardman died Aug. 14, 1829, probably from heart disease, at Springfield, Mass., where he had gone on a military excursion. In the Connecticut Courant of Tuesday, Aug. 18, 1829, appears the following obituary notice of him :

"Died at Springfield, Mass., last Thursday night, Capt. Benjamin Boardman of this town, aged 48. He was at Springfield on a short visit, retired to rest at the public house where he lodged in apparent health, and was found dead in his bed the next morning. His remains were carried to the church in Springfield where a prayer was offered, after which they were conveyed to this place for interment. Capt. Boardman was much respected as an upright man, and a useful member of society."

545. Dr. Nathaniel⁶ Boardman (Nathaniel,⁵ Stephen,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Norwich, Vt., born in Bolton, Conn., Oct. 20, 1759, married in Bethel, Vt., Sept. 9, 1790, PHILOMELA HUNTINGTON, born in Windham, Conn., Aug. 12, 1773. She was the daughter of Jabez Huntington, Sheriff of Windham Co., Conn., during the Revolutionary War; her mother was Judith Elderkin, daughter of Col. Jedediah Elderkin, a prominent citizen of Windham, and an officer in the Revolutionary Army. Mrs. Boardman, her parents being dead, was living at the time of her marriage with her sister, Mrs. Chaplin, in Bethel. Dr. Nathaniel was about 18 years old when his father removed from Connecticut to Norwich. He there studied medicine with Dr. Mortimer Lewis, and afterwards practiced it for many years in connection with farming, at first in Bethel and afterwards in Norwich. His farm contained about 300 acres, upon which grew the largest apple orchard in the town, planted by his father and himself. One season, about 1820, the product of apples amounted to upwards of 2,000 bushels. The large gambrel-roofed house, painted red, built by him about 1800, is still standing. Dr. Boardman was of social disposition, and for energy, industry, and integrity, will compare favorably with his Connecticut ancestors. He and his wife joined the Center Congregational Church in Norwich in 1792, and in 1821 removed to the Second Church, to which they belonged at their death. Dr. Boardman performed service in the Revolutionary War, as appears from a pay-roll of Capt. Timothy Bush's Company, under the direction of Col. Peter Olcott, at the time the enemy came to Royalton, Oct. 16, 1780, in which company Nathaniel Boardman, Jr., served three days as a private (certificate furnished from Vermont Archives). He died Mch. 17, 1843, in his 84th year. His wife, Mrs. Philomela (Huntington) Boardman, had died Feb. 12, 1837, in her 34th year.

546. Jehiel⁶ Boardman (Nathaniel,⁵ Stephen,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Derby, Vt., and Olean, N. Y., was born in Bolton, Conn., Sept. 30, 1761. He emigrated with his father's family while still young to Norwich, Vt., and though yet in early youth, began active life as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. After the war he became a merchant and lumberman at Norwich, and there married, March 25, 1789, SALLY HATCH. In 1794, the favorable reports in regard to the new country in Ohio, not long before opened to emigration, induced him to take a journey thither. He went on foot from Norwich to Philadelphia, thence to Pittsburg, and from there finished his journey to Cincinnati on a government boat loaded with corn. Here Gen. Wayne was drilling his men preparatory to the famous battle with the Indians at Miami. Mr. Boardman returned to Norwich with the intention of emigrating to the Western Reserve, but was dissuaded from it by the opposition of his friends, and by the danger and hardship of the journey. He removed in 1799 to Derby, Vt., a few miles from the Canadian line, and here he cleared himself a farm, commenced lumbering, and engaged also in mercantile business. In 1813, he decided to move to the Ohio country. His family then consisted of seven children, and he made the long and tedious journey in his own teams, taking with him his household goods. They reached Olean early in 1814; it was then the head of navigation on the Alleghany, where boats were fitted out for going down the river. Mr. Boardman was pleased with the advantages offered by such a situation and decided to settle there. He bought land on the north side of Olean Creek, where now is the suburb called Boardmanville, and began to clear and make a home in the dense pine forest, building a log house, in which he lived while clearing and improving his land. In 1817, he built a large frame barn, 34 x 54 feet, and in 1818 a commodious frame dwelling, 32 x 44 feet, both of which are still standing and in use. Jehiel Boardman was well calculated for a pioneer; he was energetic, industrious, and scrupulously honest, and his influence was felt for good in his new home, where he lived for twenty years, until his death, July 27, 1834, in his 73d year. His wife survived him seven years.

wich, Vt. They removed to New Haven, Oswego Co., N. Y., about 1798. She died in May, 1833, leaving ten children.

548. Ruth⁶ Boardman (Nathaniel,⁵ Stephen,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), born in Bolton, Conn., where she was baptized Sept. 8, 1764; married CONANT SAWYER, and resided in Norwich, Vt., where she died May, 1814.

567. Moses⁶ Boardman (Samuel,⁵ Moses,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Middlebury, Vt., Cazenovia, N. Y., and Granville, Ohio, was born in East Middletown, now Portland, Conn., in 1763. On the death of his elder brother Samuel, who was captured by the British in 1776, and died not long after, while still a prisoner, Moses took his brother's musket and enlisted in the army. He was enrolled, April 22, 1777, as a private in Capt. Blackman's Company, Col. Sherburn's Regiment; was transferred May 1, 1780, to Col. S. B. Webb's Regt., to the Invalid Corps, April 5, 1781, and discharged April 23, 1783, serving thus for exactly six years, and until the close of the war. At the time of his enlistment he was but fourteen years of age, and when he was on the march, women would often express pity for "that poor little boy," and would show their sympathy by making him some trifling gift. He was low in stature, but strong, and perhaps not a stouter heart was in the ranks.

Before leaving Connecticut, he made a voyage to the West Indies, which appears to have satisfied any desire he may have had for a seafaring life. A fine large glass, or tumbler, probably intended for punch, and said to hold a gallon, which is now in the possession of his granddaughter, Mrs. Martha Downer, is a relic of that journey. After the death of his father in 1787, he sold his share of the homestead to his younger brothers, Amos and Joel, invested the proceeds in land in Middlebury, Vt., and shortly after removed thither, where, with the aid only of an ox team, he converted what had been part of the primeval forest into an improved farm. He was a determined and resolute man, ready to meet any danger; his sons always spoke of him as a man without fear, and used to tell the following incident as a proof of his courage.

While clearing his land, alone in the forest, a large bear appeared upon the scene, to which he gave chase, accompanied by his dog. Bruin climbed a tree about thirty feet, from which he fell, dropping between Mr. Boardman and his dog. The latter attacked the bear in the rear, thus diverting his attention, and giving his master a chance to strike some heavy blows with his hickory hand spike, his only weapon at hand. After a long struggle, alternating between attacks by the dog and blows by his master, the bear succeeded in giving the dog a long and powerful hug, which crippled him for life, but enabled Mr. Boardman to deal some final and deadly strokes, dispatching the enemy. The bear is said to have weighed five hundred pounds.

Mr. Boardman lived twelve years in Vermont, all at Middlebury, with the exception of one year at Ferrisburg, where he built a saw-mill, which was burned soon after completion. About 1802, he removed to Cazenovia, N. Y., where he lived about thirteen years. He was energetic and prosperous, and here he had a large farm, finely improved. After a horseback journey as far west as the Wabash River to "see the country," he exchanged this farm in Cazenovia with Jonas Stanbury of New York city, for wild lands in Licking County, Ohio. He started with his family for the new home, Feb. 25, 1815, hauling his goods in seven sleighs to Olean Point. Here he made a flat-boat, and they floated down the Alleghany and Ohio rivers to Marietta, where they sent part of their goods up the Muskingum to Zanesville, and part by wagons to Granville, Licking County. The homestead which he had chosen was one mile east of Granville, on the Newark Road, and contains a noted Indian mound on the top of Alligator Hill. Here his indefatigable energy was again called into action, and he began the third time to clear for himself a farm in the forest, and to bring it into a good state of cultivation; but in the second season after his arrival his life was prematurely cut off by an accident, and he died Sept. 29, 1816, at the age of 53, in consequence of a fall from a wagon.

Mr. Boardman married, about 1791, ABIGAIL MEAD of Rutland, Vermont, born 1769, daughter of Zebulon and Mercy (Carey) Mead, the latter a daughter of Rev. Mr. Carey. Zebulon Mead, whose ancestry is traced to William Mead, an early settler in Fairfield County, Conn., was a soldier in the Revolution, was Aid-de-camp to General Stark, and was in the battles of Bennington, Bunker Hill, and others.

Mrs. Boardman herself, though only six years of age at the breaking out of the Revolution, experienced and well remembered some of the hardships of those times. On one occasion, American soldiers warned the family of approaching Indians, who were burning houses and killing the settlers. After a hasty meal, they packed bedding and provisions into a wagon, and started for a place of safety. Abigail remembered one of the soldiers putting his hand on her head, and saying, "Poor child!" The first night of their journey their oxen were stolen by British soldiers who were encamped near them, but were recovered in the morning, and they proceeded to Bennington, where they remained until the danger was passed. Mrs. Boardman was one of the notable housewives of her day; she and her daughters were after Solomon's pattern, and were expert spinners and weavers of linen and wool. They numbered among their household furnishings fifteen feather beds, and everything that went with them was in proportion, each article being of home manufacture. They were accustomed to make 500 yards of one or another kind of cloth every year. Mrs. Boardman was in the habit of using her newly-made linen sheets a season, or until well bleached, and then laying them away. Her daughter said she had known her to have sixty laid away at once. When it is considered that not only the bedding, but the clothing for winter and summer, the table linen and the toweling were made at home, the labor thereby made necessary seems marvelous. Mrs. Boardman survived her husband a little more than three years, and died Feb. 1, 1820, at the age of 51.

He was twice married, both his wives coming from Salisbury, Conn. The first, whom he married June 18, 1795, was ESTHER TURNER, born July 9, 1763. She died Dec. 7, 1803, and he married 2d, Sept. 12, 1804, REBECCA SELLECK, born June 28, 1772, died Jan. 16, 1864, aged 92. Mr. Joel Boardman lived to the age of 97, and died in Middlebury July 31, 1863. From the following notice in the American Mercury of Feb. 20, 1792, he seems to have been engaged in trade before his emigration to Vermont: "Wednesday, 15th, arrived at New London, Schooner Seaflower, E. Hurlbut, from Guadaloupe and St. Martins, 26 days, with whom came Mr. Joel Boardman, merchant."

Samuel Allin⁶ Boardman (Moses,⁵ Moses,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Middletown, Conn., named from his maternal grandfather, one of the first settlers of the part of Middletown called Middlefield, born March 9, 1751-2, married March 31, 1774, KATHARINE THORP of Farmington. He entered the Revolutionary army, enlisting June, 1776, in Capt. Joseph Churchill's Company, Wadsworth's Brigade, raised to reinforce Washington at New York, the time of service expiring Dec. 25, 1776. He was afterwards, May, 1778, a member of Capt. Humphrey's Company of the 6th Regiment, Connecticut Line, and died while in service, Sept. 24, 1780.

590. Elderkin⁶ Boardman (Jonathan,⁵ Jonathan,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Leyden, N. Y., born in Haddam, Conn., about 1782, and baptized there August, 1787, removed with his father's family to Leyden, where he married LYDIA POST, eldest daughter of Josiah and Lydia (Platts) Post, who were both born in Saybrook, and removed in 1803 to Leyden, where Mr. Post, who was a builder and a man of ingenuity, died Feb. 13, 1813. Lydia, wife of Elderkin, died in Leyden, Aug. 25, 1814, aged 32. She left two children, who removed from the town when young, and no trace of them is found; their names even are unknown. Mr. Boardman must have been living at the time of his uncle Luther's will (1823), in which he was bequeathed 17 acres of land in Leyden, but probably died not long after. Mr. E. P. Brainerd of Ravenna, O., a veteran genealogist of the Brainerd family, born 1814, from whom the above information in regard to Elderkin is obtained, barely remembers these children in their infancy, and says of Elderkin himself: "He was a man of push, energy, and force of character, having the esteem and respect of all who knew him."

594. Rev. James⁶ Boardman (Jonathan,⁵ Jonathan,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Spring Valley, N. Y., and East Townsend, Ohio, born probably in Leyden, N. Y., married SALLY COLBURN, daughter of Jonathan Colburn, who was the mother of all his children. He married 2d, JANE FLEMING. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Bigelow, in Van Wert, Ohio, in the spring of 1869. His widow died in 1877. Mr. Boardman was a soldier in the War of 1812; he was by trade a clothier, but later in life became a Baptist preacher.

597. Watson Luther⁶ Boardman (Daniel,⁵ Jonathan,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Haddam, Conn., and Phelpsstown (now Williamstown), Ingham Co., Mich., birthplace unknown, was of Haddam Oct. 25, 1820, when he was married by Rev. John Marsh to ELIZABETH DICKINSON of the same town. There is some reason for thinking that, his father Daniel having died early, Watson was partially adopted by his uncle Luther, who bequeathed him in his will $\frac{1}{3}\frac{2}{3}$ of his estate, and had deeded him, Dec. 8, 1816, many years before his death, half the dwelling-house that had been his father Jonathan's, and the land it stood on; he became owner of the other half in 1829, and had also from his uncle land on the east side of the Connecticut River, including a fishing place. Watson Luther Boardman and Elizabeth Dickinson, afterwards his wife, were both admitted to the Haddam Church Jan. 17, 1819. They had baptized there, Sept. 27, 1828, David Boardman Phelps, their "adopted son," and a daughter, Mary Frances; two more children of theirs were baptized in 1831 and 1837. In May, 1838, he gave to Russell Gladwin a power of attorney to sell his dwelling-house, and the same month sold his land east of the Connecticut. He probably then removed to the West, for June 29, 1841, calling himself of Phelpsstown, Mich., he sold through his attorney his homestead in Haddam.

A Mr. John Boardman, now residing in Locke, Ingham

Co., Mich. (P. O. address Webberville), is perhaps the son of John Watson Boardman, but no answer to inquiries has been received from him. There may also have been other children born after removal.

610. William⁶ Boardman (Levi,⁵ Levi,⁴ Joseph,³ Samuel,² Samuel¹), of Sheffield, Mass., was born in Wethersfield, Aug. 15, 1792, in the old house which was built for his great-grandfather, Cornet Joseph Boardman, by his father, Samuel² Boardman, Jr. He married July 4, 1815, at Berlin, Conn., ABIGAIL NORTH, who was born in Ludlow, Mass., Aug. 23, 1791. Mr. Boardman learned the cabinet-making business in Hartford, where he worked for a while at his trade, and afterwards at Berlin, where he married. He then removed to Salisbury, Conn., where he pursued his trade in connection with farming. In 1824 he removed to Sheffield, Mass., and devoted himself entirely to his farm. He never sought or held office, was one of the kindest of neighbors, and was beloved by all who knew him. Soon after removing to Sheffield, he, in connection with his brother Levi and his uncle, William W. Warner, built a boat to transport charcoal from Sheffield to Canaan Falls, Conn. They used the boat for one season, and it was the only boat ever used for freighting on the Housatonic River in Massachusetts. Mr. Boardman gained at that time the title of captain, and it stayed by him as long as he lived. He died April 21, 1869, aged 77. His widow died Feb. 25, 1870, aged 79.

611. Levi⁶ Boardman (Levi,⁵ Levi,⁴ Joseph,³ Samuel,² Samuel¹), of Sheffield, Mass., was born in the old Boardman homestead in Wethersfield, July 28, 1795. His father died when he was thirteen years old, and he was bound as apprentice to Mr. Strong of Hartford to learn "the art of chair-making." His health failing, at twenty years of age he bought the rest of his time, and returned to Wethersfield. In the spring of 1816 he removed to Sheffield and engaged in farming, continuing in that business till his death. He was an industrious, working farmer, and his farm was noted for its neat and tidy appearance. He had great powers for planning and executing work, so that he early in life gained the name of "Boss Levi." He always took great interest in everything that was for the best good of the town, churches, schools, roads, etc. He never sought office, but was several times chosen selectman, and overseer of the poor, always refusing, however, to receive any pay for services thus rendered. He became a Christian in 1822, but never made a public profession of his faith. He was one of those who first established a Sabbath-school in the town, and was its librarian for more than twenty years. He died honored and respected by all who knew him. His wife, whom he married Dec. 5, 1817, was SALLY CALLENDER, born in Sheffield, Sept. 25, 1798, eldest child of Archa and Sally (Savage) Callender. Her great-grandfather was one of the first settlers of the town of Sheffield, one of its first selectmen, and one of the first deacons of the church. Mrs. Boardman was of a modest and retiring disposition, a loving, tender mother, one that shone in her own home, a kind neighbor, and a true friend. She lived to a good old age, and, though the eldest of her father's family, she survived them all. Mr. Boardman died Sept. 1, 1875, in his 81st year.

William Boardman.

Conn., born in Lenox, Mass., where his father was then for a short time residing, Feb. 25, 1805, married, Jan. 3, 1828, MARY FRANCIS, born in Wethersfield Nov. 6, 1803, daughter of Captain Daniel and Mehitabel (Goodrich) Francis. Her grandparents were Capt. John Francis and Capt. Elizur Goodrich, both soldiers in the Revolution.

Mr. Boardman received his education in the best schools of Wethersfield. At the age of 16 he went to learn the printer's trade at the office of the Hartford Times, then owned and published by Samuel Bowles and John Francis, the agreement being that he should receive $20 a year, with board, washing, and mending. In the summer of 1824, when Mr. Bowles started the Springfield Republican, Mr. Boardman went with him to Springfield, the removal being accomplished by placing the press with all articles necessary for use in the business, and the household furniture, on a flat boat, in which they were poled up the Connecticut River. He boarded in the family of his employer, and set up and printed a part of the first issue of the Springfield Republican, since become one of the leading newspapers of New England. In one of his letters written to his father in those days, he says, "Mr. Bowles leaves home to-morrow, and leaves me to take the whole charge of the paper in his absence, which will be for a week." In 1828, in company with William Faulkner of Norwich, under the firm name of Boardman & Faulkner, he began the publication of the Norwich Republican, of which he was also the editor. This was the second paper in Connecticut to support the election of Andrew Jackson for the Presidency. Ill health obliged him to retire from this position after the first year.

In 1830 he published the Tolland Advocate for an association of gentlemen in Tolland, Conn. In 1832, in company with Alfred Francis, he published the life, writings, and opinions of Thomas Jefferson, written for them by B. L. Rayner, the printing, binding, etc., being all done in Wethersfield in the building now standing on the corner opposite May's Tavern on the north; a large edition was published, and the book (sold by subscription), was received with much favor by the public. In 1834 he was employed by John Russell, then editor and publisher of the Hartford Times, as foreman of the establishment. In 1837-8-9, Mr. Boardman engaged in raising silk worms and in making sewing silk, of which a large amount was manufactured and sold. He also for a time carried on cigar-making, the tobacco being raised and cured by himself.

In 1841, in company with John Fox, he started in Wethersfield, in connection with a successful grocery business, the first manufactory in New England, outside of Boston, for the roasting, grinding, and packing of coffee and spices for the wholesale trade. This partnership was dissolved in October, 1844, and in January, 1845, he undertook the same business on his own account* in the store now occupied by

* Reference to his ledger shows that the first bill for ground coffee was for that sold to Hon. Silas W. Robbins of Wethersfield, Jan. 21, 1845; Mr. Robbins is a descendant of John and Mary (Boreman) Robbins, and has been a valued customer of the firm without interruption from that day to the present, now more than fifty years.

Bulkeley & Hanmer. He removed in 1846 to the building now the Wethersfield post-office, where he substituted horse-power for the hand-power hitherto used in grinding. His business increasing, he removed in 1850 to Hartford, where he located at 12 Central Row, and associated with himself his son, W. F. J. Boardman, under the firm name of William Boardman & Son. Steam-power and modern machinery were here introduced, and the firm did a large business in several States of the Union, and especially in New York city, where a considerable amount of the goods manufactured were sold. The coffee used at the opening of the Crystal Palace in New York May 1, 1851, was furnished by them. Probably the first invoice of ground and prepared coffee sent to California was from this firm. Still larger accommodations being needed, the store and manufactory were removed in 1853 to 109 State street (now No. 241). The building was bought and fitted up with a 25 horse-power engine, made by Woodruff & Beach, and with all the new and improved machinery for the successful carrying on of the business. At this time Mr. Boardman's second son, Thomas J., was admitted to the firm, and its name changed to William Boardman & Sons. The building occupied consisted of four stories, with a storehouse of two stories in the rear. In 1858 two stories in an adjoining building were leased, and teas were added to the stock in trade. Traveling salesmen were employed, and a large business was done throughout New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, thousand of chests being sold yearly. In 1867 the business was removed from 241 to 205 State street, corner of Front, the old store being retained for the manufactory and for storage of goods. This added four stories, 30 x 80 feet, to the room formerly occupied.

In 1871 the brown stone building, 128 Asylum street (now 298 to 306), was erected for the business; it measured 52 x 100 feet, and was five stories high besides a basement, with manufactory in the rear of three stories, 30 x 40 feet. The cost was over $100,000, and it was the finest private building then in the city. The firm removed to it April 1, 1872, new machinery being added, making it the most complete manufactory of its kind in New England. Here they continued to do a large and successful business as wholesale dealers and importers of teas, coffees, and spices, and as dealers in cigars, tobacco, and grocers' sundries. July 9, 1888, after the death of the senior partner, the firm was dissolved, the business now being carried on by the younger of his two sons, and his son, Howard F., under the old firm name out of respect for its founder.

Mr. Boardman was interested in many enterprises aside from his regular business. He was, with the firm, the builder of several of the finest private structures in the city. He also, in company with others, constructed several vessels of large size, one of which was named the William Boardman. He was one of the originators and subscribers of the Merrick Thread Company of Holyoke, Mass., and one of its directors; also of the Hartford and New York Steamboat Company, the Comstock & Ferre Seed Company, Bank of Hartford County (now American National), Merchants and Manufacturers Bank (now First National), Orient Fire Insurance Company, Mechanics Bank & Building Association, Hudson River Water Power & Paper Company. He was an original subscriber to the stock of the City Fire Insurance Company, Merchants Fire Insurance Company, Phoenix Fire Insurance Company, and Hartford Engineering Company. He was, in 1836, and for several years after, secretary and director of the Wethersfield Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He also assisted in the formation of many industries, both of a private and public character, and did much to advance the interests of his adopted city. He settled many estates, was a director in insurance companies, manufacturing corporations, and banks. He was largely interested in proving the feasibility and cheapness of peat as fuel. He was associated with Henry Martin in manufacturing the first power machines for making bricks in this country; was general agent and manager of the Holbrook School Apparatus Company for the manufacture of instruments showing the revolutions of the solar system, and for other purposes connected with the education of children. He was president of the Hartford Associated Coal Company, formed to enable consumers to receive their coal at the cost of mining, etc., a company formed just after the Civil War, which, owing to the general collapse in mercantile values, did not prove a success. Mr. Boardman filled all these places of trust with honor and fidelity. His advice was often sought in business and other matters, and cheerfully and honestly given.

He held several offices in earlier life, such as State Prison Director in 1834, town Constable and Collector in 1835-6-7, Representative from Wethersfield in the Legislature in 1852, when he was on several important committees, and was again appointed State Prison Director, and also Commissioner for Hartford County by Gov. Thomas H. Seymour. After his removal to Hartford in 1858, he invariably refused public office. He was a life-long Democrat, a firm union man, and a subscriber to the Hartford Times from 1820 to 1889. He assisted J. M. Schofield in starting the paper, now the Hartford Evening Post. He was a member of the order of Masons and of Odd Fellows, and held the office of Noble Grand in the latter organization.

"Religiously, Mr. Boardman was a true child of his Puritan ancestry. To strict integrity, a careful frugality, a true orthodoxy, he joined a clear religious experience." Both he and his wife were brought up in the Congregational church, but in early life became deeply interested in the Methodist Episcopal church, then in its infancy in Wethersfield, where it was at first strongly opposed by many of the townspeople who adhered to the Congregational order. At one time when they were refused the use of the Town Hall for religious services, Mr. Boardman with others forced the doors in order to hold the meeting. The excitement at this time was so great that the Riot Act was read to the assembled crowd by Samuel Galpin of Wethersfield. Mr. Boardman and his wife united with the M. E. church in 1838, and remained through life its firm supporters. He helped to rebuild its church edifice, and gave so liberally to the undertaking that in gratitude to him it was named at its rededication, Boardman Chapel. On removing to Hartford in 1858, their membership was transferred to the First Methodist Episcopal church there, of which he was elected one of the Trustees, and when its new church edifice was erected on Asylum street, he was one of the building committee, giving a large sum for the purpose. When the South Park M. E. church was organized in the south part of the city, Mr. and Mrs. Boardman joined the new movement, and were among the foremost in the enterprise, he being appointed one of the Trustess and a member of the building committee. One of the acts of his later life was the payment of the mortgage then on the church, thus relieving it of debt, and this, on the condition that there should never be another mortgage. He was elected the first Sunday-school Superintendent, continuing in that capacity till infirmity and advancing age compelled his resignation. In 1885, after the death of his wife, he built the Boardman Memorial Chapel, adjoining the church, in remembrance of her ; it was dedicated Feb. 23, 1886.

His liberality was great, and the calls on his charity were many, and freely responded to. By his will he made bequests to the Old People's Home, the Hartford Hospital, the Larabee Fund, the Charitable Society of Hartford, the Fund for Superannuated Preachers, the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. church, and to the Grant Memorial University of Athens, Tenn., a scholarship.

Mr. Boardman's married life was a long and happy one, extending through more than fifty-six years. His wife was a woman remarkable for her kindness of heart, and her whole-souled liberality. She was never happier than when doing something for the help or comfort of others, and her husband took care that she should never lack the means for her benefactions, trusting her judgment entirely in the use of the ample sums he put into her hands for such purposes. She was interested in all good works, both public and private, and the extent to which she aided them will never be known, for she was unassuming in all her bounties. During the Civil War she took great interest in the condition of the soldiers, and was one of the managers of the Soldiers' Aid Association. But it was as the kind and tender wife and mother that her chief happiness consisted, and the best monument and witness to her excellence has been the reverent and unforgetting affection of her husband and children. She died Dec. 14, 1884, at the age of 81, after a short illness.

Mr. Boardman survived his wife for nearly three years, and died Nov. 3, 1887, in his 83d year. His health had been for many months gradually failing, but his mind remained to the last strong and clear.

All the children of Mr. and Mrs. Boardman, except the youngest, were born in the old Broad street house of their ancestors, in Wethersfield.

654. Frederic William Henry⁶ Boardman (Daniel,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of New York city and New Hamburg, N. Y., born Aug., 1804, married in 1836, PHILIPPINA ANNETTE BELIN, born in 1802, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Her father was Jean Philippe Belin, a native of the island of Guadaloupe, French West Indies. He came to this country with his father in the beginning of this century, in consequence of the insurrection of the slaves under Toussaint l'Ouverture. He married, about 1801, probably at Poughkeepsie, Catharine Alice Schenck. Returning later to the West Indies to try to recover his property, he died of yellow fever. His widow married for her second husband, Mr. William Slosson of Kent, Conn., who became a distinguished lawyer in New York city. She had by him five sons, all now deceased.

Mr. Frederic William H. Boardman graduated at Yale College in 1823, studied law, but never pursued the practice of it. He removed to New Hamburg, N. Y., in 1839 or 1840, returned to New York in 1850, and from that time resided in the city or its neighborhood till his death in 1882.

658. Hon. William Whiting⁶ Boardman (Elijah,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of New Haven, Conn., was born in New Milford, Conn., Oct. 10, 1794. He married, July 28, 1857, LUCY HALL of Cleveland, Ohio. The following account of Mr. Boardman's life is taken from notes furnished by himself in a letter of Mch. 24, 1862; from it may best be inferred his character, and the estimation in which he was held in the community:

"I was at school for a time when a child at Great Barrington, Mass., under charge of my Grandmother Whiting; from 1805 to 1808 was at school and preparing for college at Bacon Academy in Colchester, Conn., under Master John Adams; entered Yale College in Sept., 1808, and was graduated in Sept., 1812; was at Cambridge, Mass., as a resident graduate from Oct., 1812, to June, 1813. I read law under direction of Hon. D. S. Boardman for a time, and attended lectures by Judges Reeve and Gould in Litchfield, something more than a year, and was admitted to the bar. In 1819 I came to New Haven to reside, and opened a law office. My father's death in 1823 then threw upon me so much business connected with the settlement of the estate, that I did but little at law. After that, was Judge of Probate for the district of New Haven from 1825 to 1829; in the State Senate in the years 1830, 1831, and 1832; was member of the Connecticut House of Representatives in 1836, 1837, 1838, 1839, 1845, 1846, 1849, and 1851, and was Speaker of the House of Representatives in the years 1838, 1839, and 1845. In the Harrison campaign, was elected Sept., 1840, to Congress to fill a vacancy made by the resignation of Judge Storrs; was re-elected in April, 1841, and sat during the three sessions of the 27th Congress until March 4, 1843; declined a re-election that spring. I was married to Lucy Hall of Cleveland, Ohio, 28 July, 1857, went abroad, and returned in Aug., 1858."

The remainder of Mr. Boardman's life was passed at New Haven, where he died Aug. 27, 1871, in his 77th year. He had no children. His widow resides in New Haven, where she has recently made liberal provision for the building and endowment of a manual training school.

659. Henry Mason⁶ Boardman (Elijah,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Boardman, Ohio, born in New Milford, Jan. 4, 1797, married, Dec. 13, 1818, SARAH HALL BENHAM, daughter of Rev. Benjamin Benham, pastor of St. John's Parish, New Milford. Mr. Boardman, though he had not, like his brothers, the advantages of a college education, was a man of superior intelligence, of good literary taste, and wide reading, as was shown by the valuable and well-selected library which he collected. Soon after his marriage he removed with his wife to the town of Boardman, founded by his father, in the northeastern part of Ohio, in order to superintend the land in that section in which his father was interested. When he arrived there in 1819, the country around was covered with forests in which wolves and other wild animals were yet abundant. The inhabitants were very few, and no dwellings except log huts were to be seen for many miles. One of Mr. Boardman's first undertakings after his arrival, was the organization of a church society, whose records he kept as clerk for 25 years, and for very much of the earlier part of that time himself conducted the public services as a lay reader. When the conditions became favorable for the building of a church edifice, he was the chief promoter of the enterprise, and contributed to the work a large share of the labor and materials. "Mr. Boardman's known integrity and sound Christian principle led to his often being selected as an arbiter in settling disputes and disagreements among his friends." His death occurred suddenly in consequence of an accident, by which he was thrown from his buggy while stepping into it. He survived about two days, and died Dec. 17, 1846, at the age of 49.

661. Caroline Maria⁶ Boardman (Elijah,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in New Milford, Conn., June 29, 1802, married May 22, 1825, REV. JOHN FREDERIC SCHROEDER, D.D., of New York city, born in Baltimore, Maryland, April 8, 1800, the son of Hermann Henry Schroeder of German ancestry. Dr. Schroeder graduated at Princeton in 1819, studied theology at New Haven in the General Theological Seminary of the Episcopal Church, was admitted to holy orders in Baltimore Jan. 1, 1823, and to the priesthood April 22, 1824. Soon after he became an assistant minister of Trinity Church, New York city, where he remained for thirteen years. He afterwards established, at Flushing, L. I., St. Ann's Hall, an institution for the education of young ladies, which he in 1846 removed to New York, and afterwards, in 1852, to Brooklyn, in order to be at the same time rector of St. Thomas Church in that city. He died Feb. 26, 1857, deeply lamented. The esteem in which he was held is shown by a resolution passed after his death at a meeting of clergy in New York :

“Resolved, That we have a deep sense of the loss which not only the church, but the community at large, has to deplore in the death of one who has so greatly contributed by his learning and private worth to the cause of education and sacred literature, and who, by his benevolent and sympathizing heart, his social and engaging qualities, and his general amenity and courtesy, endeared himself to all who have had the privilege of an acquaintance with him.”

Mrs. Caroline (Boardman) Schroeder was a woman of great personal beauty, but was still more remarkable for her noble qualities of mind and heart. She was an exemplary Christian, devoted to the interests, not only of her own household, but of all those with whom she came in contact. It was said of her, that "always judicious, unselfish, considerate of the motives, opinions, and feelings of others, kind, affectionate, loving, tender, and irreproachable, she seemed too good for earth."

663. Cornelia Elizabeth⁶ Boardman (Elijah,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of New Milford, was born there Aug. 4, 1808, and there died, unmarried, May 14, 1880. Her father, Hon. Elijah Boardman, died in 1823, when she was but fifteen years old, and she afterward devoted herself to the interests of her family, and to the affectionate care of her mother until the death of the latter in 1848, at the age of 80. Her home through life was the dwelling built by her father, completed in 1793, which is still standing in its ancient but dignified style in the center of New Milford, and which became later the home of her niece, Mrs. Cornelia (Schroeder) Wright. Here she preserved to the last the old time-honored furniture and family paintings, and made her home a place of large and constant hospitality. Miss Boardman's life was spent in doing good ; for this purpose she gave her money, her time, and her efforts. She was active in church and Sunday-school work, and took part in all benevolent efforts, both in her own town and for objects abroad. She was especially interested in all that concerned the church of which she was a member, and not long before her death she contributed a large sum toward building St. John's Episcopal Church, which is one of the ornaments of her native town. She died after an illness of but a few days, in her 72d year.

A fuller account of Miss Boardman and her family, as well as of other of the descendants of Rev. Daniel Boardman of New Milford, may be found in the history of that town, and in the memoir of her mother, Mrs. Mary Anna Boardman, by Rev. John F. Schroeder, D.D.

664. Rev. Charles Adolphus⁶ Boardman (Homer,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), born at New Milford, Nov. 19, 1788, married March 7, 1811, SOPHIA HINE of New Milford, born Dec. 2, 1787, the daughter of Noble and Margaret (Noble) Hine. He settled at first as a merchant in Ohio, then returned to Connecticut, and studied for the ministry. He was called to the church in New Preston, Conn., March 11, 1818, and ordained there on June 24th following. He remained in New Preston till 1830. He was afterwards pastor of the Third Congregational Church in New Haven, Conn., 1830 to 1832, and from 1838 to 1854 pastor of the church at Hudson, Ohio. He removed later to Monroe, Wisconsin, where he lived with his daughter till his death, about 1880. His wife died at Youngstown, Ohio, Aug. 4, 1851.

669. Dr. Daniel Homer⁶ Boardman (Homer,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in New Milford May 21, 1803, died unmarried Oct. 13, 1834, of bilious fever, at the age of 31, in New Orleans. Accompanying the notice of his death in the Connecticut Courant of Nov. 10, 1834, is the following interesting account of him :

“ Soon after Dr. Boardman received his degree at Yale College, he was introduced to Commodore and Captain Porter, both of whom were then actively engaged in fitting out their fleet for South America. Dr. Boardman accepted the appointment of surgeon, and was on board the Guerrero in her perilous and unequal fight, and was consulting Capt. Porter on the quarter-deck when that brave officer was inhumanly shot by a cannon-ball, after his colors were struck to the Spanish Commander. Dr. Boardman then became the intimate friend and companion of Commodore Porter, and when on their way together from Vera Cruz to the interior of Mexico, they were both overtaken and attacked on an extended plain by six robbers, well armed and mounted. They ranged opposite each other, on each side of the road, sixteen steps apart. The commodore, accustomed to command, ordered the doctor to fire at the chief, and the chief, in his turn, fired at the commodore. Both shots missed, and the chief, in his rage, spurred his horse to have a nearer shot at the commodore, when he received the commodore's ball through his body. The doctor's second fire carried away part of a robber's cheek, and, being panic-struck at the loss of their chief, they retreated, and in the running fight Dr. Boardman had the end of his elbow cut off. After Commodore Porter received his appointment to Constantinople, Dr. Boardman established himself in practice at Tampico, in Mexico, where he enjoyed great celebrity, and was accumulating an ample fortune. In convalescing from a bilious fever, he was persuaded to ship on board the Santa Anna for New Orleans, and survived his landing only ten days."

670. Laura Amaryllis⁶ Boardman (Homer,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹) was born in New Milford, Conn., March 27, 1806. She married, Oct. 29, 1828, REV. AARON DERICK LANE of Waterloo, N. Y., born Jan., 1797, son of Derick and Maria (Lansing) Lane of Lansingburg, N. Y. Mrs. Lane died Apr. 4, 1862, aged 56, a woman of great loveliness, both of person and character. Mr. Lane died Nov. 2, 1880. He was a man of fine presence and genial manners, respected and beloved by every one.

- 1187 FREDERIC AUGUSTUS,⁷ born Mch. 31, 1832; killed in the War of the Rebellion May 3, 1864, at the age of 32. The following account of Col. Frederic A. Boardman is from the Milwaukee Sentinel of May 13, 1864 :

“The youngest and one of the most promising among Wisconsin officers, was Col. Frederic A. Boardman of the Fourth Wisconsin Regiment. The painful intelligence reached this city Wednesday, that he was shot, and instantly killed, while on a scouting expedition near Baton Rouge, on the 4th instant. Col. Boardman was born in Herkimer County, New York, and was only thirty-two years of age at the time of his death. He has been actively in the service of the government ever since he came to manhood. Graduating from the Naval School at Annapolis, he was first assigned to the Susquehanna, one of the vessels comprising the noted expedition to Japan, commanded by Commodore Perry. While in the navy he visited the most distant portions of the world, proving himself on all occasions a promising and competent officer. When the war broke out, he accepted a commission as Major of the 4th regiment, since which time he has accompanied that regiment in all its battles and expeditions, the attack on Port Hudson excepted, at which time he was lying sick in hospital. At the capture of New Orleans, he was selected by Gen. Williams, with two companies of the 4th regiment, to accompany the expedition for cutting off communication between Fort Phillip and the city, and it was in great part owing to Col. Boardman's naval experience that the expedition was successful, he himself leading his men on foot through the currents which threatened to defeat the enterprise. When the city was entered, he was appointed to the command of eight companies of infantry assigned to the duty of taking possession of the public buildings. General Butler subsequently appointed him one of the provost commissioners for the administration of the judicial business of the city, which position Major Boardman declined, preferring to accompany his regiment. Upon the promotion of Col. Paine, Major Boardman was commissioned Lieut.-Colonel, and upon the death of Colonel Bean, he was promoted to the chief command, which place he has filled with marked ability. He was by nature honest, generous, and brave. In the midst of the temptations and facilities for plunder which surrounded him, his personal integrity has remained as unquestioned and unsuspected as his personal courage. His death is undoubtedly due to that fearlessness in action for which he was distinguished. The state could not have lost a man who has reflected more honor upon the service."

Col. Boardman's funeral took place from the residence of his uncle, Josiah A. Noonan, Esq. "A full representation of his personal friends and of leading citizens of Milwaukee were present to pay their last tribute of respect to his memory. Gen. Smith, Gen. Campbell, Col. Morgan, Dr. Getty, and Capt. Bean acted as pall-bearers. A regular military escort was tendered by Gen. Pope, but was declined out of deference to the wishes of Mrs. Boardman. The ceremonies, though brief, were exceedingly impressive and touching. A deep sense of sympathy with the sadly bereaved mother, whose only son has thus cruelly been taken away, and of sadness that an officer so young, so gallant, and so promising, should have met so untimely a fate, seemed to pervade the whole assembly."

676. Frederic⁶ Boardman (David,⁵ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of New Milford, Conn., born there July 20, 1817, married Sept. 17, 1845, HARRIET CANFIELD, born April 29, 1821, daughter of Col. Samuel Canfield. Mr. Frederic Boardman was in business as a druggist in New Milford, where he died July 17, 1876, and where his widow and daughters have since resided. Mrs. Boardman died Jan. 12, 1895, aged 73.

678. Elisha⁶ Boardman (Ozias,⁵ Elisha,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Morristown, Vt., was born in Canaan, Conn., Jan. 23, 1773. He married in 1798, at Spencertown, N. Y., HANNAH PRATT, born June 4, 1776. Mr. Elisha Boardman was a man of good education for the time in which he lived. He was the first militia captain, the first magistrate, the second town clerk in Morristown, and the first representative in the Vermont Assembly from that town, having repeated annual election for some fifteen years in succession. In politics he was a Federalist, as were all his brothers. He was a good and conscientious man, but it is not known that he joined any church. He died while at Burlington, Vt., Feb. 6, 1826, aged 53. His body was taken home by one called Uncle Boyington, a minister, and he was buried with the rest of his family at Morristown. His widow died Sept. 14, 1847, at the age of 71. Their children were all born at Morristown.

He married in 1802, at Morristown, LYDIA WHITNEY, born in Marlboro, Mass., in 1783, who had removed with her parents, Eliphalet and Lois (Holton) Whitney, to Morristown in 1798. Mr. Boardman when only nineteen years old went up from Connecticut to Morristown to begin clearing the land his father had bought there eight years previous, and not long before his death. With the help of a younger brother he built a house on it the next year, thus making it ready for his mother and his remaining brothers, who emigrated thither the following season. The last fifty years of his life were spent at Morristown, where he died Sept. 10, 1843, at the age of 69.

684. Alfred⁶ Boardman (Ozias,⁵ Elisha,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Morristown, Vt., was born in Canaan, Conn., May 11, 1782. He married Nov. 24, 1803, at Morristown, LYDIA LITTLE, born June 17, 1782, daughter of Mr. James Little, who emigrated to Morristown in 1800 from Litchfield County, Conn. Mr. Little was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and is said to have been one of three that survived out of several hundred, in one of the British prisons. Alfred was less than three years old when his father died, and had very limited opportunities for an education, as he emigrated at an early age with his mother and brothers to the wilderness of Northern Vermont; yet those who remember him, say that he was a man of more than ordinary information. He fell from a load of hay about ten years before his death, receiving injuries from which he never recovered. He could ride on horseback, but was able to walk very little after the accident. He died at Morristown Feb. 8, 1830, aged 48. His widow married in 1836, Mr. Wentworth of Crete, Ill., where she died July 7, 1855.

688. Lewis Catlin⁶ Boardman (William,⁵ Israel,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Hartford, Conn., was born there Feb. 17, 1786. He was named after a young uncle, his mother's brother, who enlisted in 1776, at the age of thirteen, as a fifer in the Revolutionary Army, and died not long after.* Lewis Catlin Boardman married Dec. 1, 1814,

* Lewis Catlin, youngest son of Mr. Ebenezer and Mrs. Mary (Holtum) Catlin, was born in Hartford, Jan. 9, 1763. His father died when he was three years old. The Revolutionary War broke out while he was yet a lad, and Lewis, who had learned to play the fife with skill, was often asked by the soldiers who came and went in the neighborhood of his mother's house, to play for them. He was thus at length enticed to enlist, first joining the army probably in the summer of 1776, while it was at Long Island. After its retreat to New York, and thence up the Hudson to Kingsbridge, Lewis sent the following letter home to his mother. Nothing was ever afterwards heard of him; it is supposed that he was either killed in some of the engagements which soon followed, or, what is more likely, that he was one of the 2,600 men taken by the British at Fort Washington, on the 15th of November following, great numbers of whom died in the SOPHRONIA WOODRUFF, daughter of Mr. Reuben Woodruff of Farmington. She died Dec. 11, 1831, and was buried in Farmington. Mr. Lewis C. Boardman learned with his father the mason's trade, and was associated with him from boyhood in his business as a mason and builder. He died March 23, 1839, and was buried in the old South Burying Ground in Hartford.

KINGSBRIDGE, Octob^r 8th, 1776.

Dear Mother:

I received your kind letter of 11th September which gives me great pleasure to hear from you. I always enjoy my health very well thank god and has everything I could wish for. As to my coming home to you I cannot at present tell you but will in less than 4 weeks give you a Satisfactory acct. of my coming home this winter or not. I can with pleasure inform you that every person loves me, and am so well used in every respect by everybody, that staying in the army seems a great pleasure to me, but however natural affection inclines me strongly to be with you.

For some very Important reasons General Washington Out of his great Abilities and knowledge thought it prudent to give up Long Island and New York to the English, and we are now Encamped at Kingsbridge which will be kept to the last extremity, for you may be assured they will get no farther without hard blows.

I am with respect Your dutifull son till death,

Lewis Catling.

689. Laura⁶ Boardman (William,⁵ Israel,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), born in Hartford July 23, 1788, married Sept. 24, 1809, ELI WADSWORTH of Hartford, son of Eli and Rachel (Cadwell) Wadsworth, and a descendant of Capt. Joseph Wadsworth, famous in connection with the story of the hiding of the Connecticut charter. Mr. Wadsworth was a jeweler and watchmaker, and at one time kept a store for this business in Front street, opposite the head of Ferry street, Hartford, in those days a good business quarter of the city. He was a man of much skill and ingenuity in his occupation, and an inventor of many useful contrivances. The family resided during his lifetime mostly in Albany and New York city. After his death by consumption Dec. 4, 1830, his widow returned to Hartford to live, and there died, also of consumption, April 27, 1844. She was an excellent woman, of great amiability and kindness of heart. She had a strong love of nature, and delighted in hearing the songs of the birds and the humming of insects. "Hear how they are praising God," she used often to say.

Her long life was entirely devoted to the good of others. After the death of her sister, Mrs. Goldthwaite, she took upon herself the care of her three orphan children, who looked upon her as a mother, and to whose education she devoted every energy. She cared for her widowed mother through her declining years until her death at the age of 84. In addition to her other cares, she was through life a continual helper of the poor and afflicted, visiting them in their homes, and interceding with others in every way for their interests. She was among such a true missionary, in all but the name. She was identified with charitable work of all kinds in her native city; she was one of the original directors of the "Union for Home Work," and for 25 years one of the almoners of the "Widows' Society." A sketch of her life and character is printed among other memorials of those women who were active in this latter society from its beginning. Her pastor, Rev. Joseph H. Twichell, wrote the following notice of her for the Hartford Courant, and on the Sabbath after her death preached a sermon in relation to her life.

MARY A. BOARDMAN. A TRIBUTE FROM MR. TWICHELL.

The death of Miss Mary A. Boardman last Monday evening, at the age of ninety, brought to its early close a life which will long be remembered in this community for the moral beauty by which it was graced. In her character were illustrated to a remarkable degree all the Christian traits, modesty, humility, unselfishness, kindness, a religious faith that was the spring of a boundless charity. For many years her thought, time, and strength were mainly devoted to the cause of alleviating the sorrows of the poor amongst us. Like her Divine Master she "went about doing good."

She knew how to pity the outcast. She bore upon her heart the burden of the distresses both of sin and of want that came in her way. As the almoner of the bounty of others she doubled the value of every gift her hand bestowed by the womanly sympathy she added to it. She succored the fainting spirit no less than the necessitous body. The ministry of her compassion was ever a true befriending of those on whom it fell. The story of that ministry,—how abundant it was, how fruitful of comfort and healing,—none but God knows.

It was impossible that anyone who had the great privilege of her acquaintance and who saw the manner of her life, should not accord to her his utmost admiration and reverence. Yet, of the honor in which she was held by all about her, she was herself, in her lowly-mindedness, apparently quite unconscious.

As she had lived a loving life, so she died a loving death, proving from first to last, in the riches of her soul, we must believe, the truth of the Lord's word that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Her strength, both of body and mind, was wondrously preserved. She presented through her whole octogenarian decade a charming example of a healthful, cheerful, active old age. It was not till a few months since that she was obliged to cease from moving about on her errands of mercy.

Her well-known, venerable form, her plain and simple garb, and her sweet brown face will be missed from our streets; but the precious recollection of them will remain to inspire unfading affection for her memory, and, let us hope, to teach those who survive her the lesson of her noble life. "May she rest in peace and awake to a joyful resurrection."

694. Jane⁶ Boardman (William,⁵ Israel,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Hartford March 26, 1801, married Aug. 2, 1831, FLAVEL GOLDTHWAITE, born in Longmeadow, Mass., June 12, 1799, son of Lieut. Erastus and Rhoda (Burt) Goldthwaite. Mr. Goldthwaite's paternal ancestor was Thomas Goldthwaite,* who came to New England in 1630,

* Researches in England in 1890 were successful in discovering the original home of the Goldthwaite family there. The earliest mention of the name found was at the Public Record Office, London, in a Lay Subsidy Roll for the Wapentake of Claro, West Riding of Yorkshire, dated the 20th year of Edward III (1347), where, among the persons taxed in the parish of Kirkby Malzeard, is found, 12th in a list of 27, the tax "de Hugone de Goldthwate." The locality in this parish where the family lived, and from which it took its name, is identified by the picturesque old manor house of the Yorke family standing on the spot, now called Gowthwaite Hall, but at earlier periods, Golthwayte, Goulthwayte, Gothwayte, Gowthayte, etc., as shown by its mention in the County Visitations, and elsewhere. It is situated on the River Nidd, three miles from the town of Pateley Bridge. A not very numerous family of Goldthwaites or Gowthwaites lived in this region, many of whose wills were found recorded in the Probate Registry at York. Members of the family removed farther to the south in the West Riding, and were found in the vicinity of the larger towns, Leeds, Halifax, Wakefield, and others. Among them Thomas was one of the most common Christian names. Of this family, Hugo de Goldthwate, 1347, above, must have been one of the early members, if not the progenitor.

Since these discoveries were made they have been found confirmed by the account of Gowthwaite in Mr. Harry Speight's valuable book, "Nidderdale and the Garden of the Nidd, a Yorkshire Rhineland." (London, 1894, pp. 514. Illustrated.) He says: "The first object of note met with on leaving Heathfield is Gowthwaite Hall, an interesting Elizabethan manor-house, built by the family of Yorke, who long resided here before Beverley became their home. The house stands on or near the site of a still older homestead, occupied during the Norman centuries by a family named Golthwaite or Gowthwaite, who probably derived their patronym from this place." Some of them were tenants of Fountains Abbey; in 1456 Thomas Golthwat had the charge of the Abbot of Fountains' sheep at Dacre. In 1480 John Golthwaite was the keeper of the lodge at Eastholme, and Robert Golthwaite, a descendant of this family, was a freeholder, living at Pateley Bridge in the middle of the last century. At the suppression of the monasteries (1538) Hayshaw and was a member of Rev. John Eliot's Church in Roxbury, whence he removed early to Salem, where, in the part of the town afterwards Danvers, Mr. Goldthwaite's ancestors resided till the time of his grandfather, also a Thomas Goldthwaite, who emigrated about 1763 from Salem to Springfield, Mass., and there married Lois, daughter of John and Sarah (Warriner) Stebbins of that town. This grandfather, Thomas,* served three years in the Revolutionary War, and was "invalided" at the close of his service.

Mr. Flavel Goldthwaite came to Hartford in 1818, and learned the cabinetmaker's trade in the family of Deacon Aaron Chapin, being apprenticed to his son, Mr. Laertes Chapin, who, with his father, carried on business on North Main Street, opposite the head of Trumbull Street; he was afterwards for a time the instructor in cabinet-making at the Deaf and Dumb Asylum in Hartford. In the autumn of 1820 he went to Charleston, S. C., where he remained for a year as teacher of a private school numbering about 50 pupils. Being from youth a lover of music, he prepared himself, while engaged in other pursuits in Hartford, to become a teacher of singing and also for playing the organ, and he afterwards was very successful as a singing teacher, and later was employed as organist and leader of the choir in the South Church, Hartford, a position which he occupied at the time of his death. His wife also was associated with him there as one of the singers. He was prominently identified with all musical enterprises in Hartford, being vice-president and director of the Jubal Society, and a member of the Hartford Glee Club, societies which included the leading musicians of the city at that time, the latter meeting at the homes of the different members, and both at intervals giving concerts of the best music. The two following notices of such a concert are taken from the American Mercury :

Grange, comprising about 400 acres, was held from Fountains Abbey by the families of Gill and Goldthwaite, the latter consisting of William Goldwathe and Robert Goldthuate. (See also Vol. 42, Surtees Soc. Publications, Memorials of Fountains Abbey, by J. R. Walbran.)

“ Oct. 21, 1823. The Jubal Society will give a concert of Sacred Music on Tuesday evening, the 21st inst., in the Brick Church (now the Center Church). Performance to commence at 7 o'clock.”

“ Oct. 28, 1823. The recent concert of the Jubal Society, under the direction of Mr. Goldthwaite, attracted the largest and most brilliant audience which ever assembled upon a similar occasion in this city. It was introduced by an overture on the organ by Mr. Pierson.”

Mr. Goldthwaite kept for a time a store on “ State St., nearly opposite Morgan’s Coffee House,” where he advertised in 1823 an assortment of musical instruments, bass and tenor viols, violins, bassoons, clarionets, German flutes with from one to six keys, fifes, bass viol and violin bows, strings and bridges, bassoon and clarionet reeds, drum sticks, instruction books for the clarionet, flute, fife, drum, and violin ; also repairing of musical instruments. Later he became again a teacher, and was at the time of his death principal of the South School in Hartford, which stood on the present site of St. Peter’s Church. At this period when he began teaching, new interest was being awakened in the work ; old methods were giving way to new and more enlightened ones ; much was being written on the subject, and great interest was taken in its discussion ; the improved educational systems of Europe were being studied, and to some extent followed in this country. Mr. Goldthwaite thought much on the matter, and read all that was written with regard to it, with a view to adopting what was best, as is proved by the books in his library. His earnestness and enthusiasm in this calling are shown by the fact that he was in the habit of calling together the parents of his pupils and delivering to them lectures, in which, while explaining his ideas in regard to the best modes of instruction, he endeavored to impress upon the fathers and mothers the importance of their co-operation in the work of their children’s education, urging them earnestly to visit the school that they might know what was being done there, and thus by their interest encourage both teacher and pupils. The manuscripts of some of these lectures remain to testify to his devotion to the work he had undertaken. One* who was then a member of his school, thus speaks of him: "I remember him as if it was only yesterday. He was a dark, handsome man, with brilliant eyes shining through his gold spectacles. He had a bright, cheerful manner, and was an excellent teacher, with that personal magnetism that so attaches scholars; and his singing was such a delight to my ear. I never saw any picture of him, but his face and manner have always remained fixed in my mind."

Mr. Goldthwaite and his wife were both members of the South Church, and were earnest Christians, beloved by all who knew them. He was a man of good physical development, tall, and of fine appearance. In his early days in Hartford he became a member of the Governor's Foot Guard, and in 1830 received a commission as 1st Lieutenant, with the rank of Captain, in that organization. He died very suddenly, March 3, 1836, in the prime of life, after a short illness, with inflammatory rheumatism, which struck to the vital organs. Resolutions expressing esteem, and sorrow for his untimely death, were passed by the church, and his pastor, Rev. Mr. Vanarsdalen, wrote a warmly appreciative obituary in regard to him, which was printed in the Connecticut Observer. Mrs. Goldthwaite survived her husband about nine years; she died of consumption Nov. 9, 1845, and was buried beside him in the old North Burying-Ground in Hartford. The same friend who was quoted in speaking of her mother's character, thus wrote of Mrs. Goldthwaite: "Dear Jane, how lovely she was! there was never a break in our friendship, and how often I recall her beautiful Christian faith and resignation when she knew she must (when only in the forties) leave her three fatherless daughters in the world. Did she — could she have known that they would find in Aunt Mary a stepmother of the rarest kind, and that God would cast their lines in pleasant places? They remember a great deal about her, I am sure, but they cannot know what a lovely temperament she carried through life.”

Of Mr. and Mrs. Goldthwaite's three daughters, the youngest, Mary, was born about a month after her father's death. She was a girl of uncommon promise, an enthusiastic student in the Hartford High School, where she graduated from the Classical Department, then under the charge of William B. Capron, afterwards a well-known missionary of the American Board in Madura, India. Mary became a teacher, first in a family school for boys in Cornwall, Conn., and afterwards at Newtown, L. I. She gave instruction in Greek, Latin, and mathematics, and at the same time delighted in employing her leisure hours in continuing her studies begun in school. She was especially fond of Greek, and was in the habit of reading every day her Greek Testament, and at the suggestion of Mr. Capron she took up the Odyssey, and finished it while in Cornwall. From her childhood she had been remarkably conscientious, and was of extreme amiability of character. Under the pastorate of Dr. Hawes she early joined the Center Church, and her life was that of an earnest, consistent Christian. She died June 16, 1857, at the age of 21. Her former teacher, Mr. Capron, in a letter written after her death, said of her, “She was the best scholar I ever had.”

The two older daughters of Mr. Goldthwaite, Charlotte and Jane, have also been teachers during the greater part of their lives. The latter graduated at the Hartford Female Seminary, then under the charge of that teacher of remarkable personal influence, Miss Frances A. Strong, in the class of 1853, consisting of 24 members, which has been somewhat noted in the history of that institution founded by Miss Catherine Beecher in 1827. She has since taught in various places, including the Brown School, the High School, and the Seminary in Hartford, and has also been the instructor of many private pupils. Charlotte also graduated at the Seminary, under Miss Strong in 1851, and afterwards continued there as a teacher till about 1871 under the successive principals, Miss Strong, Miss Crocker, Miss Ranney, Mr. Crosby, and Miss Beecher. In the autumn of 1889, after the death of their aunt, Mary A. Boardman, who had been to them a devoted mother from their childhood, the two sisters went to Europe, and there resided for about three years in Paris, London, and other cities of Great Britain and the continent. It was while in London in 1890, that Charlotte, who had recently taken great interest in the genealogy of her family, began the search which ended so successfully in finding the Boreman home in England. This discovery proved the foundation of much further knowledge in regard to the New England families of Boremans, since it was afterwards found to relate not only to Samuel of Wethersfield, the ancestor first sought for, but also to Thomas of Ipswich, now proved to be his cousin. It was this success which has led her on to prepare this account of the family in England, and to add to it the genealogy of Samuel's descendants in America, so far as it has been possible to collect their records.

696. Charles Holtom⁶ Boardman (William,⁵ Israel,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Hartford, Conn., born there Aug. 26, 1810, married Nov. 2, 1835, NANCY MARIA HOLMES, daughter of Howell and Sally (Carter) Holmes of Glastonbury, Conn. Mr. Boardman learned the book-binder's trade as an apprentice of the late D. F. Robinson; Mrs. Robinson was an old friend and neighbor of his mother's family, and he lived with them during his apprenticeship, as was the good old fashion of those times. Not long after he became of age, he went to the West, and there bought and began to cultivate a tract of land in Grafton, Ill., on the east bank of the Mississippi River, nearly opposite St. Louis, but, being taken with chills and fever, he sold his land after about two years, and returned home, afterwards working at his trade in Hartford. He retired from that business many years since, and having considerable land in connection with his home in the suburbs of Hartford, has since devoted himself to farming occupations. He is living with his daughter Frances, and his granddaughter Harriet Jennet, enjoying a hale old age. He is a member of the South Congregational Church in Hartford, and is an earnest student of the Bible. He is especially interested in its prophecies, the fulfilment of which he is watching for, and sees in the great events that are taking place in the world's history.

VEDDER of Lee, Mass., and Schenectady, N. Y. Mr. Vedder died early, and she lived many years a widow, taking charge of her father's family after her mother's death. She was dear to them all, and in her later life was always a welcome guest in her brother's and sisters' families, who took pleasure in trying to repay her for her former motherly kindness. She died at the age of about 93. Having no children of her own, she adopted during her life two daughters. The first of these, Julia Hanmer, a second cousin on her mother's side, married Stephen Riggs of Schenectady, for a number of years the owner and editor of the Schenectady Cabinet, a weekly newspaper, and afterwards editor of Putnam's Magazine, which became merged in Scribner's. Mrs. Riggs died about 1893. The second of the adopted daughters married a gentleman of worth and intelligence, of a name now forgotten.

719. Mary Hanmer⁶ Boardman (George,⁵ Charles,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Wethersfield, March 22, 1797; bapt. June 11, 1797; married REV. HENRY HOTCHKISS. Mr. Hotchkiss' health failed about the time of his marriage, and he went South, where, after engaging for a time in missionary work in connection with the Presbyterian Church, he died about 1832 of consumption. Mrs. Hotchkiss is spoken of as a very beautiful woman in youth, retaining her youthful figure and handsome features to old age. Like her three sisters, she retained also her mental vigor, and kept to the last a keen interest in the literature of the day. She died in 1892, at the age of 95.

When still a youth he went to Albany, where he learned the carpenter's trade with his uncle, Elder John Boardman. He was afterwards for over 40 years in business in that city, as a contractor and builder. He died in Schenectady, Feb. 13, 1885. He was highly respected by all who knew him, and, as was said by his pastor, "lived and died a Christian gentleman." Mrs.

Boardman, whose family * were descendants of one of the first Dutch settlers of Albany, died Feb. 26, 1876.

721. Frances M.⁶ Boardman (George,⁵ Charles,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Wethersfield, Conn., March 6, 1805; bapt. June 29, 1805; married June 17, 1835, DR. JAMES SMITH DOUGLAS, born at Westmoreland, N. Y., July 4, 1801. Dr. Douglas took a classical course at Madison University, Hamilton, N. Y., where he received the degree of A.M., and later, in 1870, the same institution conferred on him the title of Ph.D. He graduated from Fairfield Medical College, N. Y., in 1825, and practiced as an allopathic physician in Oswego and Hamilton for twenty years. Becoming deeply interested in the theory and principles of homeopathy, after much research, he adopted its practice, and during a subsequent career of over thirty years became widely known in this country and Europe as a writer of various medical works, his works on intermittent fever and a medical guide for home practice having reached their fourteenth edition during his life. He removed with his family to Milwaukee in 1848, and practiced there until 1877. In 1855 Dr. Douglas accepted the chair of Materia Medica and Special Pathology and Diagnosis in the Homeopathic College, Cleveland, Ohio, holding it for three seasons. He was prominent in the Homeopathic Medical Society of Wisconsin, and was a member of the American Homeopathic Institute, at one time its president, and once its annual orator. He was an earnest, active Christian, a member of the Baptist Church. After a stroke of paralysis in 1877, which left his mind still clear and vigorous, he removed with his wife to the southern home of his daughter, Mrs. Townsend, where he passed the remaining months of his life, and died Aug., 1878, at McComb City, Miss.

* An account of the Pruyn family is given in the N. Y. Gen. and Biog. Record for Jan., 1883.

Mrs. Frances Boardman Douglas was a woman of fine intellectual attainment, a worthy companion of her scholarly husband. Highly artistic in temperament and taste, painting and drawing were her recreation in her leisure hours. The study of botany was a special delight, and she learned the "new system" of that science, after fifty years of age. She pursued its study with ardor, materially assisting her husband in his compilation of the Flora of Wisconsin, twenty volumes of which he presented to his Alma Mater, Madison University, in 1871. Astronomy was also a favorite study. Her maps and glass were her close companions up to the last of her life, her sight and memory remaining clear to the end. A sunny, earnest Christian, her influence was everywhere felt, especially by the young men and women, among whom she had a host of "lovers." She organized literary clubs, herself taking an active part. Only two weeks before her death, she read at a gathering of one such a most charming original contribution, with the faultless elocution which lent additional charm to all her efforts of this kind. Her pastor said of her, "Truly, her children rise up and call her blessed." A noble, beautiful life she set before them, encouraging, repressing, moulding, ever leading on to the highest mark in Christian and intellectual attainment.

An instance of the living faith which permeated her whole life occurred a few years before her death. With one of her daughters, she was overtaken in a sudden and furious storm on the Gulf of Mexico. It was what is termed a "White Squall." The sea was churned to a white foam, and the air was white as the sea, with flying waves, combed to shreds. The ship was disabled, and turning round and round, while every now and then a plank gave way with a sound like that of a gun. Escape from the deck to the cabin was cut off. Securely fastened to the railing they watched the wondrous sight. The daughter said, "Mother are you afraid?" "No, child." "But you heard the captain say we might go down in twenty minutes." "Yes, daughter (with a luminous smile), but the everlasting arms are underneath." That faith, that implicit trust, was the key note of her life. By it she lived and died and was not afraid. Her death occurred in July, 1892, in her 88th year.

Y., George W. Eaton, D.D., LL.D., born July 3, 1804, in Huntington, Pa., son of Joseph and Bathsheba (Sackett) Eaton. Dr. Eaton was a Baptist clergyman, and a leading man in his denomination. He became in 1833, professor, and was afterwards for many years and till his death, president of Madison (now Colgate) University, Hamilton, N. Y. He was a genial man with a winning manner, which made him very popular, and he was greatly revered and esteemed by his students. One of his nephews writes of him: "At this day I occasionally meet some of his boys, as he used to call them, now D.D.'s themselves, who never get tired in talking of him, and I not tired of hearing them, for I loved Uncle Eaton very dearly." He died Aug. 3, 1872. Mrs. Eaton died at Liberty, Mo., Jan. 18, 1893, in her 86th year. The Chancellor of Madison University at her funeral paid a glowing tribute to her, as one whose strength of character and great practical common sense had made her influence of much assistance to that institution in some of the crises through which it had been called to pass.

Her old age was vigorous, both mentally and physically. She kept a keen interest in literature and art, and after reaching the age of seventy took up painting in oils, in which she is said to have achieved remarkable success. Her oldest son was born at Georgetown, Ky., the others at Hamilton.

741. Rev. George Smith⁶ Boardman, D.D. (John,⁵ Charles,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), born in Albany, N. Y., Dec. 29, 1796, married May 19, 1823, ALIDA MARIA LANE, born April 4, 1802, daughter of Derick Lane of Troy, N. Y. She died at Watertown, N. Y., Nov. 20, 1830. Her husband married 2d, Feb. 28, 1832, Sarah Brayton, eldest daughter of George and Sarah (Swan) Brayton of Westernville, Oneida Co., N. Y. She died July 18, 1849. Dr. Boardman married for the third time, June 16, 1856, Sophia Ledyard Childs of Cazenovia, N. Y. He died Feb. 7, 1877, at Cazenovia, and there his widow now resides.

Dr. Boardman graduated at Union College in 1816, and at Princeton Theological Seminary in 1819. He became pastor of the church in Watertown, N. Y., in 1821, where he had a fruitful ministry of sixteen years. In 1837 he accepted a call to one of the churches in Rochester, and remained there for six years, except that for six months in 1842 he labored at Columbus, Ohio, in connection with a very marked revival of religion in that place. In 1843 he took charge of the church at Rome, N. Y., which he left in 1847 to enter upon a short pastorate at Cherry Valley, which he again left in 1850 to enter upon his longer and last, and perhaps most fruitful, pastorate in Cazenovia. The several changes of place which characterized the period of his life from 1837 to 1850, were occasioned by domestic bereavements, which for a time almost overcame him, and made change necessary. His pastorate in Cazenovia continued fourteen years, when impaired health required his release from the labors and responsibilities of a pastoral charge. In 1865 he went with his wife to Europe, being absent about fourteen months, and returned with his health restored, and his strength recuperated by rest and travel.

He thereafter eagerly and vigorously occupied himself in his chosen profession, either as an occasional, or stated supply, preaching for the last time on his 80th birthday in the church in Cazenovia, on the text, "Mine age is as nothing before thee," a sermon which was printed at the request of his former parishioners. One of his brother clergymen, who had long known him, wrote after his death: "His congregation at Cazenovia was one of the most intelligent in the State, and the best people among them appreciated him most highly, and derived great profit from his ministrations. He was very remarkable for his love of his work, and his enthusiasm in preaching. He never seemed to tire of active labor in his Master's service, and to the very close of his life of four score years, he delighted in the pulpit. He mingled in a rare degree the ripeness of age and the vivacity of youth, and was always at home in the social circle. Interested in all the great movements of the day, devotedly attached to his own branch of the church, yet with a true and catholic spirit, he was full of information about ecclesiastical and political affairs, and his conversation on these themes was always fresh and vigorous. He retained his physical and mental faculties to the very last, and at the ripe age of 80 years, without the pains of a long and lingering sickness, he calmly and peacefully entered into rest, leaving behind him that memory of the just which is forever blessed."

764. Dea. Samuel Ward⁶ Boardman (Timothy,⁵ Timothy,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Middlebury, Vt., born in Rutland Nov. 27, 1789, married in Pittsford, Vt., May 5, 1823, ANN GILBERT, born in Oakham, Mass., Dec., 1793. Dea. Boardman lived in Pittsford from 1817 to 1836, removed thence to Castleton, Vt., 1837 to 1860, and afterwards to Middlebury. He died May 13, 1870. He was from childhood fond of books, and a diligent reader through life. He was a good scholar, and of more than average breadth of studies; was a teacher, occasional leader of meetings, a Sabbath-school worker, selectman in the town, and deacon in the church. He was a life-long patron of education and of benevolent causes; a reformer, also, opposing intemperance, tobacco, secret societies, slavery, and war. For a generation he was a frequent contributor to the press, in many journals of different States. To show the evils of international war, was the great object of his life. He was still writing on "Peace" when death came, and he left an unfinished article on that subject. He seemed to have been a Christian from earliest childhood; it was said of him after his death by one who knew him intimately, "I have known no person who more uniformly than he sought perfect fairness."

Mrs. Ann Gilbert, his wife, was a teacher at fifteen, and afterwards taught more advanced pupils. She was an apt scholar, and read extensively. She was a good singer, and attained considerable skill in embroidery and in painting; her handwriting was handsome. She, in Pittsford, at fifteen years of age, and her husband in West Rutland, at eighteen, were gathered into the church in the general revivals of 1808. Her religion, like her husband's, was rather deep than demonstrative. She prayed with her children when they were young, and much for them after they entered the ministry, and as long as she lived. She died Nov. 9, 1876, and lies buried beside her husband in Pittsford.

Mr. Stedman's father removed early to Chicopee, Mass., which was then a part of Springfield, and he himself settled in Springfield immediately after his marriage, and later bought a farm in Chicopee, which he cultivated, and where he died Oct. 5, 1842. Mrs. Sally, his widow, afterwards removed to the home of her son-in-law, Rev. Luther Clapp, in Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, a suburb of Milwaukee, and there died Feb. 3, 1853. Mrs. Stedman was in her youth a member of the noted school of the Misses Pierce in Litchfield. When less than nine years old, she gave such clear evidence of piety that she was then received into the church in Middletown, the home of her grandparents. She was known through life as a devoted Christian.

Mr. Boardman was settled over the Congregational Church in North Haven, Conn., in 1820, and afterwards, in 1835, over that in Northford, New Haven County, Conn., where he died Oct. 2, 1849, aged 55. His widow died March 8, 1887, in Northford. One of Mr. Boardman's former parishioners thus writes of him: "He was a man of marked ability and fine intellectual endowment, and one far beyond his day in spiritual teaching. I well remember when he had once been absent on a vacation, and had met Rev. Mr. Finney, how he returned inspired by his preaching, and seemed to bring a new life to his people. He was as a pastor, genial, tender, and full of sympathy, and as a pulpit orator he was far more than the average. His greatest obstacle was infirm health, and it was on account of the failure of this that he was obliged to leave his first pastorate in North Haven for the smaller parish of Northford."

Y., son of Job C. and Esther (Brown) Smith. "With the usual family and household cares, Mrs. Smith has long been interested in various charities, and her life has been a busy and useful one. She is an enthusiastic admirer of the beautiful in nature and art, is an appreciative reader, and well versed in the current literature and history of our times. Fidelity to and love for her family and friends, a tender sympathy for the deserving, a love of absolute truth and candor, are her striking characteristics." Mr. and Mrs. Smith celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at their home on March 29, 1893, the clergyman who married them being present, together with a large number of relatives and friends. Both bride and groom are in excellent health, and attend to their daily duties as when many years younger. Mr. William Brown Smith may be justly spoken of as one of the leading citizens of Syracuse, and he has been identified with its business and social growth to such a degree that little can be said of the development of the city without mention of his name. By industry and economy he has accumulated a large property including a vast acreage in the western part of the city and suburbs, where are located the extensive nurseries and stock breeding establishment of the Smiths & Powell Company, of which he is the president, and whose business he carries on with the aid of his sons and his son-in-law.

887. Capt. Isaac Smith⁶ Boardman (Amos,⁵ Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Decatur, Ill., born in Seneca Co., N. Y., Oct. 3, 1803, removed with his parents, when young, to Dearborn Co., Ind., and thence to Ripley Co., Ind. He located first at Columbus, Bartholomew Co., Ind., where he married Jan. 3, 1831, MARGARET CHITTY, born March 1, 1809, in the State of North Carolina. In 1854 he removed to Macon Co., Ill., settling in Wheatland township, near Decatur. While a resident of Columbus he served fourteen years as clerk and recorder of Bartholomew Co., and was afterwards elected circuit clerk of the county, holding the office till he removed to Illinois. In 1846, when the Mexican war broke out, he enlisted, and served one year as the captain of a company. He cast his first vote for Gen. Jackson for president in 1828, and always voted for the Democratic nominees. His wife died April 15, 1868. Mr. Boardman died Oct. 31, 1883, in his 80th year. A notice published in the local paper at that time says of him, "Capt. Boardman was one of the best known farmers and stock raisers in this section. He was a man whose experience in the management of public affairs was quite valuable to the county in the early days, having served as a member of the county board for Wheatland township from 1860 to 1865, and again from 1867 to 1870. He lived an exemplary life, and had the highest respect of his neighbors and acquaintances, who feel that the county has lost a good citizen in his death. He was the owner of about 500 acres of farming land in Wheatland, and left an estate valued at about $80,000." His large family live in the same neighborhood, his son and daughter, Thomas and Mary, occupying the old homestead.

- 1578+ EDWARD, b. July 4, 1854; m. Mary Jane Blasengame.

888. David Goodrich⁶ Boardman (Amos,⁵ Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Ripley County, Indiana, and Iowa, born near Wilmington, Dearborn Co., Ind., Aug. 12, 1811, married June 15, 1837, CLARISSA STEVENSON, born Dec. 22, 1816, daughter of William and Mary Stevenson. She died March 6, 1845. He married 2d, Oct. 18, 1848, ELIZA MARIA FULLER, daughter of Palemon and Sarah Fuller. He died April 1, 1891.

David Goodrich Boardman was considered a man of more than ordinary ability. Born in a block-house or rude fort, constructed as a defense from the Indians, his opportunities for an education were extremely limited. With an energy born of an insatiable thirst for knowledge, he grasped every available means for information, until he became not only a man of wide intelligence, but one well versed in many of the sciences. He was a Whig in politics, as his father had been before him, and he represented his county in the State legislature, besides holding at home such minor offices as justice of the peace and others. He began the practice of law also, but his health succumbing to overwork, and the shock of grief caused by the death of his wife, he retired from public life, and settled with his family about 1853 on a farm in Central Iowa. Although always of irreproachable moral life, he was not a professed Christian till, at the age of fifty-five, he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was mentally afflicted the last few years of his life, and died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Phelps, in Knoxville, Iowa, in his eightieth year. In the family Bible of Mr. David Boardman, which is now in the possession of his daughter, Mrs. Norwood, of Perry, Iowa, he had made the following entries, showing an intelligent interest in his family genealogy; he, of course, mistakes in making his great-grandfather Benjamin the English emigrant:

“David Boardman, son of Amos Boardman, who was the son of Thaddeus, who was the son of Benjamin, who emigrated from England.”

“Grandmothers, Noble, Smith, Goodrich.”

889. Rebecca⁶ Boardman (Amos,⁵ Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), born in Wilmington, Indiana, Nov. 20, 1813, married in Ripley County, Ind., Jan. 9, 1834, GEORGE W. CABLE. They lived a short time in Lawrenceburgh, Ind., where their oldest daughter was born in 1834. They next went to Greensburg, Ind., where Mr. Cable failed in the financial crisis of 1837, and they then removed to New Orleans. Mr. Cable was in prosperous business there until 1849, when his health and business failed, and he died after years of invalidism, Feb. 28, 1859, his 48th birthday. The Civil War broke up the home, and scattered the family for a time, the two sons, though mere boys, enlisting in the Confederate Army, and the others, between 1863 and 1865, making their home in Mississippi. They returned afterwards to New Orleans, living there till they came North in 1886, and settled in Northampton, Mass. Here Mrs. Cable died July 31, 1890.

906. Rev. William Edwin⁶ Boardman (Isaac,⁵ Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Smithboro, Tioga Co., N. Y., Oct. 11, 1810; married Feb. 21, 1837, MARY M. ADAMS, daughter of Dr. J. Adams of Detroit, Mich. They had no children.

Mr. Boardman began life with the intention of engaging in business, and becoming a man of wealth. He was already finding success in such pursuits when his attention was drawn to the claims of religion; he became converted, and decided to give up business and study for the ministry. After two years devoted to this object, he was again led to change his intention, and go again into business pursuits, hoping to be more useful by educating others for usefulness with the money he saw the opportunity of gaining. Not long after, he was married, and with his wife, who now first became a Christian, was soon led to a deeper religious experience, and to a renewed desire of himself engaging in spreading the Gospel to others. With this object in view they removed to Illinois, and without yet venturing to give up altogether his means of support, he spent three or four years there in missionary labor in connection with other pursuits. It was while engaged in such labor in the northern part of the State, that Mr. Boardman was led to take those views of the privileges of Christian believers, best expressed in the title of his widely-read book, "The Higher Christian Life," to the diffusion of which most of his after life was devoted. Having long felt his own need of special training for his work, he now, at the age of 34, entered Lane Theological Seminary in Ohio. With the views and experiences that were now his, he felt the necessity for evangelical work among Christians, especially among young men preparing for the ministry, and while pursuing for three years a course of study, was especially successful in gaining many among his fellow students to be sharers in the richer experiences he felt himself to have attained. After a year spent later in religious work in Indiana, he went to Yale to attend the lectures of Dr. Taylor, and while in New Haven preached often in the surrounding neighborhood. He returned next to Michigan, which had been his home at the time of his marriage, and worked there establishing Sunday-schools in connection with the American Sunday-school Union, whose secretary he afterwards became. It was not long after that he wrote his best-known book, "The Higher Christian Life," which had an immense sale for a book of that class. It was printed not only in America, but there were many editions of it published in England, the sale reaching thousands. One firm issued an edition of which they sold 60,000 copies. When the Civil War broke out, Mr. Boardman was in California, where he and his wife had gone for needed change of air. He returned East in 1862, and became Secretary of the Christian Commission, which worked so wonderfully for the help of the soldiers, a position for which he was well fitted by the power of organization he possessed. He went for a time to Europe after the War for the health of his wife and sister, and returning, he wrote his second book, "He that Overcometh." Afterwards, he went to England where he was welcomed by the many who had read his "Higher Christian Life," by which he was now well known. Here he held many meetings in halls, schoolrooms, and drawing-rooms, all fully attended. He established Holiness Conventions, which were held in various cities of America, and wrote a third book, "Gladness in Jesus." The latter portion of his life was spent mostly in England; he took up his residence in London and preached to large audiences in many cities and towns, both in England and Scotland. He went also to Sweden, and worked there for many months. He died in London Feb. 4, 1886, after a short illness of paralysis, in his 77th year. In all his labors Mr. Boardman's wife was not only a sympathizing and valued helper, but she was through life an inspiration to him in many ways. Her home is now in London. She wrote an interesting memoir of her husband, published in 1887, entitled "Life and Labours of Rev. W. E. Boardman," from which these facts in relation to him have been taken.

907. Thaddeus De Witt⁶ Boardman (Isaac,⁵ Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Dixon, Ill., born in Smithboro, Tioga Co., N. Volunteers. They had one son, who died at the age of two years in Dixon, Ill. Mrs. Bowman died in Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 27, 1885.

While on a visit to California, at the time of the Civil War, the Christian Commission, of which her brother, Rev. W. E. Boardman, was secretary, authorized Mrs. Bowman to act as their agent. She organized the ladies of San Francisco, secured the coöperation of the leading men and women of that city, infused into the work her own devotion and patriotic ardor, and, after some weeks of effort, had the extreme delight of seeing one hundred thousand dollars paid into the treasury of the commission, as the result of the movement she had established.

910. Simon Buel⁶ Boardman (David,⁵ Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born Feb. 20, 1813, in Dearborn Co., Ind., married Oct. 16, 1834, MARGARET FEE. They removed

922. Mahlon⁶ Boardman (David,⁵ Thaddeus,⁴ Benjamin,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Augusta, Marion Co., Ind., May 4, 1833, went to Iowa in 1847, and there enlisted in 1861 in the Union Army under Gen. Grant. In an encounter with the enemy he was shot, the large ball entering his body at the collar-bone, and coming out under the shoulder-blade, carrying away a portion of the lung. He was left for dead, but afterwards, showing signs of life, he was taken to the hospital in Cincinnati, and eventually recovered, though his health has always since been poor. When he was able, he returned to Iowa, where he soon after married, and had two children, his wife dying when they were quite young.

943. Chauncey⁶ Boardman (Jonathan,⁵ Jonathan,⁴ Jonathan,³ Jonathan,² Samuel¹), of Bristol, Conn., was born in Rocky Hill, Conn., Nov. 16, 1790, and removed with his father's family to Bristol when about seven years old. He married Sept. 25, 1812, at Bristol, ROXANA ADAMS, daughter of Amasa Adams of Wethersfield. Mr. Chauncey Boardman became prominent as a clock manufacturer, a business for which Bristol came to be very widely famous. He was engaged for more than forty years in the making, first of wooden, and afterwards of brass clocks, and thereby accumulated a handsome property. Late in life he was unfortunate in his business, and lost what he had thus gained. He was a benevolent man and a Christian, contributing largely to all good enterprises. He died Aug. 11, 1857, in his 67th year.

952. Major Elijah⁶ Boardman (Elijah,⁵ Elnathan,⁴ Fonathan,³ Fonathan,² *Samuel*¹), of the United States Army, was born in Rocky Hill, Conn., in 1787, and was baptized there Dec. 20, 1787. He married in Hartford, April 27, 1809, FRANCES SEYMOUR (Christ Church Records). The notice of his marriage appears in the American Mercury of May 11, 1809: "Married by the Rev. Mr. Rayner, Cornet Elijah Boardman of the United States Army to Miss Fanny Seymour, daughter of the late Mr. Robert Seymour of this city." Under date of Aug. 17, 1808, Cornet Elijah Boardman, Regiment of Light Dragoons, is noted in the Connecticut Courant as under appointment from Washington "to raise for a limited time an additional military force." Oct. 18, 1815, Capt. E. Boardman advertises from his office near the Little Bridge, Hartford, the procuring of land warrants from Washington for discharged soldiers. He was at that time captain in the 6th U. S. Infantry. While Captain Boardman was recruiting in Hartford in the summer and autumn of 1814, complaint was made by citizens of disturbance caused by the beating of drums and the martial music of the recruiting parties as they paraded Hartford streets. Captain Boardman, perhaps taking offense at the manner in which the complaints were made, refused to give heed to them, with the result that he was prosecuted and fined. The affair caused considerable interest at the time, and was made use of to some extent as a party matter in the town, the Republicans taking the side of Captain Boardman, while he was condemned by the Federalists.

Capt. Boardman remained through life in the army, and is found stationed at various places. He was at Plattsburg, N. Y., in 1818 and 1819, and was last at Fort Niagara. Here "died Sept. 29, 1829, Mrs. Fanny Boardman, aged 41, wife of Major Elijah Boardman of the United States Army," as appears from the American Mercury. In the same paper, under date of April 9, 1832, is the following notice: "Died at Fort Niagara on the 22d ult., Major Elijah Boardman of the United States Army, and formerly of this city, after an illness of eight days with an inflammation of the lungs; aged 44." It is not known whether he left children, but the probability is that he did not.

953. Capt. James⁶ Boardman (Elijah,⁵ Elnathan,⁴ Jonathan,³ Jonathan,² *Smauel*¹), of New York city, born about 1790, in Rocky Hill, Conn., and there baptized Sept. 26, 1790, married about 1810 LYDIA FOOTE, born Dec. 15, 1785, daughter of Isaac and Lydia (Tyler) Foote of Branford, Conn. (Northford Society), the latter, daughter of Peter Tyler of the same town. Mrs. Boardman's grandfather was Major Isaac Foote of Branford, an officer in the French War, concerning whom Rev. Thomas Robbins, D.D., wrote a sketch, printed pp. 309 to 312 of the Foote Genealogy, extolling him as a Christian gentleman and soldier. In returning from war Major Foote was obliged by the condition of his health to stop at Albany, where he died, Oct. 7, 1755, aged 38. His gravestone is to be seen in the old cemetery at Greenbush, opposite the lower part of the city of Albany. His wife was Mary Hall, daughter of John Hall of Wallingford, Conn.

James Boardman was commissioned First Lieutenant in the 26th Regiment of Infantry, U. S. Army, April 21, 1814, remaining in service until June, 1815, about which time he and his family settled in New York, their home, as it would seem, having been previously in Wallingford, Conn. As shown by deeds in Wethersfield records, he was of New York in 1816; also in 1831. In 1835 he was inspector of customs in New York, and held that office till near the time of his death, which took place before 1842. No record has been found of his commission as captain, but he was always so called in later life. His picture, taken when young, in uniform, shows him to have been a very handsome man. His widow survived him, and died at Stapleton, Staten Island, April 30, 1857. Her portrait, in possession of her descendants, is described as that of a lovely-looking old lady.

960. Allyn⁶ Boardman (John⁵, John⁴, Jonathan³, Jonathan², Samuel¹), of Covert, Seneca Co., N. Y., born in Wethersfield in 1774, married Jan. 1, 1797, in Great Barrington, Mass., PHOEBE WOODWORTH, born Dec. 4, 1776, daughter of Stephen and Eunice (Lathrop) Woodworth of Great Barrington. Mr. Boardman was a tanner and currier. In March, 1799, he removed his family and goods on ox-sleds from Great Barrington to Covert, where he lived the remainder of his life. At the time of his arrival the country was new, there being not more than ten families in the town, five miles square. Mr. Boardman filled some minor offices in Covert, accumulated a good property, and raised a large family of children, some of whom came to be among the most distinguished of those who have borne the Boardman name. He died Feb. 12, 1837, aged 63. His widow died Sept. 28, 1856, in her 80th year.

Mrs. Colton's aunt, Mehitabel, widow of Capt. Pownal Deming, had married her husband's father, Major Luther Colton, as second wife. Mr. and Mrs. Sabin Colton settled first in Springfield, Mass., and thence in April, 1824, removed to Philadelphia, where they afterwards lived, and where Mrs. Colton died Dec. 10, 1852, in her 65th year. Mr. Colton died in Gwynedd, Montgomery Co., Pa., Nov. 10, 1857, aged 74. He was a successful merchant in Philadelphia.

973. Capt. Ashbel⁶ Boardman (Fason,⁵ Fohn,⁴ Fonathan,³ Fonathan,² *Samuel*¹), of Rocky Hill, Conn., born there Jan. 2, 1790; married Mch. 11, 1822, EVELINE PALMER, third daughter of Hon. William Palmer of East Haddam, Conn. Capt. Ashbel, the third of three successive generations of sea captains, possessed great nautical talent. He was master of the Richmond, one of a line of vessels owned by his father, which sailed to Richmond, Va., and to the West Indies. He died at the early age of 34, being lost at sea on a voyage in which he set out, Nov. 20, 1823, the morning after the birth of his only son, named also Ashbel. The church record of Rocky Hill says, "Nov. 1823, Ashbel Boardman, aged 34, with three others went to Martinico, and not been heard from." His widow, Mrs. Eveline (Palmer) Boardman, married Sept. 24, 1840, Richard W. Miller of East Haddam. They had no children.

Capt. John was a seaman, like his father and grandfather, and master of one or more vessels. He died of typhus fever, Oct. 18, 1837, aged 45. (Church Rec.) His widow married as second wife, Aug. 21, 1842, Charles Hurlbut, and died June 6, 1859, in New Britain, Conn.

977. Thomas Curtis⁶ Boardman (Fason,⁵ Fohn,⁴ Fonathan,³ Fonathan,² *Samuel*¹), of East Haddam, Conn., was born in Rocky Hill, March 29, 1797. He married Jan. 6, 1822, SOPHRONIA PALMER, born Feb. 5, 1799, eldest daughter of Hon. William Palmer of East Haddam, and sister of the wife of Captain Ashbel Boardman, his brother. Mr. Thomas Curtis Boardman was named after his mother's father, Dea. Thomas Curtis of Rocky Hill (died Nov. 6, 1789, aged 80), who seems to have been a man much trusted in church and town affairs. He was born Oct. 8, 1710, the son of Jonathan Curtis of Wethersfield and Hepzibah Hastings of Hatfield, daughter of Dr. Thomas Hastings, physician of that town, who died about 1712. The marriage in the church record of Rocky Hill reads: "Jonathan Curtis of Wethersfield and Hephzibah Hastings of Hatfield were married on the 5th day of June, Anno Domini 1705, by Rev. Mr. William Williams, minister in said Hatfield."

Mr. Thomas Curtis Boardman went from Rocky Hill when he was about 18, to Millington, a part of East Haddam, where he was associated as clerk with his cousin, William Bulkley Boardman, then in business there, and he afterwards conducted the business himself in partnership with Mr. Aaron Niles. In 1836 he removed to East Haddam, and was elected that year cashier of the East Haddam Bank, a position he held till the time of his death. He died Sept. 8, 1865, in consequence of an accident. He was at the dock in East Haddam, watching the landing of the Hartford boat; the wind, which was blowing hard at the time, caused an unusual strain on the cable holding the vessel, and a piece of wood through which it ran was thus broken off and struck Mr. Boardman on the head and breast, killing him instantly. His widow died the next spring, March 10, 1866, aged 67.

of Meriden, born March 20, 1815, daughter of James and Anne (Taylor) Frary of Cromwell and Meriden, Conn., and a descendant of Lieut. Samuel and Sarah (Bordman) Frary of Cromwell. Mr. Boardman began when sixteen years old to learn in Meriden the making of britannia hollow-ware, and afterwards settled in Chester, Conn., where he commenced the manufacture of goods in that line. In 1842 he transferred his business to East Haddam, enlarging and changing it, by beginning the making of silver-plated ware of various kinds, a business which he devoted his life to building up, and which through his ability, integrity, and perseverance, came, under the firm name of Luther Boardman & Son, to be among the foremost concerns for the making of nickel, silver, and silver-plated goods. He had practical experience in overcoming the prejudice of dealers against American-made ware, and it is said to be largely due to his energy and perseverance that it is to-day so much sought after. Mr. Boardman was active in all State and local enterprises. He was the first vice-president of the Conn. Valley Railroad, was a member of the General Assembly in 1864-5; had been presidential elector, was a director of the National Bank of New England, and president of the Hartford & Long Island Steamboat Company. He was benevolent, just in his dealings, a kind husband and father; his good judgment made his advice often sought for. He died, greatly lamented, March 29, 1887, leaving a widow and an only son, who continues to carry on the business in East Haddam.

COIT. She was the mother of his first six children, and died May 18, 1839. He married Feb. 27, 1840, BETSEY NEAL, the mother of his seventh and youngest child, who died Feb. 13, 1841. He afterwards married, Nov. 10, 1841, ORRA NEWTON, who died Dec. 28, 1842, and March 28, 1843, he married MARY HOWARD, who survived him. Mr. Boardman carried on the old homestead farm in Norwich for many years, and finally removed to the West, where he died in 1887, at the age of 85, in Boardman, Wisconsin, a town named for one of his sons.

Stephen Carver Boardman was one of the old-time abolitionists, and thoroughly believed, with Garrison, that "immediate emancipation was the right of every slave and the duty of every master." He was a man of intelligence, and had made good use of the opportunities for reading furnished by the library of Dartmouth College, near which his home was situated, to become well versed in history, to which knowledge was added a thorough familiarity with the Bible. He was thus able to defend his convictions both in speech and by writing, which he was not slow to do whenever the occasion presented. But it was not only so that he showed his earnestness for the cause he had espoused, for he took an active part also in doing all he could to help slaves to their freedom. His home in Norwich was an important station on the "North Star" or "Underground Railroad," and was the scene of thrilling experiences and hair-breadth escape for many a slave who was helped by Mr. Boardman from this, his last hiding place, across the line to Canada and freedom. An incident of this kind, related by his son, Charles William, who has furnished the facts here given, is quoted :

"When I was a boy of thirteen years of age, there came to our house a man, wife, and child of four years, the parents being about thirty years old, the wife nearly white, intelligent, and able to read and write. She was the handsomest woman of dark complexion I ever saw. The man also was of intelligent appearance, large, and quite black. It was three o'clock in the morning when they were brought to us by a well-known abolitionist. The slave-catcher with bloodhounds was known to be in pursuit, and my father, after feeding them and providing them with all necessities, took them into a cornfield where was a cellar, hidden by the weeds with which it was overgrown. Old shoes, wet in camphor, had been given them in order to leave no scent upon the ground on their way there. At eleven o'clock the United States marshal, slave-catcher, and several deputies, with two bloodhounds, arrived and demanded to be allowed to make search of the premises. Father questioned their right to search without a warrant, and told them all if they entered his house they did so at their peril. Strong words were used, bowie knives and revolvers were drawn by the hot-headed slave-catcher, but father's coolness and fearlessness kept him at bay. The marshal tried in vain to persuade father to yield, fearing there might otherwise be bloodshed, but in the end they departed, leaving deputies and hounds until a search warrant could be procured. When it came towards sundown, having received my instructions, I went as usual to bring home the cows, leaving the gate into the yard open, that the cows might find their way alone to the barn to be milked. As soon as I had turned them toward home, I left them and repaired to the hiding-place in the cornfield. I led the fugitives into an orchard, thence into the woods, and over the hills for a mile and a half to another road. There we waited till my father drove that way about 9 o'clock in the evening. He carried them twenty-five miles, and put them aboard a morning freight train in charge of a conductor who had done the same service many times before. The next twenty-four hours found them in Canada, and on my father's return the next day, when the U. S. marshal, slave-catcher, and party came back with a search warrant, they found themselves too late. Some six months later father had an interesting letter from the wife and mother; they had met with success in their new home, and she was then the mother of two children. This is only one instance out of many such in father's experience. In this manner he assisted and conveyed to freedom more than 600 men, women, and children."

Mr. Boardman's intelligence and ability well fitted him to represent his town in important offices, but his strong anti-slavery views prevented his having any political following, and he was chosen only to such positions as school committee, selectman, highway surveyor, and justice of the peace.

1077. Olcott P.⁷ Boardman (Jehiel,⁶ Nathaniel,⁵ Stephen,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Olean, N. Y., born in Derby, Vt., March 28, 1810, married Oct. 3, 1833, MARCIA P. RICE, born in Homer, Courtland County, N. Y., May 8, 1815, the daughter of Luman and Polly (Carpenter) Rice. Mr. Rice was born at Glastonbury, Conn., Jan. 18, 1787, settled in 1818 in Olean, where he for some years kept the hotel, moved, in 1822, to Portville, where he owned about 300 acres, including the site of the present village. He built there a saw-mill, a store, and a hotel, was a prominent pioneer, and a man of energy and enterprise. He died June 18, 1874, aged 87.

Mr. Olcott Boardman, who was but four years old when his parents settled in Olean, a region then covered with dense pine forests, enjoyed but limited advantages in the way of school education, but received a training through the privations and hardships incident to life under such conditions, which had excellent effect on his after life and character. He engaged early in mercantile business in the village, and later found employment as a purchaser of lumber for a dealer in Pittsburgh, spending the spring and summer in that town, and the winters in the lumber districts of the upper Alleghany. In 1832, he repurchased the old homestead, his father having lost the title through the bankruptcy of the former proprietor. He had made extensive repairs on the premises, when a great tornado, in March, 1834, destroyed all his timber, leaving scarcely a tree standing on a tract of more than 200 acres. Though thus left comparatively penniless, he was not daunted, but repaired the buildings for his parents, and engaged in the lumber trade again elsewhere, purchasing and selling to the Ohio River markets. In 1849, he made Olean once more his home, farming and continuing in active enterprises. He filled various town offices; was postmaster 1849-1853, collector of tolls on the Genesee Valley

Canal, 1860-62, assistant assessor of U. S. Revenue, 1862-1866. He was an early advocate of iron bridges, and built one in Olean, as highway commissioner in 1871. In 1867, he made a partial tour of the Northwest, purchasing considerable tracts of land around the headwaters of the Red River of the North. In 1878, he laid out about 30 acres of his farm as Boardmanville, where are now more than 100 homes, and a population of over 500 people; all the deeds here given prohibit forever the sale of intoxicating liquor. Mr. Boardman has been a member of the Presbyterian church for more than fifty years; he has had the best interests of his town at heart, striving in all ways to promote them, and has always held a high position in the esteem of his fellow citizens. His only son died in 1881, and his family now consists of his wife and granddaughter. Mr. and Mrs. Boardman celebrated, Oct. 2, 1894, their sixty-first wedding anniversary.

JOSEPH FASSETT, who was also from Vermont, and connected with the Folletts and Chittendens of that State. One of the family at Toledo has the Family Bible, said to have come over in the Mayflower.

Mr. and Mrs. Fassett lived on a farm adjoining that of her father in Granville, Ohio, until after Capt. Fassett's death, when the family removed, in 1851 or 2, to Springfield, Ill. Mrs. Fassett died Feb. 3, 1874, at the age of 83. Her name, Mercy, well suited her sweet and affectionate disposition, and the love her nephews and nieces felt for her was little short of that for a mother.

1087. Hiram⁷ Boardman (Moses,⁶ Samuel,⁵ Moses,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), of Granville, Ohio, and Springfield, Ill., born at Ferrisburg, Vt., June 16, 1794, removed with his parents to Cazenovia, N. Y., in 1802, and to Ohio in 1815. He married, Jan. 15, 1828, SUSAN MOWER, born Oct. 18, 1800, in Westford, Vt., daughter of Samuel Mower. Mrs. Boardman was descended through the Mowers and Feltons from early settlers of Salem, Mass. Her brothers were leading business men in Granville, of one of whom, Col. Lucius D. Mower, it is said in the History of Granville, "while he lived, he was the most competent and sagacious business man Granville produced." Mrs. Boardman's two grandfathers, Ebenezer Mower and Capt. Benjamin Felton, served in both the French and Indian and the Revolutionary Wars, and were in several important battles. Her Grandfather Mower was at the surrender of Fort William to Montcalm, when so many of the prisoners were tortured by the Indians, in spite of the united efforts of both French and English commanders. Mr. Mower, who was a powerful man, succeeded in freeing himself from the grasp of two Indians, and ran for life. A tomahawk, sent after him, wounded him in the head, and Susan remembered, when a child in Vermont, sitting in his lap, and feeling the scar.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Boardman lived on his father's, Moses Boardman, home farm, and others, until 1837, when they moved into the village of Granville, and there resided till his death, Oct. 1, 1852, when the family removed to Springfield, Ill. Mr. Boardman was highly respected as an honest, Christian man, and his aid to the church and college of Granville was, for those times, quite substantial. His widow survived him twenty-six years, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Morse, at Illini, Macon Co., Ill., June 6, 1878, aged 78. She was a woman of superior intellect and character.

Mr. Boardman removed to Stark Co., Nov., 1834, and died Aug. 8, 1847. He was much like his father in strength and energy. He pushed on to the rich prairie lands of Illinois, while they were still inhabited by Indians, and there secured a large and valuable farm. The marks of his enterprise are still visible there. He was a man of superior ability, a great reader, and careful as well as energetic in his business. He was also a friend to the poor.

Y., June 11, 1804, married Sept. 6, 1831, MINERVA REED, whose parents were among the early New England settlers of Franklin Co., Ohio. Her mother was Alma Adams, a near relative of John Quincy Adams. Mr. Boardman removed with his parents to Granville, Ohio, learned the saddle and harness-making trade, and was afterwards for about eleven years engaged in that and other business. In 1837 he moved to a large farm near Johnstown, O., where he resided twelve years. He then removed to Logan, Hocking Co., where he and his son were engaged in milling lumber for forty years. Having purchased a farm at Worthington, near Columbus, the family removed thither, and there Mr. Boardman died, Sept. 2, 1887, at the age of 83, the last of his generation of his father's family. He was highly respected for his probity, intelligence, industry, and thrift, and his son and grandson are worthy successors to his name and character. Mrs. Boardman died at Logan, Sept. 13, 1872.

1093. Laura⁷ Boardman (Amos,⁶ Samuel,⁵ Moses,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² Samuel¹), born in Corinth, Vt., Nov. 14, 1789, married Dec. 14, 1809, JOHN CRAW, born in Connecticut Oct. 25, 1787, the son of John Craw. Mrs. Laura (Boardman) Craw died Mch. 13, 1871; her husband died July 7, 1883.

Mr. and Mrs. Craw settled first in Fairfield, Franklin Co., Vt., where all their children were born. In the fall of 1835, they removed to Ohio. Going by way of the Erie Canal to Buffalo, and thence on Lake Erie, they landed at Huron, Ohio, at the mouth of the Huron River, near which place they stayed till the next February with their daughters, Mrs. Fay and Mrs. Hathaway, who were already settled there, and then moved to a place Mr. Craw had bought in the township of Ridgefield, Huron Co. In June, 1851, they removed to a farm near Bowling Green, Wood Co., Ohio, where they passed their remaining days, and where some of their children still live. Their home at the latter place was, at the time of their settlement, in the midst of woods; there were many Indians (all peaceably inclined) in the country around, and their nearest neighbors were some miles away. In the woods were plenty of bears, wolves, wild hogs, wild-cats, deer, and game of all sorts, which their children have seen entirely disappear, and the region become fine farming land. Oil and gas fields are found in the neighborhood, and now natural gas is used in their dwellings, both for heating and cooking.

* Major John Addoms was a Revolutionary soldier, and is said to have been at one time one of the staff of Gen. Washington. He was a carpenter and builder. He placed one of the chains across the Hudson to keep the enemy from going up the river. He was one of the associates to whom with Zephaniah Platt the patent or grant of Plattsburg, N. Y., was given. All his descendants spell the name Addoms, but there is reason to think it was originally Adams, and the family from Jeremiah Adams, a first settler of Hartford. (See p. 148.)

She died at Petaluma, California, March 14, 1858, in her 39th year, and he married second, SARAH JANE LORING, born July 13, 1831, at Great Barrington, Mass., the daughter of Almon and Sarah (Savage) Loring. Mr. Edwin L. Boardman removed with his parents from Salisbury to Sheffield in 1825. He went, in Aug., 1837, to Iowa, and was one of the first to locate lands in Brighton in that State. He returned to Sheffield in 1839, removed the same year to Lockport, N. Y., and was a merchant there till 1846. He went to California in 1849, was in the gold mines there three months, returned to San Francisco, and was engaged in the hardware business there eleven years. In 1860, he returned to Sheffield and engaged in farming. In the winter of 1861 he lost his right hand by its being crushed under a falling tree. He afterwards went to New York city, and engaged in the life insurance business there, his family residing still in Sheffield. He died Feb. 2, 1893.

DALEY of Sheffield, Mass., daughter of William and Eliza (Kline) Daley. They had one child, Fannie Eliza, born at Brighton, Iowa, Mch. 17, 1856, who died in infancy. Mr. Henry Boardman first went to the present State of Iowa in the spring of 1838, spent the summer there, and attended the first government land sale in the Territory, held in Burlington in November of that year, when he purchased a tract of land. In 1852, he returned there and built a saw-mill. In 1854, he settled in Brighton, where he remained until 1865, carrying on a large farm there. His residence was for a time in Westfield, N. J., and his business that of a farmer. He lives now in Sheffield.

1126. Lucy Jane⁷ Boardman (William,⁶ Levi,⁵ Levi,⁴ Joseph,³ Samuel,² Samuel¹), born in Salisbury, Conn., Feb. 26, 1822, married Oct. 24, 1849, WALTER GOODRICH SAVAGE, born in Sheffield, March 16, 1825. Mr. Savage spent his early life on a farm in Sheffield. On becoming of age, he went to Ansonia, Conn., and engaged in brass work. From there he removed to Philadelphia, and while there turned his attention to the invention of brick-making machinery. Returning to Sheffield he built a brick machine, and engaged in the manufacture of brick. He removed to Iowa about 1859, and about 1864 settled at Knoxville, Iowa, where he established a machine shop. He was the inventor of many improvements in steam machinery; was an upright Christian man, and highly esteemed. He died at Knoxville, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1871. Mrs. Savage, after living nine years with her children in Nebraska, is now (1895) residing at her former home in Knoxville.

After her death he married, in 1869, KATE HOLMES of Salisbury, Conn. Mr. Boardman remained in Sheffield on his father's farm until sixteen years of age, when he went to Lockport, N. Y., and spent two years in the dry goods store of his brother, Edwin L. Boardman. Returning to Sheffield, he soon engaged in mercantile business at South Egremont, Mass., with Norman K. Bills, where he remained until his marriage in 1847. He removed in 1851 to California, and was engaged in general hardware business in San Francisco until 1858. Removing next to Oakland, Cal., he took up the profession of civil engineer, which he still follows. From 1864 to 1868 he made a resurvey of the city of San Francisco. After that he located the line of the Central Pacific Railroad from the summit of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, easterly to their base. Soon after closing the railroad surveys, he was appointed engineer of the city of Oakland, and has made re-surveys of it. He was also, for a number of years, surveyor of Alameda County, California.

*The following concerning the Greenleaf family is taken from notes furnished by Mr. James E. Greenleaf of Charlestown, Mass., who is preparing an enlarged and revised edition of the Greenleaf Genealogy.

CAPT. EDMUND¹ GREENLEAF, b. in England, about 1574; d. March 24, 1671 in Boston; m. 1st, SARAH DOLE, who d. Jan. 18, 1663, in Boston; m. 2d, MRS. SARAH HILL, widow, 1st, of ——— Wilson, 2d, of William Hill of Fairfield, Conn. She died, 1671, in Boston. From all that can be gathered, it is believed that the ancestors of the Greenleaf family were Huguenots, the name being a translation from the French, Feuilleverte. Capt. Edmund came to America in 1635, with his family, and settled in Newbury, Mass. He lived near the old town bridge, where he kept a tavern for some years. He was made freeman, March 13, 1639. He was by trade a silk-dyer. He served in the early Indian wars; was made "ensign for the company at Newberry," Nov. 5, 1639, and was Lieutenant, May 14, 1645. After 1647, he moved to Boston. His will was proved Feb. 12, 1671. By the records of the Parish of St. Mary's-la-Tour, at Ipswich, Co. Suffolk, England, it appears he was baptized Jan. 2, 1574, the son of John and Margaret Greenleaf. He had nine children recorded in Ipswich, England, six sons and three daughters.

William F. J. Boardman.

1835, daughter of Dr. Charles and Electa (Toocker) Greenleaf of Hartford, where Dr. Greenleaf was for many years a prominent dentist.

CAPT. STEPHEN² GREENLEAF, born in England, about 1628, baptized Aug. 10, 1628, m. 1st, ELIZABETH COFFIN, dau. of Tristram and Dionis (Stevens) Coffin, who died Nov. 19, 1678. He m. 2d, Mch. 31, 1679, MRS. ESTHER WEARE SWETT, dau. of Nathaniel Weare, and widow of Benjamin Swett of Hampton, N. H. She d. Jan. 16, 1718, aged 89. May 31, 1670, he was appointed ensign for Newbury. As captain of militia, he went to Cape Breton in the Indian wars, and was there wrecked in a vessel and drowned in company with nine others, Dec. 1, 1690.

CAPT. STEPHEN³ GREENLEAF, born in Newbury Aug. 15, 1652, m. Oct. 23, 1676, ELIZABETH GERRISH, b. Sept. 10, 1654, d. Aug. 5, 1712, dau. of Capt. William Gerrish of Newbury. He died at Newbury, "Oct. 13, 1743, aged 91 years, 2 mos." He is usually referred to in the town records as "Capt. Stephen," and was much distinguished in the Indian wars, being mentioned in Mather's "Magnalia" as commanding a company in the celebrated battle with the French and Indians, at Wells, Maine, in 1690. He also served in King Philip's War on the Connecticut River, above Hatfield, Mass., and was wounded Aug. 25, 1675. "4 June 1685, Ensign Stephen Greenleaf was appointed Leftenant;" 13th May, 1685, deputy to General Court, and in 1689, was the agent of the State to treat with the Indians at Pennicook. (Records of Mass. Bay.)

REV. DANIEL⁴ GREENLEAF, b. Feb. 10, 1680, graduated at Harvard College in 1699, and for about six years practiced medicine in Cambridge, where he married ELIZABETH GOOKIN. He commenced preaching in 1706, and in 1708 was ordained pastor of the Congregational church in Yarmouth, Mass., where he remained nearly twenty years. He resigned his charge in 1727, and moved to Boston. His wife had taken her family of twelve children some time before, to Boston, where she opened an apothecary and grocers shop, thus supporting her family, and educating her eldest son (Daniel) at college. The shop was in what is now Washington Street, between Court Street and Cornhill, and near the corner of Court Street, where now stands the Ames Building. Here he resided until his death, which took place suddenly, Aug. 26, 1763. He was buried near the "Stone Chapel" in Tremont Street.

DR. DANIEL⁵ GREENLEAF, eldest son of Rev. Daniel, was born Nov. 7, 1702, in Cambridge, Mass. He was a practicing physician in Hingham, and in Bolton, Worcester Co., where he died July 18, 1795. He m. 1st, July 18, 1726, MRS. SILENCE (NICHOLS) MARSH, widow of David Marsh. She d. May 13, 1762, and he m., Nov. 18, 1762, MRS. DOROTHY RICHARDSON, widow of Josiah Richardson.

Mr. Boardman received his education in the public schools of Wethersfield, and graduated from the academy of that town. On leaving school in the spring of 1846, he entered the coffee and spice manufactory of his father in Wethersfield to become familiar with its operations, and

DAVID⁶ GREENLEAF, sixth child of Dr. Daniel, b. in Bolton, Mass., July 13, 1737, m. in Norwich, Conn., June 2, 1763, MARY JOHNSON, b. April 7, 1738, dau. of Ebenezer and Deborah (Champion) Johnson. They lived in Norwich, Conn., Bolton, Mass., and South Coventry, Conn., where he died Dec. 11, 1800.* His widow died in Hartford, May 1, 1814. He learned the trade of a goldsmith, which he followed during life. He had nine children, the oldest of whom was

DR. DAVID⁷ GREENLEAF, b. June 19, 1765, probably in Norwich, Conn., m. ANNA JONES, b. Nov. 7, 1765, dau. of Rufus and Anna (Hartshorn) Jones of Norwich, the former b. Sept. 2, 1732, son of Sylvanus and Kezia Jones. Dr. David was, like his father, a goldsmith, having learned his trade in Norwich, and he carried on this business for many years in Hartford, where he settled, later becoming a dentist. He accumulated a large amount of property, and was the owner of many pieces of real estate in Hartford. He d. March 11, 1835. Mrs. Nancy Greenleaf, his wife, had died Oct. 18, 1828. Their eldest son was

DR. CHARLES⁸ GREENLEAF, born in Hartford, June 2, 1788. He was well-known as a dentist in Hartford. His office was on Exchange Corner, and his reputation for good work was second to none in the State. In the Hartford Courant of Nov. 28, 1820, is an advertisement by him, appointing H. Seymour one of his agents for disposing of gold leaf of his manufacture; also, Sept. 27, 1831, notice of his removal from Catlin's Corner, corner of Main and Asylum Streets, to the Exchange Building. This office was used by his son, Dr. James M. Greenleaf, as a place of business until his death in 1877. Dr. David Greenleaf, who died in Alameda, Cal., Sept. 6, 1893, and his brother, Dr. James M., were at one time in company under the firm name of J. M. & D. Greenleaf. Dr. Charles Greenleaf died, Dec. 18, 1843, universally respected. His wife, whom he married in 1808, was Electa Toocker, b. Oct. 6, 1791, dau. of Joseph and Hannah Toocker. She died April 9, 1864. They had twelve children, the youngest of whom,

JANE MARIA⁹ GREENLEAF, m. as above, W. F. J. BOARDMAN.

* The tradition that David, Sen., and his son, Dr. David, each served for a time in the Revolution, seems to find confirmation in records relating to soldiers of their name in the Mass. Archives.

when the business was removed to Hartford in 1850, he was admitted a partner, the firm then becoming William Boardman & Son. The younger brother was later taken into partnership, and the business, which from small beginnings had rapidly enlarged, and had been repeatedly removed to secure adequate accommodation, at length, in 1872, became settled in the fine Boardman Building, erected by the firm on Asylum Street; its operations have been extended till it included importing, manufacturing on a large scale with the most improved machinery, and a successful wholesale trade throughout New England and other States. After many years of close attention to business, Mr. Boardman's health became impaired, and he found it necessary to take rest from work, at one time going abroad to seek the benefit of travel and change. The result was not entirely successful, and he finally retired from the old firm in 1888, after forty-two years connection with it.

Mr. Boardman was one of the original members of the Putnam Phalanx, a well-known military organization in Hartford. In 1863 he was elected a member of the Hartford Common Council, in which he was one of the highways committee, and chairman of the committee on the horse railroad then being built. In 1862 he was chosen a director of the State Bank of Hartford, serving as such for several years. He has been actively engaged in many business enterprises, including the Hartford & New York Steamboat Company, the Merrick Thread Company of Holyoke, the Hudson River Water Power and Paper Company of Mechanicsville, N. Y., as well as in other undertakings in which he shared an interest in common with the other members of his firm. He has also helped many young men to establish themselves in business.

Mr. Boardman is a member of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution; also a life member of the Connecticut Historical Society. He is the owner of many valuable Boardman papers and records, including originals relating to each of his New England ancestors; most important of these are the old letter of Julian Boreman from England, which has come down to him in his direct line of descent, and the letter of Samuel Boreman's sister, Elizabeth Middleton of London, which he lately discovered. He has also a valuable library of historical and genealogical books. He is one of those most interested in the Boardman family history, and has been the chief promoter of the publication of this Genealogy, which would probably never have been carried through without the generous aid afforded by him, both in money and labor.

CHILD OF WILLIAM F. J. AND JANE BOARDMAN.

2045+ WILLIAM GREENLEAF,⁸ b. June 29, 1853; m. Oct. 29, 1874, Eliza Fowler Root.

1139. Thomas Jefferson⁷ Boardman (William,⁶ Joseph Simeon,⁵ Levi,⁴ Joseph,³ Samuel,² Samuel¹), of Hartford, Conn., born in Wethersfield, May 27, 1832, married Oct. 14, 1858, JULIA AMANDA ELLIS of Hartford, born Jan. 29, 1838. She died Nov. 24, 1858. He married 2d, Oct. 24, 1861, MARY CHARLENA ELLIS, sister of the first wife, born Sept. 11, 1843. She died Jan. 16, 1890. He married 3d, April 29, 1893, MARY ADAH SIMPSON, daughter of Frederick H. Simpson of Staten Island, N. Y. Mr. Boardman received his education at the district school and academy at Wethersfield, and afterwards at the Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, Mass., returning home from there in April, 1850. Preferring a business to a professional life, he began as a clerk in a country store in New Britain, with a salary of fifty dollars a year and board in the family of his employer, remaining till the failure of the firm compelled him to seek business elsewhere. He then went to Hartford, and accepted a position with his father and brother, and later, in 1853, he was admitted to the firm of William Boardman & Sons, in which he remained a partner till the death of his father, when he, with his son, Howard F., took the business, and still continue it under the old firm name. He was often urged to accept public office, but has always refused, preferring to give his entire time and energy to his business. He was brought up a Methodist, but in early life became a convert to the Universalist faith, uniting with that church in 1863. He was long connected with its Sunday-school, as teacher, assistant superintendent, and president of the teachers' association. He was for many years a worker in the church, as member of its board of trustees, and one of its chief supporters. He was also many years on the State Board of Charity of the Universalist Church, and trustee for the State of Connecticut in the Universalist Publishing House in Boston. He has had an equal interest with his father and brother in the business enterprises in which they were concerned.

ATWOOD of Bristol, Conn., born Aug. 8, 1841. Mr. Atwood was for many years engaged in insurance business in the office of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company in Hartford. More recently the success which he had for a long time had in the cultivation of flowers as an amateur gardener has led him to devote himself entirely to the business of florist. His exhibits of collections of flowers in their various seasons are among the best. He has long been active as a Sunday-school worker and superintendent in connection with the Methodist Episcopal Church in Hartford. Mr. and Mrs. Atwood are now (1895) absent from home on a journey to Europe and the Holy Land.

CHILD OF GEORGE AND MARY LUCINDA ATWOOD.

- 2052 GEORGE BOARDMAN,⁸ b. May 25, 1872; d. March 12, 1885, in his 13th year. He was a boy of great promise, thoughtful beyond his years, and conscientious in maintaining his convictions of right at any cost. "Georgie was a good boy, and ready to die," was the remark of his playfellows when they heard of his unexpected death. He had early joined the Methodist Church, and was strongly attached to all its services; he had at the same time a healthy fondness for all his boyish sports. Before he was eleven years old he established a little monthly paper, edited and printed by himself, and regularly issued for a considerable period, which reflects great credit both on his manual skill and intellectual ability.

1155. Daniel Frederic⁷ Boardman (Daniel,⁶ Daniel,⁶ Sherman,⁴ Daniel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of New York city, born November, 1842, married May, 1865, MARGARET WILLETT of New York city. At the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion, Daniel F. Boardman was a member of the famous Seventh Regiment of New York State Militia, and went with it when it was called to Washington before the commencement of hostilities. He was then only about eighteen years of age, and the exposure at that time is thought to have affected his health in after life. He died Jan. 6, 1878, leaving four daughters, who now live in New York city.

She died Oct. 16, 1883. Mr. Almond Boardman taught a writing school at Coventry and Irasburg, Vt., when but eighteen years old, and had among his pupils the late Chief Justice Redfield and his brother, the late Judge Timothy Redfield of Montpelier, Vt. Soon after marriage he settled on a farm in Hyde Park, but in the spring of 1842 he went back to the old Boardman homestead in Morristown, living in the third house that had been built on the same spot. He was a man of affairs in Hyde Park, being elected to several places of trust, and among them Representative to the General Assembly during two terms. Soon after returning to Morristown, he was chosen twice to represent that town in the Assembly. In his 81st year, though still physically active, he sold the old homestead, and was, in 1888, still living, residing in the family of his widowed daughter, Mrs. Noyes, in Hyde Park.

Norman⁷ Boardman (Ozias,⁶ Ozias,⁵ Elisha,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Lyons, Iowa, born in Morristown, Vt., Apr. 30, 1813, married at Troy, Vt., Mch. 5, 1843, LYDIA ANN GEORGE, who died of consumption, May 10, 1846, at the age of 21 years. She was the mother of one daughter, who died in infancy. Mr. Boardman married 2d, at Glover, Vt., Mch., 1848, LOIS B. KNIGHT, who died at the age of 29, Feb. 11, 1857, leaving three sons. He married the third time, at Jaffrey, N. H., Feb. 11, 1858, SARAH M. KNIGHT, born July 1, 1832. Though of the same family name as the second wife, no trace of relationship between them has been found. Mrs. Boardman has had no family of her own, but has assisted in bringing up to manhood her husband's three sons.

Mr. Boardman, in 1837, began reading law, and in 1838 attended law lectures, and was admitted to the bar in Sept., 1839, at St. Albans, Vt. He commenced practice as an attorney at Troy, Vt., Nov. 1, 1839; was appointed Deputy United States Collector in 1845, and was elected State's Attorney for Orleans County, Vt., in 1849 and 1850. He emigrated to Lyons, Iowa, in 1855; was chosen chairman of the Board of Supervisors in 1860, and was elected State Senator for Clinton County, Iowa, in 1862-66. He was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue for the second district of Iowa, May 14, 1869, and held that office until his resignation in 1875. In politics Mr. Boardman was a Democrat until the passage of the Nebraska bill under President

Pierce in 1854, since which time he has been an active Republican. In religion he is a Universal Restorationist. He is now living (1894) at his home in Lyons, Iowa, at the age of 81. He has been much interested in his family genealogy, and we are indebted to him for the full records of the descendants of his ancestor, Ozias⁶ Boardman, which he has taken great pains to collect. (Since writing the foregoing, news has been received of Mr. Boardman's death, Apr. 30, 1894, his 81st birthday, after but two or three days illness of an affection of the throat. An obituary in the Lyons Mirror says of him: "The honors he won were upon ability and merit, and the trusts reposed in him were always fulfilled.")

1222. Maria Asenath⁷ Boardman (Lewis,⁶ William,⁵ Israel,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born in Hartford, Conn., Sept. 25, 1817; married Apr. 3, 1844, RICHARD STORRS BURT, of Hartford, born in Longmeadow, Mass., Oct. 26, 1817, son of Luther and Mary (White) Burt. Mrs. Burt, left early an orphan, lived in her younger years with her aunt, Mrs. Fanny (Boardman) Webster, and after reaching womanhood was for some time before her marriage a teacher. She was a woman of remarkably lovely character, and a most devoted, active Christian. Her greatest happiness was in doing good to others; though modest and unassuming in the highest degree, she was always a helper to be relied on in the woman's prayer-meeting, the Sunday-school, and in church work of every kind. She early became connected with the Fourth Church in Hartford, afterwards with her husband and family removing her connection to the Pearl Street Church. When in middle life, she and her family went to reside in a new home in the south part of Wethersfield avenue. The neighborhood was distant from church and Sunday-school privileges, and Mrs. Burt, awake to the religious needs of those about her, began gathering the children to her own house for instruction on the Sabbath. As the numbers and interest increased, larger accommodations were procured, and this Sabbath-school proved in time the nucleus of the Wethersfield Avenue Congregational Church, which has since gone on to prosper, and to become a means of usefulness. Rev. Mr. Forbes, the pastor of that church, of which Mrs. Burt may be truly said to have been the mother, preached a sermon after her death, in memory of her, in which he gave a warm tribute to the excellence of her life and character. She died, after some years of gradually failing health, June 26, 1892, in her 75th year. Mr. Burt, who survived her, was a deacon in the Wethersfield Avenue Church, and for forty-five years the Hartford agent of the Conn. Fire Insurance Company, of which his son, Charles R., is secretary. He died April 21, 1895.

Mr. Hutchinson was, at the time of his marriage, principal of the North School on High Street, Hartford; he afterwards occupied a position in the office of the Hartford Water Board, and later became one of the city registrars. He was at one time a member of the committee of the Hartford High School. Mrs. Hutchinson is an active Sunday-school worker, having for many years had charge of the Infant Department of the Windsor Avenue Church, to the interest of which she has been able greatly to contribute by her musical ability, and talent as a singer.

1247. Charles Holtom⁷ Boardman (Charles,⁶ William,⁶ Israel,⁴ Israel,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), of Hartford, Conn., born there Dec. 2, 1838, married April 7, 1864, MARY JANE ELLIOT, born in Hartford, July 24, 1846, her father being a native of England. When a youth, Charles learned in Hartford the electrotyping business, and before he was of age had begun work in New York city. While there, an opportunity offered for going to sea on a vessel engaged in the China trade, in which some friends of his family were interested. The chance was a favorable one, and the temptation strong, for he had been from childhood fond of roving and adventure. After obtaining the consent of his father, he procured his outfit, enrolled himself as one of the crew, and for about four years after devoted himself to a seafaring life. He studied navigation, for which he had unusual aptitude, perhaps inherited from his great-grandfather, Captain Israel, and rose in rank on shipboard, till he had become first mate, expecting the next voyage to take command as captain, when the vessel was wrecked in the Gulf of Siam, the crew were obliged to take to the boats, and to suffer the horrors of such a situation till they finally reached the coast, where, being befriended by the government, they at length found passage back to America. Charles's fondness for life at sea after this adventure seemed to decline, and he abandoned it from that time. The Civil War had already broken out when he reached home, and he enlisted at Hartford in the 5th Conn. Regiment, serving in it through the remainder of the war, and accompanying it in its march with Sherman to the sea. His hand was early wounded by the bursting of a shell, and being thus disabled from handling a gun, much of his army life was passed in service in the regimental hospital, of which he was made steward. As part of his duty he kept the record of those who died on the march, and their places of burial.

After the war he found employment with Adams' Express Co., and was for many years their messenger, running daily between New York and Boston, and constantly trusted with the care of large sums of money and other valuables. While going through New York city on his car, he was standing in the door, when a passing car by some accident caused it to slide violently together, striking his head, and killing him instantly, Oct. 28, 1873. His widow died May 4, 1882.

FOSTER, born in Rome, N. Y., daughter of Hon. Henry A. Foster. Mr. Boardman was a prominent citizen of Troy, where he died Sept. 6, 1893. The following sketch of his life and character was published in the Troy Bulletin of Sept. 10, 1893:

The Hon. Derick Lane Boardman died at his home, No. 95 First Street, Wednesday morning, at 7.30 o'clock, and was buried in Oakwood cemetery yesterday. Mr. Boardman had been for over a year a sufferer from a complication of diseases, which, while he was at Saratoga ten days ago assumed such an alarming phase as to hasten his return to Troy. From that time on he sank rapidly, despite all that the ablest medical skill could do, until the end. In Mr. Boardman's death, Troy sustains that loss which every community sustains, when one of its best citizens is called to his final reward. His was a career which, while confined almost exclusively to business circles, shed an added lustre on the city's name. Mr. Boardman came to Troy in 1867, and in connection with the Rev. Stephen Parks and John T. Christie, assumed control of the general agency of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. In this position, which he retained up to the hour of his death, he by his indomitable energy and perseverance, coupled with his genial personality and enviable tact, built up a business which reached throughout the entire northern portion of the state, and which to-day is one of the largest and most extensive of its kind in New York. Mr. Boardman's early manhood was devoted to the law. Born at Watertown, N. Y., in March, 1824, he laid the foundation of his education in the public schools of that city. Then, after a preparatory course at the Jefferson County Institute, he entered Williams College in 1840, graduating with honor four years later. Immediately after his graduation he began the study of law, and in 1847 was admitted to practice, locating at Rome, N. Y. Six years later he was elected to the Assembly from Oneida county, serving one term with ability and declining a renomination. In 1854, he, with the late D. M. K. Johnson, formed the legal firm of Johnson & Boardman, which enjoyed a lucrative practice until Mr. Boardman retired to enter the insurance business. The alma mater of the deceased, Williams College, also suffers a severe loss in Mr. Boardman's death. From the day of his graduation he has taken the liveliest interest in the affairs of old Williams, and for twenty-five years never failed to be present at commencement. In 1878, he was chosen an alumni trustee, and six years afterwards a life trustee. In addition he served a term as president of the Alumni Association. The Kappa Alpha fraternity numbered him as one of its most honored members. In addition to his insurance business, Mr. Boardman was prominently identified with Troy's banking interests, being at one time a director of the Central National Bank, and at the time of his death first vice-president of the Troy Savings Bank. The chief charm of Mr. Boardman's personality and the one which attracted and held the friendship of scores, was to be found in his scholarly attainments and refinement of taste. His cultivated mind was a veritable storehouse of intellectual delight which his friends were always at liberty to draw upon. His conversational gifts were brilliant in the extreme, and he never lacked for listeners when he chose to talk. The religious side of his character was sincere and earnest, though never obtrusive. He was a member of the Second Presbyterian Church, and gave liberally toward the cause of Christianity. In addition he was a believer in charity of the quiet and practical sort, and how many deserving persons owe needed aid to his kindness of heart will never be known. Mr. Boardman was the son of the Rev. Dr. George S. Boardman, and a grandson of Derick Lane of this city. He is survived by his widow, the daughter of the late Hon. Henry A. Foster of Rome, a son, Henry F. Boardman, the surviving member of the firm of D. L. Boardman & Son, and one daughter, Mrs. E. S. Warren of Buffalo, to whom the sympathy of thousands go out in their dire affliction.

Dr. Boardman was fitted for college at the Seminary in Castleton, Vt., where his father resided from 1837 to 1860. He was graduated from Middlebury College in 1847, and immediately appointed tutor there, serving as such, 1847 to 1849. He then entered Andover Theological Seminary, and was graduated in 1852. In 1853 he was called to the pastorate of the Congregational church in South Danvers, Mass. (now Peabody), and at the same time to the Professorship of Rhetoric and English Literature, and pro tempore of Intellectual Philosophy in Middlebury College. He accepted the professorship and continued in its duties, preaching, however, frequently, for six years. In 1859 he accepted the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church in Binghamton, N. Y., which he held for nearly twelve years. In 1871 he became Professor of Systematic Theology in Chicago Theological Seminary, and continued in the active duties of that position for twenty-two years. Constrained by impaired health, he offered his resignation in April, 1893, which was accepted by the Board of Directors with strong expressions of regret and of regard, and he was made Professor Emeritus. At the time of his resignation he had been in constant official service for forty years. It is his hope to do still more work, after needed rest.

Dr. Boardman's publications have consisted of several occasional sermons and other addresses, and of articles in the reviews from 1856 to the present time. A treatise on "Moral Philosophy" was privately printed about 1877; "Lectures on Natural Theology," 1881; "The Will and Virtue," 1882. In the seven annual volumes of "Current Discussion," 1883 to 1889, published by the Faculty of Chicago Theological Seminary, he furnished the portion devoted to Systematic Theology, aggregating over four hundred pages. "Congregationalism," a pamphlet of eighty pages, was published by the Advance Publishing Company of Chicago in 1889; and "Regeneration," a volume of 126 pages, by the Fleming H. Revell Co., in 1891. He has also been an occasional contributor to the Independent, the Advance, and other journals. He was Moderator of the Synod of Geneva in 1864, and the first Moderator of the New Synod after the reunion of the Old School and New School Presbyterian churches. He was also chairman of the committee on forming the new Presbyteries. He has been a corporate member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions since 1869; a Trustee of Middlebury College since 1868; for many years a trustee, and for several years past President of the Board of Trustees of Monticello Seminary, Godfrey, Ill. He was Moderator of the Congregational General Association of Illinois in 1881, and has occupied many other positions of trust. He was reluctantly drawn into the debate at Des Moines, Iowa, in 1886, on the expediency of sending out as missionaries, by the A. B. C. F. M., persons holding the doctrine of future probation. The next year he was made chairman of the committee on the home department of the board, and has always voted with the majority on this question. He sustained the report in 1887 in a somewhat extended speech. He visited Europe in 1882, and again spent a year abroad from 1884 to 1885. He was elected President of the University of Vermont in 1867, and of Middlebury College in 1880, but declined both appointments. He received the honorary degree of D.D. from the University of Vermont in 1867, and of LL.D. from LaFayette College, Pa., in 1889. His summer residence for the present is at Pittsford, Vt., and his home for the winter in the city of New York. He has no children.

1290. Rev. Samuel Ward⁷ Boardman, D.D., LL.D. (Samuel,⁶ Timothy,⁵ Timothy,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), of Maryville, Tenn., born in Pittsford, Vt., Aug. 31, 1830, married Sept. 10, 1857, JANE ELIZABETH HASKELL, eldest daughter of Hon. Bela B. Haskell of Waldoboro, Maine, cashier of Waldoboro Bank. She died of consumption Oct. 29, 1859. He married 2d, May 2, 1861, SARAH ELIZABETH GREENE, born in Boston Sept. 9, 1837, daughter of Rev. David Greene, late Secretary of the American Board of Missions. Mrs. Boardman's mother was the oldest daughter of Jeremiah Evarts, Esq., and a sister of William M. Evarts; Mrs. Evarts, her grandmother, was daughter of Roger Sherman of Revolutionary fame.

Dr. Boardman fitted for college at the Seminary in Castleton, Vt., 1843-47, and was graduated at Middlebury College in 1851. He taught in Royalton, Vt., in Clinton, Mass., and as Classical Instructor in Castleton Seminary. He was graduated from Andover Theological Seminary in 1855. He supplied for several months the First Congregational Church in Pittsfield, Mass., during the absence of Dr. Todd in Europe, pursued post-graduate studies at New Haven and at Andover, and supplied for a time the churches at Wethersfield, Conn., and at Peabody, then South Danvers, Mass. He was licensed by the Andover Association at Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 24, 1855, and was ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational Church of Norwich, Vt., Apr. 16, 1857. In the summer of 1859 he accepted the Professorship of Rhetoric and English Literature, and pro tempore of Intellectual Philosophy in Middlebury College, which had been made vacant by the resignation of his brother, George Nye. In June, 1862, he accepted a call from the Second Presbyterian Church of Auburn, N. Y., of which he was pastor for over fifteen years, receiving about five hundred persons to the membership of that church. Jan. 1, 1879, he removed to Sterling, Ill., where he was installed pastor of the First Congregational Church. In Oct., 1883, he was installed pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Stanhope, N. J., where he remained until 1889, when he accepted the Presidency of Maryville College, Maryville, Tenn., which he still occupies. He was, in 1869, Moderator of the Synod of Onondaga; in 1870, chairman of the committee to secure funds for Auburn Theological Seminary, and Hamilton College, as a part of the thank-offering in memorial of the reunion of the Presbyterian Church. As a part of that memorial, the Dodge and Morgan Library Building was added to the equipment of Auburn Theological Seminary. In 1873 he was chairman of the committee which secured an additional endowment of $300,000 to the Seminary; the elegant and stately Morgan Hall is a part of the addition thus made. He has been a frequent contributor to the press throughout his professional life. He received the honorary degree of A.M. from Dartmouth College in 1859; that of D.D. from Hamilton College in 1870; and that of LL.D. from Middlebury College in 1890.

Dr. Boardman has taken great interest in the history and genealogy of his family. He published some years since an account of its earlier generations, in connection with the Log-book of his grandfather, Timothy Boardman, kept during his service in the Revolution on board the privateer Oliver Cromwell. He was mainly instrumental in the formation of the Boardman Family Association at Hartford, Conn., and still continues his interest in the general subject, though prevented by his other duties from devoting his time particularly to it.

1291. Rev. Simeon Gilbert⁷ Boardman (Samuel,⁶ Timothy,⁵ Timothy,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² *Samuel*¹), was born in Pittsford, Vt., July 7, 1833. He was fitted for college at Castleton Seminary, and was graduated from Middlebury College in 1855. He taught at Turtle Creek, Alleghany Co., Pa., 1855-1857; studied law with Hon. B. F. Langdon of Castleton, and at the Albany Law School, and was admitted to the bar at Kalamazoo, Mich., July, 1859. He practiced law at Houghton, Mich., and at Syracuse, N. Y., until the spring of 1862. After a protracted season of impaired health, interspersed with periods of useful labor, as his strength permitted, he entered the ministry of the Presbyterian Church, and was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Wilmington (New School) at Milford, Delaware, at their regular spring meeting April, 1870. He was ordained and installed pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Port

Penn, Del., where he preached for more than twelve years. Ill health compelled him to resign this charge Jan. 1, 1884. After spending a year in the South, he resumed labor, taking charge of the Presbyterian Church of Champlain, N. Y., where he preached till August, 1888. He became pastor of the Presbyterian churches of Clarksburg and Gnotty Creek, W. Va., in January, 1889, and continued pastor of these churches till April, 1893. He was married to MISS HELEN CATON, only daughter of Prof. Lewis Caton, and Mrs. Elizabeth Ann (Irwin) Caton, at Delhi, Ohio, Dec. 8, 1875. They have had no children.

H., SUSAN CAROLINE LOCKE, born June 5, 1836, daughter of Asa Locke of Rockingham, Vt. Dr. Boardman practiced medicine twenty-one years in Monroe, and was at one time president of the Wisconsin Homeopathic Medical Society. His health failing, he removed to Larned, Kansas, where his son Edgar was a practicing physician, and where he died Feb. 26, 1888. Dr. Boardman graduated at Middlebury College, Vt., in 1857, studied theology, and graduated at Andover; he preached for a time, but finding his health insufficient for ministerial duty, afterwards studied medicine, and graduated at Hahnemann Medical College in Chicago in 1867. His son Edgar graduated at the same college in 1884.

Conn., born in Berlin, Conn., Aug. 25, 1840, married March 26, 1874, JULIA DELANCY SEARS, daughter of Elisha Sears of Middletown. They have had no children. Mr. Boardman is an officer and director of corporations and banks in Middletown, and is an executor and trustee of some estates. He has lately been commissioned by the Governor as a trustee of the Connecticut Hospital for the Insane, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Benjamin Douglas.

1354. Fannie Elizabeth⁷ Boardman (William,⁶ Daniel,⁵ Daniel,⁴ Timothy,³ Daniel,² Samuel¹), born July 3, 1824, in North Haven, Conn., married Apr. 5, 1845, DR. GEORGE ELIAS SHIPMAN, born in New York March 4, 1820, the son of George and Eliza (Payson) Shipman. Dr. Shipman's mother, Eliza Payson, was a sister of Rev. Dr. Edward Payson of Portland, Maine, widely known throughout the Christian community of half a century ago by the memoir published after his death. The wife of Dr. Payson was a sister also of his father, and Dr. Shipman was thus a double cousin of their daughter, Mrs. Prentiss, equally well known as the author of "Stepping Heavenward."

Dr. Shipman attended Middlebury College, and afterwards studied at New York University and Medical School, where he graduated in 1843. He soon after turned his attention to Homeopathy, and later became a staunch supporter and practitioner of that school of medicine. After a voyage across the Atlantic for the benefit of his health, he decided to settle at the West, and went to Andover, Illinois, whither, a year or two later, he brought his wife, Miss Boardman, whom he married in Connecticut. In the fall of 1846 they removed to Chicago, where he devoted himself to his profession. While in practice there his heart began to be deeply stirred by the sad condition of the many neglected children in that large city, and he was finally moved to open, in Jan., 1871, a Home for Foundlings. Its beginnings were in a small frame house, with a meager stock of furniture, and almost no capital. The Home has now grown to be a spacious brick building of eighty rooms, comfortably furnished and heated. It is located at 114 South Wood Street, Chicago. Up to the present time more than 2,000 mothers and nearly 6,000 babies have been sheltered and cared for here; the inmates now number 65 children, and 40 or 50 nurses and care-takers. All this has been done by funds sent, without solicitation, to Dr. Shipman, he trusting for help only in God's answers to his prayers.

Dr. Shipman died Jan. 19, 1893, after an illness of a few weeks from paralysis. His funeral was attended in the Third Presbyterian Church by his pastor, Dr. Withrow, assisted by Prof. Fiske of Chicago Theological Seminary, whose family physician Dr. Shipman had been for many years. The tributes then given to his life and character are summed up in the words, "a strong, courageous, self-sacrificing, faithful, humble servant of God." Mrs. Shipman, who was a devoted and sympathizing helper of her husband in his life work, is now continuing to carry on the Home with the assistance of two of her daughters.

URQUHART, born Sept. 7, 1847, daughter of Capt. William S. Urquhart. Capt. Urquhart entered the British Navy at 18, as midshipman, and was in the service five years. He was the first one to see on its arrival the first steam vessel that crossed the Atlantic. He was stationed on the lookout, and reported a vessel to landward, apparently on fire; order was given to tack ship and go to their assistance, but before they could turn the ship, the vessel was out of sight. Capt. Urquhart afterwards moved to Canada, and followed the vocation of captain on the Lake from Montreal to Buffalo. Mr. Boardman's home in Belgrade is 75 miles from the National Park, in the midst of the grandest scenery. They have the Yellow Stone Range plainly in sight, and all about them are lofty peaks and dark and deep canons, with swiftly running streams; they have also at the rising and setting of the sun a beautiful mirage.

The following account of Judge Boardman is taken from the Ithaca Daily Journal. The sketch of his life and character was written by Judge Francis M. Finch of the New York Court of Appeals, his near friend and former law partner.

Nothing could be more startling than the news which was received here last Saturday of the death of Judge Boardman. He was seen but a day or two before passing through the streets apparently as well as usual, his fine presence the picture of a hale, vigorous, and intellectual elderly gentleman; consequently his friends were not prepared for the tidings announcing his demise.

The Journal learns that Judge Boardman contracted a cold during his visit to Alaska this summer, which he could not shake off. This cold was augmented by a drive in the rain at Sheldrake last week, and Friday while at breakfast at his summer cottage the Judge told his family that he knew he felt the premonitory symptoms of pneumonia. At once a telegram was dispatched to Dr. E. J. Morgan asking him to come to Sheldrake. Other imperative engagements prevented Dr. Morgan's responding to the summons in person, but his partner, Dr. Bishop, went to Sheldrake on the Lehigh Valley train in the forenoon, and remained with the Judge until night. Dr. Bishop found the case a critical one, but anticipated a favorable result. Evidently medicine was of no avail, for the terrible disease terminated fatally at an early hour last Saturday, the sad news being received here even while the bells were tolling the obsequies of another of Ithaca's honored residents.

Douglass Boardman was born in the town of Covert, County of Seneca, on the 31st day of October, 1822. He was the youngest of twelve children, of whom his brother, the Hon. Truman Boardman, who represented his district in the State Senate of 1858, and two sisters, Mrs. Lucy B. Smith and Miss Emily Boardman, alone survive. The youngest son of this large family early sought an education which might fit him for a professional life. In a private school of his native town and afterwards in the academy at Ovid he prepared for a collegiate course, and, after three years of study in Hobart College at Geneva, he entered the senior class at Yale and graduated from that institution in 1842. He immediately began the study of law and was admitted to the bar after the usual period of preparation. He was married in 1846 to the wife who now survives. He held the office of District Attorney of the County of Tompkins from 1848 to 1851, and of County Judge and Surrogate from 1852 to 1856. In both positions he displayed unusual ability, and met his duties and responsibilities with an unflagging industry and a promptness and accuracy which characterized his whole life. At the close of his term as County Judge he formed a partnership with the writer of this memorial which lasted for ten years, and until Judge Boardman was called to the bench of the Supreme Court. Those were years of hard study and severe labor, which alone could enable the young practitioners to cope with an existing bar of unusual strength and ability. Whatever of success they attained was largely due to the clear and discriminating judgment, and the wise and prudent discretion of the older member of the firm. And it is a source of satisfaction to the survivor to remember that the connection was never marred or disturbed by the slightest disagreement, the least misunderstanding, or even one worried or hasty word.

In 1865 Judge Boardman was elected a Justice of the Supreme Court for the sixth district to serve for a term of eight years. In the convention which nominated him there were numerous candidates, each having his own zealous and earnest friends, and when the result was reached after a long struggle it was largely due to a conviction on the part of the delegates that Judge Boardman possessed in unusual degree the character and habit of mind, the firmness and decision of purpose, the patience and strict integrity which should attend the judicial office. The result outran even the expectation of partial friends. The new judge found in his work the field and the arena best suited for his development and success.

Pleasant but firm, cheerful but in earnest, patient but determined, prompt but careful and prudent, and always thoroughly impartial and striving only for exact justice, he so won the confidence of the bar and of the people that at the close of his term he was re-elected for a new term of fourteen years without an antagonist and practically by a unanimous vote. His judicial ability was at that time so well understood and appreciated that he was at once assigned to the general term of the third department, and so passed from the trial courts to an appellate tribunal, presided over at first by Judge Miller, who later passed to the bench of the court of last resort, and afterwards by Judge Leonard, who still presides at a general term. Undoubtedly, Judge Boardman preferred the variety and mental excitement of the circuit where point and decision follow each other with swift velocity to the slower and more studious labors of the appellate court, but he soon demonstrated that there also he was in his proper place, and fully equipped for his new duties and responsibilities. His opinions were almost without exception terse and brief, with no waste of words and little elaboration of argument, but marked always by the strong good sense and sound judgment which were his chief characteristics. He easily won the respect and the friendship of his associates, and came to be universally regarded as a prudent and careful and able judge. And so his life and his work ran on until 1887, when his term expired. He might have been again chosen for the five years remaining before reaching the age of seventy, but resolutely declined, saying that he needed rest, and was entitled to it after twenty-six years of judicial labor.

But rest, with him, meant only change of occupation to duties less exacting and laborious, but still requiring the exercise of all his ability and discretion.

He possessed in an unusual degree the qualities of a thorough business man. In the management of his own affairs he was systematic, thrifty, and prudent; averse to anything like waste or extravagance, and inclined to a plain and simple life. His financial prudence and ability found a wide field and a severe test in the management of two large estates committed to his care as executor. The first came to his hands heavily burdened with debts accumulated by the owner in a determined struggle to hold his assets against the sacrifice of a falling market. To Judge Boardman, who seldom approved of a debt and dreaded its risks, the situation was peculiarly disquieting, but he met the emergency both with skill and courage and saved the large fortune entrusted to his care from loss or sacrifice, and transmitted it unharmed to the daughter who was substantially the sole legatee. Naturally, he became the executor of her will, and was compelled to hold the estate through a long and severely contested litigation which ended in the diversion to private and personal use of a large residue which the testatrix had devoted to a worthy public purpose, and the educational benefit of the youth of the land.

Judge Boardman was a director of the First National Bank of Ithaca from its organization in 1864, to the time of his death, and became its president, succeeding in that office the Hon. J. B. Williams in 1884. He became a trustee of Cornell University by vote of the alumni in 1875, and was re-elected by the trustees in 1885. Upon the organization of the Law School of the University he was appointed its Dean and became active and efficient in promoting its success.

In all these positions his business sagacity and prudence were of great value to the interests which he served. In the investment and management of the large endowment of the University and the appropriation and administration of its income, in the care of the bank and a watchful oversight of its finances, in the control of the estates committed to his trust, he found heavy burdens and large responsibilities which were borne with far more than the usual ability. To these duties it was a pleasure to him to add his governing aid to the law school and his advice in its management, always thoughtful and wise. And so in these labors his days were usefully spent after the close of his judicial career.

It is a busy, a useful, and a valuable life, the outline of which has thus been sketched. Apparently, it seemed likely to be prolonged for many more years. But the end came, as the end always comes, when the appointed time of destiny arrives. He has left us to a heavy sorrow for his loss, and only possible to bear as we remember his worthy and useful life.

At a meeting of the members of the Bar of Tompkins County, held Sept. 7, 1891, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

“Resolved, That we realize first and most deeply our affection for Judge Boardman as a friend, and our respect for him as a man, inspired by his loyalty and devotion to his personal friends; his uniform kindness and courtesy to all; his helpful encouragement to the younger members of his profession; his positive and clear conviction, held firmly, but without intolerance; his tenacity of purpose; his courage; his love of truth; his keen sense of justice; and his inflexible integrity.

“That we recall with pride his long and successful professional career of forty-six years as a member of our bar, during which he was three years district attorney, and four years county judge of this county, and twenty-two years justice of the Supreme Court, all of which offices he filled with honor to himself, the county, and the State. As a practicing lawyer he was diligent and painstaking, loyal to his clients, jealous of their rights, a forceful advocate, an honorable and dangerous adversary. As a judge he never forgot the respect due from the bench to the bar, nor failed to receive the respect due from the bar to the bench. To a healthy physical constitution, a vigorous intellect, a native judicial temperament and sound common sense, he added severe study, a broad and thorough knowledge of the law, a mastery of the methods of legal reasoning, and profound love of justice. He was an honest and successful lawyer, an able, wise, and upright judge."

Aside from Judge Boardman's high position as a lawyer and justice of the Supreme Court of New York, he was even more widely known as a leading trustee of Cornell University, and especially for his part in the defense of the claims of that institution to the large estate left it by the will of Mrs. Jennie McGraw Fiske, in the celebrated suit brought by Prof. Fiske, her husband, to which allusion is made in the preceding account by Judge Finch.

When the Law School of the University was organized, Judge Boardman was chosen its Dean, and his interest in the work and prosperity of the school was active and untiring. After his death, on the dedication of its new building in Feb., 1893, by the unanimous vote of the trustees, it received in honor of him the name of Boardman Hall. At the same time there was presented to the Law School by Judge Boardman's widow and daughter, as a memorial of him, the noble and costly gift of the Moak Library, a unique collection of about twelve thousand volumes gathered by the late Nathaniel C. Moak, Esq., of Albany. Of this library Judge Finch, who made the presentation in behalf of the donors, said:

"It is hardly possible to overestimate its value. I know of but one or two collections in the land which are as perfect and complete. . . . It is a monument to the erudition and devotion, the patient purpose and the wise prodigality of the distinguished jurist who formed it. With its splendid wealth of reports, statutes, periodicals, and text-books, it not only doubles the number of volumes on our shelves, but makes the Cornell Law Library one of the fullest and most complete in the world. A competent expert, who watched, and even aided Mr. Moak in collecting his books, and who knows thoroughly what they are, is authority for the assertion, 'that there is no case cited by a lawyer in his brief, or by a judge in his opinion, in any court of Great Britain or America, which cannot be verified in the Moak Library.'"

- 2603 HAROLD E., b. April 8, 1875; is a graduate of Somerville High School, and is now a student in Tufts College.

1858. Hon. Halsey Joseph⁸ Boardman (Nathaniel,⁷ Nathaniel,⁶ Nathaniel,⁵ Stephen,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹) of Boston, Mass., born in Norwich, Vt., May 18, 1834, married Nov. 6, 1862, GEORGIA M. HINMAN of Boston.

Mr. Boardman is one of the prominent men, of Boston, where he is active as a lawyer, as a politician, and as a business man. He was fitted in the public schools of Norwich for Thetford Academy, and graduated from that institution in 1854 as valedictorian of his class. Entering Dartmouth College in the same year, he graduated in 1858 with high honors. After teaching the High School in Leominster, Mass., one year, he continued, in the office of Norcross & Snow at Fitchburg, and later with Philip H. Sears at Boston, the study of law, which he had pursued while teaching. Admitted to the Suffolk Bar in 1860, he began the practice of law in Boston as senior partner of the firm of Boardman & Blodgett, this relation continuing until the elevation of his junior partner, Caleb Blodget, to the bench of the Superior Court. Subsequently Stephen H. Tyng was admitted as partner, and later Frank Paul. Mr. Boardman is now in practice alone. During the past few years he has been engaged in various manufacturing and railroad interests, which have necessitated frequent and prolonged absences from the city and State. His business and legal talents have made him influential in many quarters. He is president of the Duluth & Winnipeg Railroad Company, and a director of several other railroad corporations. He is also president of the Evans Coal Company, a large producer of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania; president of the Commercial Mining Company of Colorado, and director of the Boston Marine Insurance Company. Mr. Boardman has been repeatedly called by his fellow-citizens to public office. From 1862 to 1864 he was commissioner of the Board of Enrolment, under President Lincoln, for the Fourth Congressional District. He was also chairman of the Republican Ward and City Committee of Boston in 1874, member of the Common Council and its president in 1875; Republican candidate for Mayor in the same year; member of the lower House of the Massachusetts Legislature from 1883 to 1885 inclusive. In the House he was a member of the Railroad Committee during his entire term, and House chairman during the last two years. In this capacity he was instrumental in securing a large amount of legislation calculated to improve the railroad service in the State, notably provisions for the change of railroad crossings, safety couplers on freight cars, regulations against discrimination in freight rates, and for improvement in signals, and precautions enforced against color blindness,—all matters involving exhaustive examination and sound judgment. He was elected to the State Senate in 1887 and 1888, and was president of that body both years. Mr. Boardman's influence upon the railroad legislation of Massachusetts has probably been as great and far-reaching as that of any other man.

1909. Samuel Parish⁸ Boardman (Hiram,⁷ Moses,⁶ Samuel,⁵ Moses,⁴ Samuel,³ Isaac,² *Samuel*¹), of Lincoln, Ill., born July 27, 1829, at Granville, O., married Nov. 10, 1864, RACHEL WOODWARD, daughter of Gurdon and Mary (Savage) Woodward, the latter from Utica, N. Y., but of a family originally from Connecticut.

At the age of fifteen, Mr. Boardman had finished his preparation for college, and entered Dennison University, where he was graduated with honor, in the class of 1851. After his graduation he went to Illinois, where, seeing the possibilities the unbroken prairie offered for wool-growing, he bought lands, returned to Ohio, and had 2,000 sheep driven from Stark Co., O., to the city of Springfield. From this time he devoted himself largely to the study of wool-growing and of the tariff in connection with this industry. He bought a large tract of land near Lincoln, Ill., and here, at "Sheep Walk," as his model farm was afterwards called, he became a prolific writer on many subjects, and his articles on his specialties, Wool and the Tariff, were sought for by all the leading agricultural papers in the country. He soon became an authority on these subjects in the West. At one time, when he had been busily engaged in writing a pamphlet on wool-growing in Missouri, and had ceased to contribute his tariff articles for the Rural New Yorker and the N. Y. Tribune, Dr. Samuel Randall wrote him an urgent letter in which he said, "I beg of you to let us hear again the beating of those hammers for the Tariff." In Sept., 1868, he was asked to prepare and deliver a course of lectures during the coming winter before the students of the Illinois State University on "Wool-growing as a Practical Industry," and it was upon this work he was busily engaged when he was stricken with apoplexy which caused his death Nov. 2, 1869. His untimely loss was greatly mourned by the people of Illinois, and by the many whom he had helped and encouraged by his practical suggestions, sound reasoning, and kindly advice. During his life in Illinois, he became an intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln. When the Civil War broke out, being himself physically unable to enter the ranks, he furnished liberally of his money for the support of the Union cause.

The present home of Mr. Boardman's family is at Bellevue, O., on "Fire Lands," bought in 1806 by Mrs. Boardman's grandfather Woodward, who was of New London, Conn., where he drew the plans and took the contract for the first lighthouse erected there. The wife of this Mr. Woodward was a Shepard, also of Connecticut.

* The following is a portion of the letter of Mr. Whittier :

MY DEAR COUSIN:

I have just opened thy letter and read of thy great sorrow. The dear, beautiful boy whose picture I have delighted to look at, how much he must have been to thee ! At a time like this words must seem almost intrusive; the poor, ordinary phrases of consolation avail nothing. But it is something to have had nine years of his beautiful life, and the time will come, if it has not already, when thee would not exchange the loving memory of him for any living child in the world. And with him it is well. What trials, sorrows, temptations he has escaped, the dear God and Father who has called him to Himself only knows. . . . I wish I could see you and tell you how deeply and tenderly I sympathize with you. With love to thy husband whose great sorrow for your mutual loss I can understand, and thy mother and Aunt Mary and thy sisters, I am dear Lizzie, thy affectionate Cousin,

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

*News has been received of the death by drowning of Norman Ross, June 19, 1894, under peculiarly sad circumstances. While bathing with a companion in the Des Moines River, by the accidental overturning of their boat, they fell into a hole beyond their depth. Another boy, who had just left the water, swam to their help, and would have assisted Ross, who was nearest him, but he, seeing his younger and weaker friend struggling for life, called out that he should be helped first. On returning for the rescue of Ross, he was found to have sunk for the last time before he could be reached. He was an open-hearted boy, generous to a fault, and one of the brightest students in his school.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The following Boardmans, mostly from Connecticut, are among those whose ancestry has not so far been traced. It has hitherto almost without exception proved true, that those of the name living, up to early in the present century, in eastern Massachusetts, Maine, and New Hampshire, belonged either to the Ipswich or Cambridge family.*

1. Israel Bordman of Newington, Conn. (formerly part of Wethersfield). No connection between him and the family of Samuel Boreman has been found. According to the inscription on his gravestone he was born in 1721. He married Aug. 4, 1746, at Wethersfield, REBECCA MEEKINS, both being then of that town. As shown by the record of her death she was born in 1723; she was the youngest of six children, one son and five daughters, of Joseph and Mary Meekins (or Maken) of Hartford, east side of the river, now East Hartford. The father and mother died† in 1725, in the time of the "Great Sicknesse," and the children were placed under the care of their uncles, John and Samuel Meekins. When Rebecca was fourteen, her uncle, Lieut. John Meekins, resigned his trust, Dec. 7, 1737, and she made choice of Thomas Hurlbut of Wethersfield as guardian. Mr. Hurlbut had married her aunt Rebecca Meekins, and she no doubt grew up in their family in Wethersfield. Her only brother, Joseph, became the heir of their uncle, Lieut. John Meekins, who left no issue. Hannah, one of her sisters, married Jonathan Olmsted, and became the ancestress of Frederic Law Olmsted, and of the late Prof. Denison Olmsted of Yale. The Meekins or Maken family seems to have been one of some importance in East Hartford. Many of their gravestones are to be seen in good condition in its cemetery.

* The earliest record found of Boardmans in Connecticut of other than Wethersfield ancestry (the Preston family excepted), is that of Mrs. Elizabeth Boardman of Middletown, administration on whose estate was granted Jan. 5, 1730-1, to her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Banks. The latter was the wife of John Banks who was of Boston, Apr., 1723, and March, 1727, and died in Middletown, Sept. 10, 1730, aged 44. Records of six children of John and Elizabeth Banks are found in Middletown, four of whom are also on record in Boston, 1718-1726; one of these, however, Elizabeth, is set down in Middletown records as having been born in Lynn, Aug. 18, 1721. There were Boardmans of the Cambridge family early at Lynn, and it is a natural inference that Mrs. Elizabeth Boardman may have been the widow of one of the name from that region, perhaps by a second marriage, and after her husband's death had come to Middletown to live with her daughter, Mrs. Banks. The miscellaneous character of the articles in her inventory, which includes two gold rings, suggests two marriages. Some of its items are, augers, gimlets, chisels, several hammers, cooper's adze, drawing knife, 11 lbs. of lead, two guns, a "Prospect Glass," two "books for seafaring men," etc., etc.

† Here Lieth y^e Body of Mr. Joseph Maken who died Janewary y^e 1, 1724, 5 in y^e 55 year of His Age.

Here Lieth y^e Body of Mrs Mary Maken who died Jan^{ry} 1724, 5 in y^e 40th yaer of Her Age. (Double Gravestone in East Hartford Cemetery.)

Mr. Bordman was a clothier by trade, and early settled in Newington, where he owned the church covenant, Dec. 13, 1747. The births of his five children are in Wethersfield town records, and the baptisms of all but Elijah, born March 31, 1752, in those of the Newington church. The following from Vol. 7, p. 628, Simsbury, Conn., deeds, found quoted in the Noble Genealogy, shows that he lived about this time in that town: — July 6, 1752, Jonathan Noble of Hartford bought of Jonathan Pettibone of Simsbury, “a certain fulling mill with the Damm, and all privileges of ponding for using said mill as it is standing on a small River or Streame in said Simsbury, and hath Lately been in the Improvement of Israel Boardman and Samuel Buck.” He was in Simsbury also, March 15, 1753, when he witnessed the will of David Case of that town. After returning to Newington, Mr. Bordman bought there, Feb. 22, 1759, of the heirs of Martin Kellogg, one-third of a saw-mill privilege on Mill Brook, near the house of Phinehas Andrus, with one-third of the streams, dams, ponds, land, trees, and brush growing thereon, “excepting the Saw-mill and movable utensils which are destroyed.” This property, when a deed of it was given in 1771, is described as including “my dwelling house and fulling mill, and stream, my clouthiers shears, and all my implements of fulling and pressing.” It passed finally into the hands of his son Elijah, who sold it in 1777, “reserving to my father Israel Bordman and his wife Rebecca, the use and interest of one-half.” The inscription on Mr. Boardman’s tombstone in the Newington churchyard reads:—

In Memory of Mr. Israel Boardman who died

Nov. 22, 1796, aged 75 years.

Erected by his daughter Rebecca.

Mrs. Rebecca Bordman died Dec. 9, 1814, aged 91. (Church Record.) Children of Israel and Rebecca Boardman:

They had no children. Rebecca died Mch. 21, 1814, aged 55. (Church Record.)

SECOND GENERATION.

2. Theodore² Boardman (*Israel*¹), of Williamstown, Mass., born Dec. 22, 1747, baptized at Newington Jan. 31, 1747-8, married Aug. 24, 1774, EUNICE LUSK, probably daughter of John Lusk, baptized at Newington May 20, 1750. Theodore, as appears from the land records at Albany, bought, July 8, 1771, of William Wright of Pittsfield, land in Stephentown which had been bought by Wright in 1765 of Stephen Van Rensselaer, lord of the Manor of Rensselaerwick. There were two pieces of 100 acres each, which Theodore, calling himself of Williamstown, sold Dec. 1, 1773, one to Elisha Eggleston, Jr., the other to Alexander Hubbs, both of Stephentown. He was a clothier like his father. He bought, Sept. 3, 1774, land with dwelling in Williamstown from Jabez Morehouse, and May 4, 1779, a mill privilege. His name is found in the Revolutionary Rolls at the Boston State House. He enlisted for eight months in Capt. Warren's Co., Col. Bagley's Reg., 1778, and was afterwards Corporal in Capt. Israel Harris's Co. in a regiment from Berkshire Co. which "marched in the Alarm to the Northern Frontier," pay roll dated Jan., 1781. He died Sept. 21, 1816. 3. Benajah² Boardman (*Israel*¹), born at Newington May 14, 1749, baptized May 21, 1749, married May, 1772, LUCY PRICE of Wethersfield, who died May 20, 1773, leaving one son. Benajah married 2d, Dec. 22, 1774, MARTHA CHURCHILL, born Oct. 5, 1751, daughter of Dea. Jesse and Jerusha (Gaylord) Churchill of Newington. His four eldest children were baptized at Newington, the two younger of whom are said in the record to have been "brought down from Arlington." This was in Vermont, where Benajah settled for a time. He afterwards removed to Ovid, N. Y., in 1788, and built, in 1793, the first mill in that town. He moved from there to Canoga, N. Y., and built the first mill there also. He was widely known and highly esteemed as a man of sound judgment and high character. He died at Canoga Feb. 27, 1813, and his wife died May 30th of the same year. Benajah Boardman was Sergeant in Capt. Elijah Wright's Co., Col. Eno's Reg't, on the Hudson, 1781, engaged for three months. Children:

4. Elijah² Boardman (*Israel*¹), born March 31, 1752, married NANCY, eldest daughter of Francis Deming. He removed from Newington about 1782 to Arlington, Vt., then to Granville, N. Y., and St. Albans, Vt., and finally to Junius, Seneca Co., N. Y., where he died July 26, 1814, and was there buried. His widow died at Newstead, Erie Co., N. Y., Mch. 18, 1846, and was buried there. "Elijah Boardman 1st" of Wethersfield (so called to distinguish him from a younger Elijah, son of Elnathan of Rocky Hill), was in the Company of Capt. Joel Clark, Col. Jedediah Huntington's Reg., Gen. Spencer's Brigade, at the siege of Boston in the summer of 1775. He was probably the Elijah of Wethersfield who marched in the Lexington Alarm, his brother Samuel being of the same company. He was in Arnold's Expedition through Maine to Quebec, which left Cambridge in Sept., 1775, and was in the Division of Col. Eno, which, after suffering great hardships, returned home. At an early period of the war he was engaged in privateering, was taken prisoner, confined for a time in a prison ship, and finally exchanged. He was one of five survivors of one hundred imprisoned at the same time. He was a farmer and clothier. Children:

FRANCIS.

1. Robert¹ Francis, the first of the name in Wethersfield (perhaps son, either of John of Braintree, or Richard of Cambridge), is first mentioned when the birth of his daughter Susanna is recorded in 1651. His first land, including a house-lot of three and a half acres, is recorded Mch. 29, 1652. The latter is still the homestead of one of his descendants. His name is on the list of Wethersfield freemen in 1669. His wife's name was JOANE. Joane Francis died Jan. 29, 1704-5, aged 76; Robert died Jan. 2, 1711-12, aged 83. (Town Rec. and Gravestone.) He disposed of his property by deed of gift to his children. They were:

- 2 SUSANNA,² b. Nov. 1, 1651; m. Apr. 15, 1671, John North.

9. John³ Francis, born Oct. 12, 1684, m. Dec. 30, 1708, MARY HATCH, who died July 15, 1718.* He married 2d, Feb. 12, 1719, ABIGAIL

*The gravestone of Mrs. Mary Francis, next that of her husband, gives her age as 50, making her his senior by sixteen years; 50 is perhaps an error of the stone-cutter for 30.

STODDARD, dau. of Nathaniel Stoddard; she died Aug. 22, 1723, aged 26. He married next, LYDIA——, who died Oct. 12, 1733, in her 36th year. He married 4th, Oct. 12, 1735, EUNICE DICKINSON. He died Sept. 19, 1749. His widow, EUNICE, died May 21, 1770. His home in Wethersfield was on the spot where his son John and his grandson Elias afterwards lived, on the corner near the North Brick Schoolhouse. Tradition reports him a very athletic man, far surpassing in strength any other in the town. He kept a tavern, and many are the feats he is said to have performed, such as taking in his arms a professed bully who came to fight, and tossing him into the briar bushes, near where he was at work; outrunning another by whom he was challenged to a race on his way to his daily labor, though at the same time loaded with an ox-yoke and chain which he was carrying; tossing into the street from the door of his house two men together, one in each hand, when riotous. Others of the family were also distinguished for uncommon physical powers. His children were:

- 23 JOHN,⁴ b. Sept. 28, 1710. He m. Mary Dodd of Hartford; had children, and d. May 15, 1738, all before the birth of his younger brother, also called John; his widow m. Peter Ayrault.
- 24 ELISHA.
- 25 MARY, m. a Bassett, probably Jonathan, who, by wife Mary, has seven children (1739 to 1753), recorded in Wethersfield.
- 26 LYDIA, b. June 4, 1738.
- 27 EUNICE, b. Aug. 5, 1741; m. Nov. 3, 1762, Abijah Tryon.
- 28+ JOHN (Capt.), b. June 20, 1744; m. Rhoda Wright.
- 29 MERCY, b. Feb. 6, 1747; d. July 6, 1747.

28. Capt. John⁴ Francis, born June 20, 1744, in Wethersfield, died there May 30, 1824, aged 80. (Gravestone.) He married Sept. 20, 1764.

John Francis. RHODA WRIGHT, who died Mch. 27, 1816, aged 75. (Gravestone.) She was the daughter of Elias⁴ Wright (Nathaniel,³ Joseph,² Thomas¹).

Capt. John Francis was a soldier in the Revolution, and served as First Sergeant of the 4th Company, Hezekiah Welles of Wethersfield, Captain, Erastus Wolcott, Colonel, State Troops in 1775-6. This regiment formed part of the detachment that occupied Boston after the enemy had evacuated the town.*

He was Second Lieutenant in Capt. Elijah Wright's Company of Wethersfield, Roger Eno, Colonel, enlisted for service on the Hudson; arrived in camp, June 29, 1778.

He was First Lieutenant of Capt. Samuel Granger's Company, Levi Welles, Colonel, raised for service at Horseneck, and along the coast of Long Island Sound during 1780.

* See also Records of the State of Conn., Vol. I, pp. 255, 256, 486.

He was Captain of the first company of Wethersfield in the Provisional Regiment in 1781, and served at other times, of which there is no record. An account given by his grandson, Anson Wright Francis, says of him, that Capt. John Francis "was not absent from his command to exceed four months after he enlisted, during the war." He said, "The proudest day of my life was when I marched at the head of my company of 101 men to the Wethersfield Church to take the oath." He was a member of the Legislature from Wethersfield in 1800, and held many important offices in the town. His children were:

- 30 JENNET,⁵ b. Jan. 13, 1765; d. in Wethersfield; unm.
- 31 JOHN, b. Feb. 22, 1767; m. Nov., 1792, Huldah Bulkley, who d. Apr. 11, 1833, aged 68. He d. Jan. 22, 1835, aged 68. (Gravestones in Wethersfield.)

33. Capt. Daniel⁵ Francis of Wethersfield, born there Dec. 6, 1770, m. June 5, 1799, MEHITABEL GOODRICH,* daughter of Capt. Elizur and Abigail (Deming) Goodrich. She was born June 13, 1777 (another record says June 9th), and died Dec. 16, 1845. (Gravestone.) Capt. Daniel died Jan. 9, 1837 (Jan. 14, gravestone). His home in Wethersfield was a brick house on the west side of High Street, since occupied by William P. Fay.

Capt. Daniel Francis was a sea captain, and as master of the brig Eliza, sailed from New London, Dec. 25, 1796, bound for the West India Islands with a cargo of cattle, corn, salt beef, and sundries, including a "venture" on his own account. The Eliza was captured on the high seas, June 10, 1797, by the French frigate or privateer, La Pansy, Captain Vatto, and La Thetis, Captain Bedonin; was taken into Guadeloupe and the cargo condemned by the French tribunal, thus becoming a total loss to the owners. The Captain's "venture" was merchandize valued at $225.75. This was one of the so-called French claims, for which the United States received payment, and ninety years after receipt, paid to the heirs of Capt. Francis the original amount of his loss as proved, $225.75, without interest. The value of the vessel's cargo was $7,108.15; of the vessel, about $4,000. The children of Daniel and Mehitabel were:

GOODRICH.

Ensign William¹ Goodrich, born in England, near Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, came to New England, probably at the same time with his brother John, both settling early in Wethersfield. He married, Oct. 4, 1648, SARAH MARVIN, daughter of Matthew Marvin of Hartford; he died in 1676. His widow married Capt. William Curtiss of Stratford, where she died in 1702. He was admitted freeman of Connecticut, May, 1656; was deputy from Wethersfield to the General Court during five terms from May, 1662, to October, 1666, and was one of the grand jury, May, 1662. He was confirmed Ensign of the train-band at Wethersfield by the General Court, May, 1665. He had nine children, the youngest of whom was Colonel David² Goodrich of Wethersfield, born May 4, 1667; married March 7, 1689, HANNAH WRIGHT, born March 10, 1671, daughter of Thomas, Jr., and Elizabeth (Chittenden) Wright. She died April 27, 1698, and he married 2d, Dec. 1, 1698, PRUDENCE CHURCHILL, born July 2, 1678, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Churchill, who died May 9, 1752. Col. Goodrich died June 23, 1755, aged 88.

In May, 1704, "Sarg't David Goodrich" was commissioned by the General Court Lieutenant of the company raised in Hartford County to march to the relief of Hampshire County, Mass., in the troubles with the Indians; also in December of the same year for another campaign. In the campaign of 1709 he was Captain, Adjutant, and Regimental Quartermaster. In February, 1712, he served as captain in Hampshire County, and again in August, 1723. In October, 1723, he was a member of the Committee of War for the Colony, and was appointed again in 1725, then ranking as Colonel. He was deputy from Wethersfield to the General Court during the long series of years from 1716 to 1740, with only now and then an interval of a term. He served on various committees, and in November, 1724, became a member of the Governor's Council, continuing to serve in that capacity afterwards. He was, during most of his life, Justice of the Peace, and for many years a Justice of the Quorum. His son by his first wife, Deacon David Goodrich of Rocky Hill, born Dec. 8, 1694, married Hepzibah, daughter of Lieut. Jonathan Boardman. (See No. 49.) Another son was Col. Elizur Goodrich, officer in the Louisburg expedition, and a man of importance in Wethersfield. His oldest son by his second wife was

Hezekiah³ Goodrich of Wethersfield, born Jan. 28, 1700. He married, Oct. 16, 1729, HONOR DEMING, born Dec. 16, 1701, daughter of Samuel Deming. He died Oct. 9, 1732, at the age of 32, leaving one son and one daughter. His widow married 2d, July 5, 1733, Dr. Thomas Perrin, and they have recorded, Sarah, born Dec. 27, 1739. Mrs. Honor Perrin died Sept. 3, 1778, aged 77. Their son was

Captain Elizur⁴ Goodrich of Wethersfield, born Oct. 8, 1730. He married, Sept. 24, 1760, ABIGAIL DEMING, born April 5, 1734, daughter of David Deming and Martha Russell, his wife (see page 145); she died in Wethersfield, Nov. 21, 1813, in her 80th year.

Capt. Goodrich, who was a mariner, died March 16, 1785, of small pox on the Island of Mariegalante, one of the French West Indies, and was buried there under a large tree, his name being cut in the bark to mark his grave.

During the Revolutionary War Capt. Goodrich proved himself an ardent patriot, helping in various ways the cause of his country. He served as a private soldier in the 2d Conn. Regiment, Joseph Spencer, Colonel, 9th Company, from Wethersfield, commanded by Capt. John Chester, at the Battle of Bunker Hill; he enlisted May 15th, and was discharged Dec. 17, 1775. He was a private in Col. Wolcott's Regiment, 3d Company, Selah Hart, Captain, from January to March, 1777. He was sergeant in Lieut. David Smith's Company, Col. Thomas Belden's Regiment, enlisting April 13th, and discharged May 19, 1777. (See Conn. in the Rev.)

At the first session of the Connecticut Legislature (after the Declaration of Independence), held at New Haven, Oct. 10, 1776, and continued to Nov. 7th, following, "Capt. Elizur Goodrich" is the first mentioned of the two Representatives from Wethersfield, Col. Thomas Belden being the second; the same is true at their second session at Hartford, Nov. 19, 1776, and at Middletown, Dec. 18, 1776. (See Rec. of State of Conn., Vol. I.) He was also Representative in 1778.

At a session of the "Governor and Council of Safety, held Oct. 26, 1776, Capt. Elizur Goodrich of Wethersfield was given permission to export in sloop Betsey, said Goodrich Master to Marygallant, 80 bbls. of Beef, 25 bbls. of flour, 15 bbls. of pork, 6 oxen and 60 doz. of poultry, and make his returns in salt." (Conn. State Rec.)

"At a town meeting held in Wethersfield Sept. 29, 1777, Messrs. Elizur Goodrich, Chester Wells, Appleton Robbins, Elijah Wright, James Stanley, Joseph Bulkley, Martin Kellogg, Janna Deming, and Lieut. Isaac Nash were chosen a committee to immediately procure the several articles mentioned in the request of the Gov. and Council of Safety of Sept. 12, 1777, and transmit the same to Mr. Elijah Hubbard, Commissary at Middletown, to be conveyed by him to the respective Commissaries of the Battalions of the Continental Army raised in this state," etc. (Weth. Rec.)

"At a town meeting of Wethersfield held June 19, 1780—Voted that Mr. Elizur Goodrich, John Robbins, Martin Kellogg and Solomon Dunham be a committee to borrow the money necessary to pay the bounty offered by the town, on interest until the town shall replace the same, and settle with the inlisted persons and take their receipt for the same." (Weth. Rec.)

Capt. Goodrich removed the lead weights from the windows of his then newly-erected house in Wethersfield, had them made into bullets, and sent them to Boston after the Battle of Lexington. He was the intimate friend of Col. John Chester, Silas Deane, and other revolutionary patriots of Wethersfield. Children:

- i. ABIGAIL,* b. April 24, 1762; d. May 5, 1829, aged 67. (Church Record.) She kept a private school in Wethersfield; never married. Her will was made April 16, 1829, and probated July 1, 1829.
- ii. HEZEKIAH, b. May 9, 1764; d. June 13, 1765.
- iii. HEZEKIAH, b. May 11, 1766; d. in Circleville, Ohio, Feb. 17, 1833. He was a graduate of Yale; removed to the South, and settled in Greenville District, S. C., where he is said to have married. He afterwards removed to the West, and settled in Circleville, O., where he was for many years a circuit judge. He had two or more children. His daughter Abigail married Nathaniel Kyle, resided in Salem, Marion Co., Ill., and died Dec. 22, 1854. They had children, Hezekiah Goodrich and Mary (who both died before their mother), Newton, Margaret, Oscar, Theresa (m. ——— Poynter).
- iv. HONOR, b. Nov. 17, 1768; m. Dec. 24, 1795, Phinehas Hurlbut of West Hartford, who was baptized at Newington April 14, 1765. Honor died Nov. 20, 1809. They had one child, Phinehas, Jr., b. 1797. Mr. Hurlbut married 2d, June 2, 1815, Hannah Andrews of Wethersfield, and had one child, Honor Goodrich Hurlbut, bapt. Oct. 13, 1815 (m. Mr. Field), he (Phinehas) then living in Hartford.
- v. ELIZUR, b. Aug. 18, 1771. He was a sea captain, and died at sea Aug. 16, 1794, aged 23.
- vi. MARY, b. May 1, 1773; d. May 5, 1857; m. Jan. 1, 1809, James Wright of Wethersfield, who died Nov. 7, 1821, aged 58 (gravestone). They had children: (1) John Goodrich Wright, b. Nov. 13, 1809; d. May 29, 1888; (2) Charles Wright, b. Oct. 29, 1811; d. Aug. 11, 1885; (3) Mary Anna Wright, b. Jan. 10, 1814; res. Wethersfield; (4) Abigail Deming Wright, b. Nov. 11, 1815; res. Wethersfield.
- vii. MEHITABEL, b. June 13, 1777; d. Dec. 16, 1845 (gravestone); m. June 5, 1799, Capt. Daniel Francis, b. Dec. 6, 1770; d. Jan. 14, 1837 (gravestone). They lived in Wethersfield. Their daughter, Mary, m. William Boardman. (See No. 612; also account of Francis Family.)

HOLTOM OR HOLTUM FAMILY.

This name, originally HOLTHAM, traces of which spelling remain, as will be seen, in early New England records, is now extinct in this family, though brought again in recent years from England to this country. It is found in early English records as that of families in Whitchurch and Salford in Warwickshire; also in Kent and in the city of London. The first ancestor found in New England was

1. John¹ Holtum, who at a meeting of the selectmen of Springfield, Feb. 12, 1671, was granted six acres of land in Springfield, "by Pelatiah Morgan's grant, lying by the north easterly side of the highway which is over y^e wet meadow that lyes against y^e Round hill," together with ten acres "lying upon End Brook on both Sides y^e Brook from hill to hill, and being in breadth up and down stream 40 rod, bounded west or south-west by Joseph Stebbins, east or north east by Samuel Terry." John Holtum's ear mark, "the top of both ears cut off," is registered in Springfield, and he had a daughter, Sarah, whose birth is recorded there Oct. 6, 1673. After living there about ten years, these two pieces of land were attached for a debt of £4 13s. due to Thomas Hancox of Farmington, for which execution was granted Mch. 28, 1682, and John Holtum later removed from the town. He is next found in Lyme, Conn., where he had a grant of land, Sept. 30, 1689, two or three acres "to be laid out by Richard Lord and Edward Dewolfe, on the north side of the pond near Ed. Dewolf's saw-mill, and to supply the town with shewes for their pay, and also the said Holtum doth promise to build a house and to inhabit it the term of four years." On the 19th of Dec., 1692, the town voted him a corner of land lying northward of his other grant, about one acre. There was also laid out to him, Jan. 2, 1692-3, five acres more in the same vicinity. He died before 1699, in which year, May 21, is found in the records of the Center Church, Hartford, the baptism of "Joseph, son to Widow Holtum." The mother, Mrs. Sarah Holtum, afterwards married Mr. Spencer. Her death is recorded at Lyme in connection with the above-mentioned grants of land: "Sarah Spencer, formerly the wife of John Holtum above said, deceased 21 Jan. 1704 $\frac{1}{2}$: George Holtum deceased 21 Jan. 1704 $\frac{1}{2}$ "; the latter was probably a son of John and Sarah. Children of John and Sarah Holtum:

- 2 SARAH, b. in Springfield Oct. 6, 1673.
- 3+ JOHN, b. before 1688; m. Ruth Comstock.
- 4 GEORGE, b——; d. at Lyme Jan. 21, 1704-5.
- 5+ JOSEPH, b. 1693; m. Abigail Hastings.

3. John² Holtum, Jr., first appears in Lyme records July 26, 1709, when he sells land which had been his father's. He is called elsewhere, John Holtum, carpenter. He married RUTH COMSTOCK, daughter of William Comstock and Naomi, his wife, who was the daughter of Mrs. Ruth Noyes of Lyme, as appears from two deeds, in which, May 1, 1719, Ruth Noyes deeds to her "granddaughter, Ruth Comstock, daughter of William Comstock and Neomy his wife," 16 acres of land in Lyme; also Nov. 14, 1725, Daniel Starlin deeds to "John Holtum and Ruth Holthum," land in exchange for some given to "Ruth, wife of said John by Ruth Noyes." The latter was presumably the wife of Rev. Moses Noyes, first minister in Lyme (1666-1729), son of Rev. James of Newbury and brother of Rev. James, first minister of Stonington. He married Ruth Pickett, daughter of John and Ruth (Brewster) Pickett, the latter, daughter of Jonathan and Lucretia Brewster, and granddaughter of Elder William Brewster of Plymouth. John Pickett was a merchant in New London, where he died, 1667, leaving good estate. (Savage.) William Comstock, father of Ruth, was son of John² Comstock, first of the name at Lyme. William and Naomi were married Sept. 10, 1695, and a child, born Aug. 9, 1696, is recorded to them, name gone, but probably Ruth. They had also a son John, and probably William. William, the father, died Mch. 15, 1728. His widow, Naomi, joined by letter the church in Hadlyme soon after its organization, June 26, 1745. Children of John Jr. and Ruth Holtum:

- 6 SARAH, "Sarah Holtom, dau. of John Holtom, has made choice of Edmund Dorr of Lyme to be her Guardian," Nov. 16, 1733. (Prob. Rec. at New London.)
- 7 JOHN, "John Holthom made chise of his uncle John Comstock of Lyme to be his guardian," June 15, 1737. (Prob. Rec.)

5. Deacon Joseph² Holtum, probably youngest child of John and Sarah, was, according to the record on his gravestone at Hartford, born in Lyme in 1693, and was baptized in Hartford May 21, 1699. Left an orphan at an early age, he was brought up by Bevill Waters of Hartford, as appears from certain deeds* of land which he gave him in 1720 and 1726, "in consideration of the love and respect I have to Joseph Holtom of Hartford, whom I brought up from a child, he having faithfully behaved himself towards me ever since he has lived with me," adding to a similar expression in the second deed, "and for other good causes and reasons thereunto moving." He married in Hartford Mch. 20, 1717-18, ABIGAIL HASTINGS, who was, there is the best reason to suppose,* a daughter (birth not recorded), of Benjamin² Hastings of Hatfield and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Isaac Graves of Hatfield. The father of Benjamin Hastings was Thomas¹ Hastings, one of the settlers of Watertown, Mass., where he was Town Clerk, Representative, and Selectman, and deacon for 30 years; he married Margaret Cheney. Dr. Thomas Hastings, physician, of Hatfield, was another son of Thomas¹. Deacon Holtum's homestead, during the first years of his married life, was on the west side of the present road to Newington, under Cedar Mountain; this road was not cut through to Newington till long after his day, the order for making it requiring its completion before June 20, 1808, nearly 30 years after Deacon Holtum's death. (See Hist. of Newington, p. 124.) Here he lived within the bounds of Wethersfield, the north boundary of his farm being described as the dividing line between Wethersfield and Hartford. Piper's River ran through his land, which extended on the east to the ridge of Cedar Mountain. Some of his farm remained in the possession of his descendants for more than a hundred years, but it is not known that any one lived on it after his day. The buildings long since disappeared, leaving no sign that the land was ever the site of a dwelling, unless it be some vestiges of an orchard, of which a few old apple and pear trees on the east side of the road, have, till recently at least, marked the location. Though living comparatively near to Newington, which at the time of Dea. Holtum's marriage had just begun to be a parish distinct from Wethersfield (the church building, however, not finished till several years later), there was no public road thither, and all his neighbors and church associations were in the parish of the South Church in Hartford, four or five miles distant, which he attended, and where all his children were baptized. His daughters married into families in the Hartford Rocky Hill neighborhood, then and long after, forming an important part of the South Church parish; both he and his wife were buried in the old Burying Ground of the Center Church, where his gravestone stands in good preservation near the north wall. The records of the South Church are missing for a considerable period, during part of which Joseph Holtum must have been deacon, so that there is no means of knowing how long he held the office, or when he was elected. He was one of the selectmen of Hartford in 1743. His signature is to be seen often in the probate files as an appraiser and distributor of estates and witness of wills.

Joseph Holtum

* One of Benjamin Hastings' sons was Elder Joseph Hastings of Suffield, Conn., one of whose immediate descendants was Mr. Benjamin Hastings, many years tax-collector of Hartford. When the latter, in his yearly rounds, called upon Mrs. Jennet Boardman, granddaughter of Abigail (Hastings) Holtum, allusions were often made in their conversation, as was well remembered, to a relationship between them. A sister (Mehitabel) of Elizabeth Graves, first wife of Benjamin Hastings, m. William Worthington, and lived in Hartford as early as 1700, which may account for Abigail's living there after her mother's death.

Dea. Holtum was one of the proprietors of Harwinton in 1740. He did not, however, remove, but seems to have exchanged his rights there with Jacob Benton of Harwinton for the latter's Hartford homestead, as shown by a deed of Mch. 10, 1740-41. (Hfd. Rec.) This place, consisting of eight or nine acres with house and barn, was Dea. Holtum's home for the last thirty years of his life. It was on the east side of our present Washington street, south of where now is the Retreat for the Insane, and standing near the north end of the present Webster street, so named from Dea. Holtum's grandson, Samuel Webster, who afterwards owned and occupied the place. Near the close of the last century the house was moved by the Webster family to the west side of Washington street, where their descendants lived in it for many years, and where it still stands, in almost perfect preservation, owned and occupied by Mr. Caldwell Patterson. As the land on which it first stood was bought by Jacob Benton, its former owner, Apr. 3, 1723, and no house is mentioned as then standing on it, the dwelling is supposed to have been built by Mr. Benton soon after that time, making it now (1895) about 170 years old. The well originally belonging to it continued in existence to the present day near the house at the upper end of Webster street built by Mr. Fuller, who at that time found traces of the old foundations of the house.

The "wife of Joseph Holtom" was buried Oct. 28, 1753. (Sexton's Record of burials in Center Church Yard.) The inscription on his gravestone reads :

"In Memory of || Deacon Joseph || Holtom Former || ly of Lyme || who died Jan^r || ye^e 3d 1770 in ye || 77th year of || his age || ye Memory of || ye Just Shall be || Blessed." The footstone reads: "Deacon || Joseph || Holtom."

Children of Dea. Joseph and Abigail Holtum:

- 8 ABIGAIL, bapt. Jan. 18, 1718-19; d. Sept. 8, 1776, aged 57; unm.
- 9 SAMUEL, bapt. Oct. 18, 1721; buried Sept. 25, 1758. (Diary of Rev. Daniel Wadsworth.) He was probably named from his mother's brother, who was captured by the Indians in Hatfield, and never returned.
- 10 ELIZABETH, bapt. June 7, 1724; m. Nov. 10, 1748, Medad Webster; sons: Samuel and Joseph.
- 11 MARY, bapt. Sept. 15, 1728; m. Ebenezer Catlin; d. May 14, 1803, aged 75. (See No. 388.)

The following records were obtained too late for insertion in their proper place :

195. (p. 312.) Ephraim⁵ Boardman of Bristol, Conn., till 1796, removed, probably at that time, to Hillsdale, Columbia Co., N. Y., and thence, about 1810, to Maryland, Otsego Co., where he died July 24, 1813, in his 66th year. His wife was RHODA ANDREWS, daughter of Gideon and Abigail (Potter) Andrews, baptized in Southington, Conn., March 15, 1747. She died March 4, 1827, aged 80 years 21 days. Children, born probably in Bristol:

- 3100+ JOHN,⁶ b. 1770; m. Rachel ———.

 some perticuler person."

Note. According to the Charter of Connecticut there were two yearly General Courts, meeting in May and October, deputies to which were chosen by the freemen of the respective towns in April and September.
 Samuel Boreman thus appears to have been elected Deputy from Wethersfield for eighteen such terms; he is on record as present at thirty-four different sessions, and never reported absent.

The Court of Election in May was that where the freemen chose a Governor and Assistants (the latter corresponding to our present Senators) for the ensuing year, after which election the Deputies and Assistants proceeded with the legislative business.

*The committee here appointed went over the River and made numerous trials to reconcile the discrepancies in the recorded measurements and bounds, or to effect an adjustment of the bounds satisfactory to the several proprietors; but their labors not proving successful, at length, "finding their task too hard for them, they left it not finished."

Nathaniell Dickinson. Se

NOTE.—Abraham Elsen died at Wethersfield in 1648 leaving two daughters aged respectively 3 and 1½ years. Nathaniel Dickinson and Samuel Smith were appointed to take charge of the father's property and to provide for the children's portions when they should come of age. Sarah Elsen, one of the daughters, married James Ensign. Nathaniel Dickinson was Town Clerk of Wethersfield; removed to Hadley with Rev. John Russell in 1659.

*Original in possession of W. F. J. Boardman.

List of Revolutionary soldiers in a company from Wethersfield carried to New York in 1776, in the sloop Ann, built for Levi and Samuel Boardman in 1773. (See page 269.) This list was found among Merchant Samuel's papers, and is the only account of the Company known. The original is in possession of W. F. J. Boardman.
